Observations / Comments

The hour meter on the unit shows 33 hours, which may be inaccurate, or the hour meter may have been replaced. The sheet metal in the engine compartment has a marking indicating the unit was serviced at 3,188 hours, suggesting that the unit has that amount of hours or more. The rear counterweight paint is scratched. The sheet metal on the bottom of the basket is bent and dented. The decal on the control station of the unit appears to be cracking. The engine enclosure appears sun-faded, and the cover has small cracks on the top front where the bolts go through it. The operator manual holder in the basket appears to be held shut with a rope, indicating that the holder could be damaged. The information tag on the unit appears to be bent, with one corner lifted. The rear right tire has a gouge on the sidewall. The rear left tire tread lug appears to be torn. The rear left wheel motor appears oily and possibly starting to leak. The body lift cylinder appears oily and may be starting to leak. It was confirmed with Ricky, the operator, that the horn is operational.
