The Chamber Music Society presents the 34th annual Young Musicians Concert on Thursday, April 27, at 11:00 AM in Alice Tully Hall. The program, hosted by Bruce Adolphe will feature 12 talented high school ensembles from the Greater New York region, chosen by audition and rigorously coached by musicians of the Chamber Music Society. Each ensemble will perform a movement from a challenging masterwork of the repertoire. Among this year’s selections are works by Brahms, Schubert, Mendelssohn, and Prokofiev. Foremost in the experience is the thrill for these young artists of performing at Lincoln Center, cheered on by an audience comprised of their peers, teachers, family, and general audience members. The concert is free, but reservations are required.

Represented schools: This year’s winning ensembles are drawn from the following schools: The Bronx High School of Science, Scarsdale High School, Tenafly High School, Hunter College High School, Stuyvesant High...

About the Young Musicians Program
The Chamber Music Society’s Young Musicians program provides an opportunity for advanced high school instrumentalists to receive intensive coaching sessions with musicians from the Chamber Music Society, leading to a professionally produced performance at Alice Tully Hall. The ensembles, chosen by taped audition, are drawn from the Greater New York region school music programs. This year, over 100 students applied for participation from over 20 local schools.
