

Architects of Air's Daedalum

Outdoors in a field, a large gray inflatable structure is formed out of 19 egg-shaped domes. There are pops of blue, red, and green on the inflatable. The sky is bright blue with many white clouds and there are tall green trees behind the inflatable.

Daedalum (Day-da-loom) is formed out of 19 egg-shaped domes, twisting and turning into the tunnels of a maze. A luminarium is a sculpture people enter to be moved to a sense of wonder at the beauty of light and color.

It opens at 11am each day, and the last Fast Track entrance each day is at 5pm.

This installation takes place in Damrosch Park, located along West 62nd Street between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues.

Ticketing & Security Checkpoint:

The entrance to Daedalum is a tented structure with Security checkpoint. Evolv Weapons Detection machines may be in use. These are not metal detectors and you will not need to empty your pockets or remove your bags.

Guests are asked to take off shoes upon entry into Daedalum. If guests are unable to remove shoes due to disability, shoe coverings are available.

Service animals are welcomed and need to wear paw covers to enter the installation, as nails may puncture the installation.

Installation Experience:

Daedalum is a self-guided exploration of the inflatable luminarium. Most guests take about 20 minutes to go through the paths. Guests will be immersed in colorful domes. Daedalum's Tree is an adventurous assembly of intersecting volumes rising above the visitor with inspiring complexity. The Main Dome features an innovative indirect illumination that varies the color inside according to the dome's position and the sun's direction.

There is soft music playing inside the structure, reminiscent of whale songs. The installation is inflated with air, creating white noise.
