

SOUTH CAROLINA STOPS

GREENVILLE

The craft beer scene in the Carolinas is thriving, and Greenville is no exception. Thomas Creek Brewery, Blue Ridge Brewing Co., and Quest Brewing Co. are all worth a visit. Also, moonshining has deep roots in the Upstate and dates back to the 1800s. Greenville is home to South Carolina's first micro-whiskey and legal moonshine distillery. Learn more about the rich Appalachian heritage of moonshining at Dark Corner Distillery. Tour guests can also enjoy a sampling of their product, World's Best Moonshine.

If Dad's a baseball fan, consider a stop at the Shoeless Joe Jackson Museum and Baseball Library. Located in the house where Jackson lived and died, the museum highlights Jackson's life from textile worker as a child to legendary baseball player. His remarkable career is brought to life through photographs, books and artifacts.

Men and cars make a perfect combo – especially when said car is a BMW. Located 15 miles from Greenville, the BMW Manufacturing plant's museum (the Zentrum) is open to visitors and features guided tours. Dad can also experience the ultimate driving machine during one- and two-day classes in the facility's Performance Center.

Above: Shoeless Joe Jackson statue.

Right: Test driving BMW's in the dirt.

