An island-inspired twist on a classic Thanksgiving dinner with these views? Yes, please. Grand Wailea

The holiday season is many things—including harried. And if you'd rather just get out of Dodge and let someone else baste the turkey and peel potatoes this year, we are the last ones to hold it against you.

Read on for a few ways to give thanks to travel—and someone else cooking—this Thanksgiving with deals on stays and some fun turkey meals on tap everywhere from Hawaii and Florida to Rhode Island and St. Maarten.

Ocean House

Talk about pouring on the atmosphere on Thanksgiving Day. The iconic Ocean House in Rhode Island hosts a four-course Thanksgiving Dinner or buffet options ($175 person or $125 person, respectively) in the property's triple-5-star Relais & Chateaux surrounds (translation: dress up).

On the menu for the four-course meal? Think duck confit and specialty New England dishes. The buffet skews more gourmet-yet-classic Turkey Day, if that's the kind of comfort you're craving, with all the trimmings and traditional desserts.

Weekapaug Inn

For something slightly (only slightly though) more casual near the coast in Rhode Island, Weekapaug Inn in Westerly is offering a family-style Thanksgiving dinner for $85 per person ($37 for kids 4-12, free for kids three and under) that you can opt to do with a wine pairing for $50 per person extra. If you tie in the wine, you might want to splurge on a room for the night, too, to properly indulge.
