

Prime Minister: It's time for national leadership on youth justice

Dear Prime Minister Turnbull,

Today the Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory will hand down its interim report. To date, the public hearings of the Royal Commission have revealed countless stories of systemic cruel, inhumane and degrading mistreatment of children, the vast majority being Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children.

The issue of over-incarceration of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people remains a national crisis. Nationally, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people are 25 times more likely to be sent to youth detention than their non-Indigenous counterparts, yet they make up just 5% of the national youth population.

The abuse and mistreatment of youth detainees is not just isolated to the Northern Territory, but has occurred in other detention centres across Australia. In the past six months we have heard damning reports, highlighting shocking allegations of abuse in Queensland youth detention facilities, the disturbing use of isolation, separation and lock downs of children in Victoria's youth detention centres and similarly awful reports from Cobham Youth Detention Centre in Sydney. A recent report by the Commissioner for Children and Young People in Victoria found that Koori kids were disproportionately subject to isolation whilst in detention.

This is a national crisis, which demands an immediate national response.

Just last year a Vote Compass survey found that two-thirds of Australians want our federal government to commit to reducing the rates of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people being imprisoned.

Our kids don't belong in prison. Instead we should be supporting young people at risk to maximise their chances of achieving their full potential and making a meaningful contribution to society.

We, the undersigned, call on you and your government to work in partnership with the States and Territories to immediately take action to improve Australia's youth justice system and end the over-representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people in detention.

We urge you to play a leadership role and work in partnership with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, their organisations and representative bodies to:

- Set meaningful National Justice Targets through the Council of Australian Governments (COAG) 'Closing the Gap' framework;
- Develop, through COAG, a fully resourced national plan of action on youth justice, drawing on the recommendations of the Change the Record Coalition's Blueprint for Change;
- Invest in effective community-led early intervention, prevention and diversion programs, to ensure detention of children is a last resort; and
- Design and implement a national preventative mechanism against torture and mistreatment in detention as soon as possible, in line with your Government's commitment to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention Against Torture (OPCAT).

Yours Sincerely,
