American Conservatory Theater is a Tony Award–winning theater and educational institution dedicated to cultivating the art of live theater through our dynamic productions, intensive actor training in our Conservatory, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Tony and Obie award–winning Artistic Director Pam MacKinnon and Executive Director Jennifer Bielstein, we embrace our responsibility to refresh, renew, and reinvent the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and communities. Since opening our first San Francisco season in 1967, A.C.T. has presented more than 400 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. Today, A.C.T.’s performance, education, and outreach programs reach almost 250,000 people in the Bay Area each year.

A.C.T.’s Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is a three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program consistently rated as one of America’s top actor-training programs. Our Summer Training Congress attracts students from around the world, the San Francisco Semester offers a unique, immersive training opportunity for undergraduates, and Studio A.C.T. helps adults get in touch with their inner artist through part-time, professional-caliber classes. Our alumni are working theater-makers, writing, directing, producing, and performing on our mainstage and around the Bay Area, as well as on stages and screens nationwide.

A key part of A.C.T.’s dedication to lifelong learning is our Education & Community Programs team, led by Juan Manzo. These programs include our Young Conservatory (students ages 8–19), our Fellowship Program for emerging theater professionals, and our ACTsmart school and community programs, featuring the Student Matinee (SMAT) program, our touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residences, and workshops at schools and community-based organizations. Every year, these programs provide nearly 20,000 young people and educators from around the Bay Area with opportunities to experience the transformative potential of dramatic storytelling; develop creativity, critical thinking, and collaborative spirit; and foster the artists and audiences of the future.

Now in their second season at the helm, Pam MacKinnon and Jennifer Bielstein continue their commitment to the development of new work and new artists and the creation of an equitable, diverse, and inclusive environment for our employees, students, audiences, and artists. Through this commitment, we aim to impact lives, build community, and train artists who will secure and change the future of theater for San Francisco and the world.

THIS IS YOUR THEATER!
WELCOME TO A.C.T.
I am thrilled to direct a world premiere at my still new artistic home and at our Strand Theater. When I asked colleagues to send me their favorite unproduced plays, the wonderfully generous Adam Greenfield at Playwrights Horizons sent me a stack, which included Testmatch, a cricket play for six actors—big and about a sport I did not understand (yet). I read it, loved it, and picked up the phone. We reached out to Kate Attwell, a Yale School of Drama grad living in London. In a lovely and substantive conversation, Kate and I talked about the play, her childhood in South Africa, the discussions of “truth and reconciliation” after Apartheid, and her recent revelation that women cricketers looked like armored knights. Associate Artistic Director Andy Chan Donald saw a New York workshop of the play and confirmed my excitement. We decided to produce it.

While in London directing another world premiere (by long-term friend Bruce Norris), I met Kate for tea. Turns out we’d met before when she doing dramaturgical research for our mutual friend, playwright Craig Lucas. As we prepared for a workshop of Testmatch at A.C.T., we started a collaboration, building trust.

The workshop went well. I learned how the heightened style of the “play within the play” contrasts with the realism of the conclusion, how fast the play moves, why the world has to change to explore the question, “Why are we stuck?” It was with Testmatch that this season’s theme—“Rules of Play”—landed. Starting from the foundation of Top Girls, our stories throughout the year would explore the idea of rules to establish, question, and break.

I am so excited for Kate’s bright future career, but more excited to be with her for its launch and for the Bay Area to experience what she has to give. She is a world maker, a student of history and humanity, a provocateur . . . a real-deal playwright. And A.C.T. is here for her and this great play.

 Hello Friends, and Welcome to A.C.T.’s Strand Theater!
I love theater because our art form is about collaboration—the artists, creative team, and production staff all come together to create the work you see onstage. There are numerous staff working behind the scenes and in support of the production. You, the audience members, become part of the story, and night after night each performance is a brand new experience depending on the very people in the room.

Additionally, A.C.T. is proud to collaborate through partnerships with local organizations. Did you know that for each show, the first preview is Bike to the Theater Night, hosted in collaboration with San Francisco Bicycle Coalition? They’ll park and watch your bike during the show, and as a thank you for taking a greener form of transportation, we’ll give you a free preshow drink.

Our Education & Community Programs team partners with organizations such as Larkin Street Youth Services and Downtown High School, providing theater resources to young people who wouldn’t necessarily be exposed to theater otherwise. We’re so honored to be able to share the arts throughout our Bay Area community.

For the first time, we’re working with Dress for Success San Francisco, a global nonprofit that empowers women to achieve economic independence by providing a network of support, professional attire, and the development tools to thrive in work and life. At our season opener, Top Girls, Dress for Success volunteers were on site with some fun activities around career building. And during Testmatch, A.C.T. is hosting a handbag drive to add to Dress for Success’s inventory. Dress for Success will be back with A.C.T. for Toni Stone in March, as we celebrate International Women’s Day.

All our work requires teamwork. There’s a great exchange about this in Testmatch as two players talk about strategy. “You can’t do it alone,” says one of the cricketers, “Everyone has to be there, everyone has to buy in.” Replace “cricket” with theater, and you have a perfect description of A.C.T.

Thank you for coming. Enjoy the show!

What do cricket uniforms + professional clothing have in common?

Both put the finishing touches on the training and skills built up over time to help women thrive in (and on) their fields.

Dress for Success San Francisco is celebrating 15 years of helping women in the Bay Area achieve self-defined success, from providing unemployed and underemployed women professional clothing for interviews to facilitating access to a network of support and guidance.

A.C.T. and Dress for Success are partnering for Drinks & Drama Fridays during Testmatch at the Strand on October 25 and Toni Stone at the Geary on March 6. Join us for an evening of drinks, pop-up food, and low-priced performance tickets. Fun, mission-driven activities at Drinks & Drama Fridays will include anything from career networking to donation drives.

HISTORIES PAST AND PRESENT

A CONVERSATION WITH PLAYWRIGHT KATE ATTWELL

BY PAM MACKINNON
As soon as I read the script for a new play titled Testmatch, I fell in love with the writing of its playwright, Kate Attwell. Though a new voice for Bay Area audiences, Attwell has produced and developed work at The Public Theater, Playwrights Horizons, and New York Theatre Workshop.

Over several phone calls (and a cup of tea in a wintry London this past February), we began to work together on producing the world premiere of Testmatch at A.C.T. During a weeklong workshop in April, the play took shape as we deepened our collaboration. “I felt super excited watching the way you worked with the actors,” says Attwell, “allowing them to feel and swim around within the words and find their way.” As we prepared for rehearsals, I thought it would be interesting to share glimpses of that journey.

What was in your head while you were writing Testmatch?

Having lived in South Africa as a child, I have been observing the conversation about race in America over the last few years with interest, particularly the relationship between race, history, and systems of power. I grew up during the Truth and Reconciliation Commission [a restorative justice process in the 1990s following the end of the system of segregation known as Apartheid], which was a difficult, traumatic, and yet exciting time—an entire community investigating and understanding the atrocities of the past in deeply personal ways. That experience made me understand that feelings are political.

In America, when the Black Lives Matter movement started and the conversation around race and power returned to public attention, the legacy of slavery was discussed in a way that felt long overdue. I wrote this play in America and I wrote it with an American audience in mind—to speak about past and present histories, gender, and racism.

Why cricket, and especially women’s cricket, as a lens for this story?

Cricket is tied to the conversation about empire and that dynamic calls to me. There’s no other sport that has the same DNA. Soccer is played all over the world, but it’s more democratic. Cricket has ended up in this weird realm in which it’s only the British and all of its formerly colonized nations who play it. Cricket is also a particularly complicated sport. There’s a trickiness to it—a nice parallel with politics.

For me, the play is looking through the sport to the connection between various kinds of (largely male) desires to own and control both land and bodies. That applies, in very different ways, to gender and to race. I played cricket until I was nine years old, when I got ushered into “girls’ sports.” While I was writing Testmatch, I was really excited to see the Women’s T20 World Cup. There were women wearing the cricket uniform—they looked fierce, powerful, strong. That felt visually exciting as a place to start.

That visual image is one of many extraordinary theatrical elements in Testmatch: the way actors take on other guises to tell the story in different ways; the oversized British accents; the Memsaib character that echoes Ophelia [in Hamlet]; the clash of contemporary and classical language.

I am always drawn to theater that acknowledges its falseness. There’s a long history of that, starting with the Greeks and how they used the chorus as a built-in audience. I’m also interested in the political nature of theatricality—when the play trips you up and says, “Remember, this is a false construct and not concrete.”

In the two-part structure of Testmatch, you’re asking Strand audiences to acknowledge that structure and then the possibility of breaking it.

Exactly, and that’s where the metaphor of sport comes in. We’re told what the rules are, so we follow those rules. But what are the really big rules at play that we need to dismantle? I hope people who experience Testmatch will walk away feeling there is so much we need to unearth to move forward. There’s this big, tangled knot in our collective brains, and we’re in this place as a society because we haven’t done the untangling. What does the past mean for the present and the future? I want people to have to sit with that feeling.

Other stage management credits are A Thousand Splendid Suns (Seattle Repertory Theatre), the Bard Music Festival (Bard SummerScape), and Urinetown: The Musical (American Theatre of Actors). She completed a stage management fellowship at A.C.T. Bae has a BFA in stage management from Syracuse University. (she/her)

LINDA JO FITZ (Executive Producer) currently serves as A.C.T.’s treasurer on the Board of Trustees. She recently retired from Aspiriant, the wealth management firm which she co-founded in 1992. There she worked with high-net-worth families to help them define, plan for, and achieve their financial objectives. Fitz served for nearly 20 years on the board of directors of San Francisco Heritage where she was board president, and more recently she chaired the board of directors of San Francisco Bay Area Planning and Urban Research Association. Her passion for the environment and good planning lead also to the NRDC and Greenbelt Alliance, where she received a Championship Award in 2017. In 2011, she was named one of the Top 50 Women in Business by Wealth Management magazine. As an avid theater-goer, she began subscribing to A.C.T. over 40 years ago when she moved to San Francisco.

THE EDGERTON FOUNDATION NEW PLAYS PROGRAM is directed by Brad and Louise Edgerton. It was piloted in 2006 with Center Theatre Group in Los Angeles when it offered two musicals in development an extended rehearsal period for the entire creative team, including the playwrights. The Edgertons launched the program nationally in 2007, and to date, it has supported 421 plays at more than 50 different art theaters across the country, totaling $12,898,000 in grants. The Edgerton Foundation received the 2011 Theatre Communications Group National Funder Award. tcg.org/edgertonfoundation/newplayawards.aspx

The MFA Season
What do 1890s sexual oppression, literary superpowers, and patriotism have in common? This season, A.C.T.’s Master of Fine Arts Program delivers classical and fantastical productions. Immerse yourself in fin-de-siècle Germany in November with the second-years in Spring Awakening: The Play. “With conversations about teenagers coming into their sexuality and questioning what is good and bad,” says Associate Producer Ken Savage, “the play feels incredibly timely.”

Catch the third-years this winter in A.C.T.’s seasonal favorite A Christmas Carol. The third-years are onstage again in February for Passage by Christopher Chen, a Bay Area Obie Award–winning playwright. “It’s a fantastical examination of colonialism and xenophobia,” says Savage, “and it’s in conversation with Testmatch. Passage looks at what our relationship is to race and class and what patriotism means.”

A crucial part of the second-years’ citizen artist training is the March performance of Romeo and Juliet for the Will on Wheels Tour. Mobile and adaptive, Will on Wheels is designed for classroom performances to engage the community in Shakespeare and the arts. On the heels of Romeo and Juliet, the second-years will dive into a Shakespeare-themed production for Rough Magic by Roberto Aguirre-Sacasa. Rough Magic is about a dramaturg who conjures Shakespeare’s characters to thwart The Tempest’s Caliban and save New York from inclement weather. “Stylistically, it falls between Rocky Horror and Poor Yella Rednecks,” says Savage. “It’s in conversation with those two A.C.T. mainstage shows that have surreal, comic book elements.”

“This is an eclectic season,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith, “where students will experience German expressionism, magical realism, fantasy, and Shakespearean tragedy. We challenge MFA actors to grasp how each genre requires a specific acting style, or how each work has particular rules of play. By hopping from one genre to another, our actors become more flexible and transformative.”
The YC Season
Rapid and immediate, lyrical and musical, the Young Conservatory productions run the gamut. “I want to look at the whole season from the perspective of a young person and see what range of aesthetic styles they can be exposed to,” says Director of the Young Conservatory Jill MacLean. “I want YC actors to reflect on A.C.T.’s new House Rules of Play and consider, ‘What are my own rules of play?’ I want them to give themselves permission to explore as young artists.”

For the Student One-Minute Play Festival, YC students went on an artistic writing retreat to produce the plays, and will put them on in October with direction from local working artists. “There’s an immediacy and a relevance to the content of the plays,” says MacLean. “Because the students are writing the material, they’re invested in it, it’s their own.”

Next up in April is Anon(ymous) by Naomi Iizuka, an entrancing adaptation of Homer’s Odyssey in which a young refugee called Anon journeys through the United States after being separated from his mother. “This production will allow students to dig into more poetic text and stretch those lyric muscles,” MacLean says. In November, March, April, and May, high school and middle school students will hone their musical theater artistry in the YC’s renowned cabaret program. Performances will include Broadway’s Golden Age, Miscast, Singer’s Choice, and Best of the Best.

Summer 2020 brings to fruition The Code, a collaborative work between A.C.T. and commissioned artists the Kilbanes, an indie rock band that creates experimental musical theatrical experiences. Written for a diverse young cast, The Code follows present-day boarding school students who unravel a hundred-year-old mystery. The Code first hooked audiences at A.C.T.’s New Strands Festival in 2019, so be sure to experience it for yourself this summer.
A.C.T. Artistic Director Pam MacKinnon has been working with contemporary playwrights and new works since the beginning of her career. She has 25 years of freelance experience spanning Broadway, off Broadway, nationally, and internationally, but when she first moved to New York, MacKinnon had only a few directing credits under her belt. There she quickly became involved with Clubbed Thumb, then a new downtown theater company, and directed seven of its first nine productions, working side-by-side with playwrights as they developed their plays and their voices. This season at A.C.T., MacKinnon breaks ground with the world premiere of Kate Attwell’s Testmatch and the West Coast premiere of Lydia R. Diamond’s Toni Stone.
You started out working with Clubbed Thumb and now serve on its advisory board. Why are you drawn to collaborate with playwrights on new work?

Clubbed Thumb keeps me current. It’s a purposefully small company with big reach and great taste. Artists playing with form, 21st-century playwrights; it was foundational, and important to my thinking about what a play is, what a play can do. I never studied theater formally, so this was my school. I love the revolutionary act of making a story together, mining the intent of a writer, helping to give voice and muscle to words on a page, inviting an audience into something new.

You’ve worked with emerging playwrights and their new works. You’ve also received a Tony Award for your direction of a revival of Edward Albee’s Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? and an Obie Award for the world premiere of Bruce Norris’s Clybourne Park. Does your directing process change when working on new work versus extant, even famous, work?

It’s about mining the intent of the original storyteller. I tend to work with plays that are written on the page and are there to be unlocked. Every rehearsal process is different, as the constellation of artists is different. As director, I am the proxy for the audience, so we gather—writer, actors, designers, and I—to figure out how to convey the spine of the story. How best to get that across. With a new play, certainly, the playwright can rewrite as late as opening night, but hopefully it’s akin to how a conversation with my lighting designer about a lighting cue change can better reveal a moment. What is the story? How do we best tell it for today? Those questions are the same for stories new or old, unknown or established. Why now for this story?

Testmatch audiences will see A.C.T.’s new “House Rules of Play” in their programs. How do you hope audiences engage with shows this season?

I think sometimes audiences can get nervous about missing things, or nervous because, if you haven’t seen play after play, our theater spaces can be intimidating. There’s an assumption that there are right and wrong ways to respond to stories. That there are unwritten rules to follow. We decided this season to write down some basic rules of engagement, to wrestle with them and say, “Oh, right! Right! Laughter is good!” Let’s step into a room and allow big laughter. Or nervous laughter. Laughter can mean many things. So, we want to say to audience members, “You don’t have to know what’s going on until the story unfolds in front of you. Relax your shoulders. Please know that we’ve built this story with you in mind. You don’t have to prep for it, unless you want to. You don’t have to do anything except just be present.” I want to get back to, or start to create, a community with each performance. We come into these rooms together and respond to stories in our own ways while being respectful of each other’s responses. Let’s get away from policing and back to enjoying that we are together in this.

What conversations are you interested in sparking this season?

The season’s theme, “rules of play,” is a lens through which to watch all the plays. I am curious what that means for each person, and hopeful that the audience will feel compelled to see more than one play, maybe take in the whole season, in order to talk about deep structures that are social, political, and artistic and to recognize that rules are artificially and intentionally created and can be transformed. ■
Bringing a world premiere to life requires time, talent, theatrical alchemy, and, on special occasions, an Edgerton Foundation New Play Award. A.C.T. received Edgerton Awards—which fund one invaluable extra week of rehearsal—for A Thousand Splendid Suns in 2017 and, most recently, for Kate Attwell’s Testmatch. We sat down with Brad Edgerton to learn more about the foundation he set up with his wife Louise.

What’s the thinking behind the Edgerton Foundation’s funding for additional rehearsal time for new works?

Most theaters budget the same rehearsal time for a revival and a world premiere. A play that has never been staged before is more likely to benefit from extra rehearsal time—that additional week will help producers polish the play and increase the chances of future productions. All too often, world premieres are produced once and then forgotten. The Edgerton Foundation New Play Awards are designed to help excellent plays get even better initial productions, so that those plays will be produced subsequently at other theaters.

How does a new play, such as Testmatch, win an Edgerton Foundation Award?

Our awards are given following a strong nationwide competition and solely on the quality of the script. The reading process is “blind,” which means our experienced readers never know the name of the playwright or the theater. We really liked Testmatch. We applaud the enthusiasm for new work that Pam MacKinnon has brought to A.C.T.

What drives your interest in new work for the American theater?

If regional theaters only stage established, popular plays, the art form will die. New work needs to be created—and produced—to keep the art alive. Too many plays are workshopped to death and never produced.

What have you learned from producing new works?

In the 13 years that we’ve supported Edgerton Foundation New Play Awards, we’ve learned that some of the best new plays originate in London, so we’ve expanded our pool of theaters to include several in the United Kingdom. We’ve also learned that the failure rate is still quite high for world premieres being subsequently produced. Despite that, we’ve had 36 new plays move on to Broadway—including In the Next Room (or The Vibrator Play) and Hamilton—and many others become widely popular across the country. We’ve been impressed and gratified to observe a golden age of playwriting in the UK and United States. The future is bright.

If you’re interested in learning more about how you can support new works at A.C.T., please contact A.C.T.’s Director of Development Caitlin A. Quinn at cquinn@act-sf.org or 415.439.2436.
Just as the cast and creative team of Top Girls explore the world of women in business onstage, A.C.T. is building connections offstage with companies across the Bay Area. Launched last year, our Business Leadership Council helps corporate and business organizations partner with A.C.T.

“For corporate firms large and small,” says Business Leadership Council Co-Chair Nancy Livingston, “teaming up with A.C.T. provides an innovative way to build a sense of community among their employees. Immediate benefits include access to discounted tickets for productions at A.C.T.’s Strand and Geary theaters, as well as competitive rental rates at A.C.T. venues.”

The bigger picture, however, is about backing the arts in San Francisco and committing to the region. Businesses that support A.C.T. are not only sustaining theater arts education for 20,000 Bay Area students every year, but also investing in the future by developing empathy and creativity in thousands of young people who will become the entrepreneurs, audiences, and theater-makers of tomorrow. Along the way, businesses benefit from A.C.T.’s robust set of branding and promotional assets, unique hospitality opportunities, and exclusive creative experiences.

Where the members of the Business Leadership Council really make a difference is in forging connections between A.C.T.’s leadership and their own corporate contacts. “It’s one of the most effective ways for council members to help,” says Livingston. “When you have a group which has the inside track, it gives our team a foot in the door.”

For the determined Livingston, chair emerita of A.C.T.’s Board of Trustees, the Business Leadership Council is the latest step in three decades of board leadership. “I get immense satisfaction from taking people and matching them with their dreams,” she says. “Everyone loves to help people. And at A.C.T., we offer business partners a way to help that they may never have thought possible.”

The key to connecting potential partners with A.C.T. is getting them as close to theater as possible. “You’ve got to touch the art,” she says. “When you meet an actor, feel the fabric of a costume, or take a backstage tour, it’s transformative.”

If you want to learn about how your company can partner with A.C.T. or how you can become a member of our Business Leadership Council, please contact Caitlin A. Quinn at cquinn@act-sf.org or 415.439.2436.

Theatre Forward advances the American theater and its communities by providing funding and other resources to the country’s leading nonprofit theatres. Theatre Forward and its theaters are most grateful to the following funders:
MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two- to a three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.’s artistic wing, while also teaching and directing in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. In 2013, she launched the San Francisco Semester, a semester-long intensive that deepens students’ acting. In 2016, she was honored by Theatre Bay Area as one of 40 individuals who have changed the face of Bay Area theater. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of the Program in Theater and Dance at Princeton University. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages in various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University’s La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition. Also a professional actor, she has performed regionally at the Hangar Theatre, A.C.T., the California Shakespeare Festival, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre; in New York at Primary Stages and Soho Rep.; and in England at the Barbican Centre in London and Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Smith holds a BA from Yale College and an MFA in acting from Yale School of Drama. (she/her)

JENNIFER BIELSTEIN (Executive Director) joined A.C.T. in 2018 with more than 25 years of theater management experience. She serves on the board of Theatre Forward, is a member of the International Women’s Forum, and is president of the League of Resident Theatres (LORT)—an organization that represents 75 theaters nationwide—having previously served as LORT’s vice president; chair of its Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion Committee; secretary; and on multiple union negotiating teams. Before relocating to the Bay Area, Bielstein was the managing director of the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, managing director of Actors Theatre of Louisville, and executive director of Writers Theatre in Chicago. She has also worked for Steppenwolf Theatre Company, About Face Theatre, Northlight Theatre, and Lincoln Park Zoo, as well as served on the boards of the League of Chicago Theatres, the Arts and Cultural Attractions Council, and other civic boards. She has received the Center for Nonprofit Excellence’s Pyramid Award of Excellence in Leadership, has been recognized in Louisville’s Business First’s 40 Under 40, and was named by Twin Cities Business as a Person to Know and a Real Power 50 member by Minnesota Business magazine. Bielstein is a graduate of University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, attended Stanford’s Graduate School of Business Executive Program for Nonprofit Leaders in the Arts, and earned an MBA from Bellarmine University, where she received the MBA Faculty Merit Award and was inducted into Beta Gamma Sigma, the honor society for business programs. (she/her)

PAM MACKINNON (Artistic Director) is celebrating her second season as A.C.T.’s fourth artistic director. She is a Tony, Drama Desk, and Obie award–winning director, having directed upwards of 70 productions around the country, off-Broadway, and on Broadway. Her Broadway credits include Beau Willimon’s The Parisian Woman (with Uma Thurman), Amelie: A New Musical, David Mamet’s China Doll (with Al Pacino), Wendy Wasserstein’s The Heidi Chronicles (with Elisabeth Moss), Edward Albee’s A Delicate Balance (with Glenn Close and John Lithgow), Edward Albee’s Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (Tony Award, Drama Desk Award, and Outer Critics Circle nomination), and Bruce Norris’s Clybourne Park (Obie Award, Tony and Lucille Lortel nominations). Her most recent credits include Bruce Norris’s Downstate (Steppenwolf Theatre Company, London’s National Theatre), Lydia R. Diamond’s Toni Stone (Roundabout Theatre Company), and Edward Albee’s Seascape (A.C.T.). She is an artistic associate of the Roundabout Theatre Company, an advisory board member of Clubbed Thumb, and an alumna of the Drama League, Women’s Project, and Lincoln Center Theater’s Directors’ Labs. She is also the executive board president of the Stage Directors and Choreographers Society (SDC). She grew up in Toronto, Canada, and Buffalo, New York, acted through her teens, but majored in economics and political science at the University of Toronto and briefly pursued a PhD in political science at UC San Diego, before returning to her true passion: theater. (she/her)

Visit our website for hours of operation

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION DISCOUNTS
Seniors (65+) save $40 on 8 plays, $35 on 7 plays, $30 on 6 plays, $25 on 5 plays, and $20 on 4 plays. Full-time students, educators, and administrators save up to 50% off season subscriptions with valid ID. Visit act-sf.org/educate for details.

SINGLE TICKET DISCOUNTS
Joining our eClub is the best—and sometimes only—way to find out about special ticket offers. Visit act-sf.org/eclub for details. Find us on Facebook and Twitter for other great deals. Beginning two hours before curtain, a limited number of discounted tickets are available to seniors (65+), educators, administrators, and full-time students. For matinee performances, all seats are just $20 for seniors (65+). Valid ID required—limit one ticket per ID. Not valid for Premiere Orchestra seating. All rush tickets are subject to availability.

GROUP DISCOUNTS
Groups of 15 or more save up to 50%! For more information call Anthony Miller at 415.439.2424.

AT THE THEATER
A.C.T.'s Strand Theater is located at 1127 Market Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The theater opens 30 minutes before curtain.

REFRESHMENTS
Strand Cafe hours are Thursday–Tuesday (8 a.m.–4 p.m.) and Wednesday (7 a.m.–noon) for the general public. Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available to patrons one hour before performances. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages. Bar drinks are now permitted in the theater.

CELL PHONES
If you carry a pager, beeper, cell phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

PERFUMES
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented aftershave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

EMERGENCY TELEPHONE
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2397 in an emergency.

LATECOMERS
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

LISTENING SYSTEMS
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performances. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

AFFILIATIONS
A.C.T. is a constituent of Theatre Communications Group, the national organization for the nonprofit professional theater. A.C.T. is a member of Theatre Bay Area, the Union Square Partnership, the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, and the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau.

A.C.T. operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.

The Director is a member of the STAGE DIRECTORS AND CHOREOGRAPHERS SOCIETY, a national theatrical labor union.

RESTROOMS
are located on the basement level; on the ground floor (two ADA toilets behind the box office); and toward the back of the upper orchestra, on mezzanine 2. Gender diversity is welcome at A.C.T. We invite audiences to use the restroom that best fits your gender identity. If preferred, single-user restrooms can be found at the rear of the lobby.

Wheelchair Seating is located at the main cross aisle on the orchestra level, at Box A on the orchestra level, and in the mezzanine.

An Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is available in the Strand box office.

LOST AND FOUND
If you’ve misplaced an item while you’re still at the theater, please look for it at our merchandise stand in the lobby. Any items found by ushers will be taken there. If you’ve left the theater, please call 415.439.2471 and we’ll be happy to check our lost and found for you. Please be prepared with the date you attended the performance and your seat location.
