American Conservatory Theater was founded in 1965 by William Ball, a pioneer of the regional theater movement. A.C.T. opened in San Francisco in 1967. We have since performed more than 400 productions to more than seven million people.

Hailed as the “perfect playhouse,” the beautiful Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped the roof apart, San Franciscans raised a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild the theater. The Geary reopened in 1996 with The Tempest, directed by Carey Perloff, who took over as A.C.T.’s third artistic director in 1992 after the retirement of Edward Hastings.

Perloff’s tenure was marked by translations of classical works; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and theater made by, for, and about the Bay Area. Exploring powerful stories by celebrated artists and introducing audiences to extraordinary emerging voices in American theater continues under A.C.T.’s current artistic director, Pam MacKinnon.

A.C.T.’s 50-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program is at the forefront of America’s actor training programs. Our Summer Training Congress attracts students from around the world, while the San Francisco Semester offers a unique study-abroad opportunity for undergraduates. Other programs include Studio A.C.T.—our expansive course of theater study for adults—and the Professional Development Training Program, which offers actor training for companies seeking to elevate employees’ business performance skills. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as on stages and screens nationwide.

A.C.T. brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 20,000 Bay Area students and educators each year. Among our Education & Community Programs are the Young Conservatory (students ages 8–19), our Fellowship Program for emerging theater professionals, and our ACTsmart school and community programs, including the Student Matinee (SMAT) program that has brought hundreds of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With the appointments of Artistic Director Pam MacKinnon and Executive Director Jennifer Bielstein, our continuing commitment to the development of new work and new artists, and our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood with The Strand and The Costume Shop theaters, A.C.T. plays a leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

TOP GIRLS

THE GEARY THEATER
Pope Joan, who disguised herself as a man to attain the papacy. Lady Nijo, an imperial courtesan-turned-nun. Dull Gret, who spearheaded a conquest through hell. Patient Griselda, the obedient wife in Chaucer’s Canterbury Tales. Isabella Bird, a spirited 19th-century world traveler. These five legendary women toast Marlene, the director of Top Girls employment agency—who has just earned a promotion over a man.

In 1980s London, Marlene is all about finding opportunities for clients to advance. But what if the client lacks experience? What if she has a husband? Or worse, a child? These driven women must grapple with the cruel choices they’re forced to make to thrive in a capitalist society.

Under the direction of Tamilla Woodard, the keen wit of this Obie Award-winning play is sure to resonate in The Geary. A finalist for the Susan Smith Blackburn Prize, Top Girls is a feminist classic, a timeless and timely work of genius from one of Britain’s greatest living playwrights.

WHAT’S AS MUCH FUN AS SEEING PEOPLE TURN INTO RHINOCEROSES ON THE A.C.T. STAGE?

Seeing real-life rhinoceroses at the San Francisco Zoo & Gardens! The Zoo is celebrating its 90th anniversary this year, and is proud to commemorate nine decades of fulfilling its mission to connect people with wildlife, inspire caring for nature, and advance conservation action.

Rhinos have been an integral part of the Zoo since Stonewall, an Eastern Black Rhino, arrived in 1956. Thirty-four rhinos have called the Zoo home since then, and today, you can see 24-year-old, 6,000-pound Asian one-horned rhino Gauhati play with his massive soccer ball or 11-year-old African black rhino Boone enjoy his daily enrichment treats.

Enjoy Rhinoceros at A.C.T.’s SF Zoo Day on June 9, and stop by our lobby display to learn why rhino skin folds into “plates,” why poachers hunt them under the mistaken belief that rhino horns have medical powers, and what you can do to help save this magnificent and highly endangered animal. Then come to the Zoo and see our real-life ambassador rhinos for yourself!

FROM THE ARTISTIC AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

Welcome to A.C.T. and Ionesco’s Rhinoceros!

At A.C.T., we always try to put our plays into a context that not only goes through time, but is also immediate, local, and about the Bay Area. Preparing for The Great Leap involved the actors and artistic team spending a Saturday morning in the bleachers at the Chinese New Year basketball jamboree at Betty Ong Rec Center. And for Rhinoceros, after learning of the rhino in residence in the city, it meant a trip to the San Francisco Zoo & Gardens.

The short version of our marketing department’s field trip to the Sunset was “We went to the zoo and met a rhino”—a little break from emails and meetings. But the reality was thrilling. Everyone got the opportunity to hand-feed Gauhati, a greater one-horned rhinoceros (aka Indian rhinoceros) weighing in at an estimated 6,000 pounds—it’s hard to know exactly, as you don’t ask a rhino how much it weighs, and the zoo doesn’t own scales large enough.

Some of our brave team gave Gauhati a stroke or a scratch. To some, his hard skin felt like bark, to others like a truck tire. His hide has several shades—originally, we discovered, his color was battleship gray, but because he rolls in the dirt, there are shades of tan and brown. Our A.C.T. crew also spotted (as in Ionesco’s play) a few green patches where Gauhati had debrided his hide—rubbed away or softened his callouses—against a wall painted green, with the paint now shared between wall and rhino.

Although this is a 24-year-old rhinoceros in an enclosure—not stampeding through a street or in a hole in the Geary Theater’s stage—I ask you to imagine, just as many of you did when confronted with Edward Albee’s talking lizards in Seascape. Edward certainly was influenced by and caught the contagion of Ionesco’s brand of surrealism.

All theater is a “What if?” suspension of disbelief. Here we go! Let Frank Galati and this amazing cast take you into a world at once recognizable and not. Like a trip to the zoo.

Enjoy Rhinoceros!

Pam MacKinnon, Artistic Director

Dear Friends,

It’s been a great season, full of thought-provoking and entertaining theater. Sweat time-traveled between 2000 and 2008 to show us a community under pressure. Men on Boats took us down the Grand Canyon on a rip-roaring adventure. We remounted A Christmas Carol to sold-out family audiences. In Edward Albee’s Seascape, we met two couples—human and lizard—on the edge of transition. This spring we presented Her Portmanteau and The Great Leap—stories of mothers and daughters, fathers and sons, and the collision of culture and generations. And last month, we presented Vanity Fair, about a young woman fighting for a seat at the table. Now we share the mastery of Ionesco, Galati, and this incredible company with you.

While we are looking forward to being together again for Top Girls in September, there is so much going on at A.C.T. this summer. There is our Summer Training Congress—an immersive, intensive program for serious adult actors—and our Young Conservatory (YC) for young people aged 8–19. Between these two programs, our studios are flooded with nearly 500 additional participants! Some YC actors will also be rehearsing Into the Woods, coming to The Strand August 8–17. Director (and A.C.T. associate producer) Ken Savage’s concept places the show in a library during story time, using young actors (ages 8–10) as narrators.

Finally, as our school year wraps up, we’re sending our M.F.A. Program class of 2019 out into the world. It’s a tenet of A.C.T.’s mission that our actor-training programs should create citizen artists—individuals who share a passion for theater, an entrepreneurial spirit, and a deep commitment to society. This class has shown how deeply they care for each other and how fiercely committed they are to making the world a better place, and we couldn’t be more proud of them.

Jennifer Bielstein, Executive Director

French Romanian playwright Eugène Ionesco (1909–94) stumbled upon playwriting by accident. While teaching himself English, he was struck by the stiff simplicity of the textbook’s sample dialogue. A woman informs her husband that the floor is below them and the ceiling is above them, that there are seven days in a week—true statements, but explanations no one would need in real life.

In his first play, The Bald Soprano (1950), characters begin with lines pulled directly from this textbook, but their language disintegrates into clichés and non sequiturs, then incomplete sentences, and eventually mere syllables. Ionesco believed that if audiences saw their habitual patterns of conversation demonstrated and then dismantled onstage, they’d be compelled to consider the absurdity of their own existence—partly why he is credited with inspiring the genre of Theater of the Absurd.

Critics were baffled by the play’s disregard of traditional plot structure; there was no cause-and-effect progression, no conflict arcing to a climax and falling to a satisfying resolution. “But when audiences found it very funny, critics decided it must be serious theater,” said Ionesco. In 1957, The Bald Soprano was remounted alongside Ionesco’s second play, The Lesson (1951), at Théâtre de la Huchette in Paris, where the double bill is still running today. More than twenty thousand performances later, over two million audience members have enjoyed the resonance of this record-breaking Le Spectacle Ionesco.

Ionesco sought to demonstrate that “the unusual can spring only from the dullest and most ordinary daily routine and from our everyday prose, when pursued beyond their limits.” He did so not only through onstage aural chaos, but also through spatial clutter, using scenic elements to represent his characters’ inner lives. In The Chairs (1952), a couple drags more and more chairs onstage to accommodate a growing crowd of invisible guests. Coffee cups multiply in Victims of Duty (1953), a corpse swells until it overtakes the stage in Amédée, or How to Get Rid of It (1954), and in The New Tenant (1955), movers help a man fill his new apartment with so much furniture that they’re barricaded from the doors. In many of Ionesco’s works, objects take up the space that words cannot.

Ionesco repeated not only techniques, but also a character. Berenger, the protagonist of Rhinoceros (1959), appears in three other Ionesco plays: The Killer (1959), Exit the King (1962), and A Stroll in the Air (1965). In each, Berenger stubbornly refuses to conform to society, but finds himself questioning whether resistance is the best choice. Berenger is an everyman character, someone who tries to form his own opinions without falling prey to popular politics—especially fascism, which Ionesco found detestable.

Having lived through both world wars, Ionesco witnessed tremendous shifts in political ideologies, the spread of deep-seated hate, and the murder of millions. The playwright blamed the rise of Nazism on “professional intellectuals” such as professors, writers, and philosophers who, he argued, weren’t intellectuals at all because they didn’t truly think; they merely regurgitated predominant systems of thought. Recognizing that Rhinoceros was an attack on them, theater critics were unkind, but audiences loved it. Rhinoceros was the first of Ionesco’s works to be produced in America, and it is now held alongside The Bald Soprano (playing at Cutting Ball Theater June 5–16) as one of the best of his 28 plays.

Like many postwar writers and thinkers, Ionesco’s experiences made it difficult to believe in human goodness or to see sense in living. For Ionesco, the realization that life is purposeless warrants two possible responses: anguish or euphoria. We can allow ourselves to be overcome by a sense of emptiness, or we can feel relieved of the pressure to create meaning, instead marveling at the universe, however absurd it may be. “What possible reaction is there left,” said Ionesco, “when everything has ceased to matter, but to laugh at it all?”

RESEARCH AND RHINOS

AN INTERVIEW WITH DIRECTOR FRANK GALATI

BY SIMON HODGSON

Frank Galati is one of America’s great storytellers, with a 60-year career as a writer, actor, director, and theater administrator. His career has spanned stints at Steppenwolf Theatre Company and the Goodman Theater, university teaching (he has taught at Northwestern University for 40 years), and Broadway smashes—including the Tony Award-winning shows Ragtime and The Grapes of Wrath. Now based in Sarasota, Florida, he is an associate artist with Asolo Repertory Theatre, where he directed Rhinoceros.

As Galati prepared to return to The Geary for the first time since his production of the musical 1776, we sat down with him to learn more about Eugène Ionesco’s classic.

Are you the kind of director who likes to do a lot of research?

I was an academic and professor for many years. So I do love to research. For Rhinoceros, the biographical route about Ionesco is available, but it’s a little murky. Ionesco’s own private journal, letters, and memoirs are much more illuminating; those I have really studied, so I know the biographical context in which he lived and worked.

How about the history?

The historical background is humongous. We’re talking about a young Romanian playwright, philosopher, thinker, and essayist who is exploring French language and culture and playwriting—all against the backdrop of the encroaching shadow of fascism and [German leader Adolf] Hitler. In his essays, Ionesco writes about how he and his girlfriend had a circle of friends in Romania and France in the 1930s who became Nazis one by one. He couldn’t believe that intellectual men and women—smart people that he loved and admired—acquiesced. That they kept their mouths shut, they went along, they were complicit, they were criminal. Observing that terror moving through communities like a contagion was the kernel of the idea that led to Rhinoceros.

How does Rhinoceros resonate in our own time?

Like Berenger, the audience is negotiating between individuality and an absurd, frightening, and surreal threat. It’s about propaganda and what propaganda does to create enclaves of power. I want to be careful, because it isn’t useful to say that this is a critique of our present situation in this country. The play does not take sides—it revels in ambiguity and irony. Logic is whiplashed back and forth with such alacrity that you’re dizzy. In the last scene, Daisy says, “People are changing into rhinoceroses. My cousin is a rhinoceros. Even celebrities, like Brigitte Bardot.” You can’t frame the paradigm as: Here are the red hats, and there are the blue hats. It’s not that simple. The goal is to balance those elements in giving equal weight to both sides and achieving a gradual awareness on the part of the audience.

Of all the animals that Ionesco might have chosen, why rhinos?

With Edward Albee’s Seascape and the lizards, it’s a season of mud-loving creatures at A.C.T. [Chuckles] I suppose Ionesco chose the rhinoceroses because it’s an absolutely strange, odd animal. Who knows what cunning lies behind those big eyes? They’re armored, they’re grotesque, they’re fascinating. In the cast, we’ve done some research—African and Asian rhinos, two horns, one horn—and we’ve all become obsessed.

What do you remember about working in The Geary Theater with 1776?

A theater is like a guitar or a Stradivarius violin. Actors have to learn to play those instruments. Each house is different, each instrument is different. But there’s no doubt that a theater’s physical properties—the dimensions, the sightlines, the angle of the auditorium to the stage, the wood and the stone, the seats, even the lighting before the play starts—all of this contributes to how a theater holds the story. Many years ago, when I was in college at Northwestern, my roommate was actor Ray Burke, who was at A.C.T. when [A.C.T.’s first artistic director] Bill Ball was here. I’ve seen shows here since 1968. So I’m very much looking forward to getting back in that golden circle. It’s round, it’s golden, and it hums. Directing in The Geary is like playing a Stradivarius.
Surrounded by other creative and ambitious actors, you’ll hone your skills speaking and physicalizing classical texts through this 2-week Shakespeare Intensive taught by some of the best theater artists in the business.

Immerse yourself in the eclectic San Francisco community for 15 weeks of internationally recognized professional actor training. You’ll expand your understanding of theater as you define yourself as an artist.

Through this rigorous three-year training program with world-renowned professionals, you’ll not only study and perform your craft, but also grow as a citizen artist committed to engaging your community through socially aware and transformative theater.

The actors and stage managers employed in this production are members of Actors’ Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.
From their earliest memories of growing up in Chicago, theater was part of life for Toni Ratner Miller and her brother Joe Ratner. “My parents really loved musical theater,” says Miller. “There were always Broadway show soundtracks playing in our house . . . West Side Story, Damn Yankees.” “And don’t forget Kismet and Kiss Me, Kate!” adds Ratner.

A.C.T. is a major part of both Miller and Ratner’s lives, with involvement spanning monthly visits to The Geary and The Strand, attendance at galas and special events, subscriptions to Words on Plays, participation in A.C.T. theater tours, and executive-producing A.C.T. shows including The Realistic Joneses (2016), A Walk on the Moon (2018), and Her Portmanteau (2019).

More recently, brother and sister have joined our M.F.A. Program Board of Trustees. “The Conservatory has made a big difference in the lives of many people,” says Ratner. One of Miller’s favorite parts of being a trustee is hosting an M.F.A. actor. “When you see these students in their first-year creative movement project, you see their potential,” she says, “and as you continue to watch, it’s wonderful to see them grow. You realize how much they learn over three years. They’re all so talented!”

Miller and Ratner have extended their love of theater to their own children. Ratner’s middle daughter, Ellie, takes classes in the Young Conservatory, while Miller’s daughter Justine studied acting and ballet as a child. She’s now a reporter for News 12 in New York, where she joined her mom and dad, Donald, to see a show during A.C.T.’s Broadway theater tour in 2018. And to add one more generation, Justine and Ellie’s grandmother, Joyce, is an enthusiastic attendee at A.C.T. events, including our education fundraiser A Dickens of a Holiday last December (“She was thrilled,” says Ratner).

For all the Ratners, theater is critical. “There are a lot of thought-provoking things in theater, about the human condition, about our society, about other cultures represented in performances,” says Ratner. “There’s a lot you can learn.” Equally, Miller points to the value in A.C.T.’s theater arts education in schools. “That’s really important,” she says, “because it opens up new worlds for these students. It shows them what they can do. It can change their lives.”

A.C.T. TODAY

BREATHE, TRUST, LEAP

FOSTERING THE NEXT GENERATION OF TEACHING ARTISTS

BY ELSPETH SWEATMAN

At the beginning of A.C.T.’s school year, Conservatory Director Melissa Smith tells each new Master of Fine Arts class, “At A.C.T., we don’t just develop the artist; we develop the human being.” And that training begins immediately, through classes in movement and voice, productions large and small, and teaching artist apprenticeships in A.C.T.’s Young Conservatory and Education & Community Programs summer residencies. After three years, every student leaves with the tools to be powerful artists, storytellers, teachers, advocates, and individuals.

A vital part of A.C.T.’s teaching artist training is the Citizen Artist program, where students learn about cultural competency, pedagogy, and using their skills to collaborate with diverse communities and effect social change. In the first two years of the M.F.A. Program, students visit a Downtown High School class for three hours a semester to hone these skills. “Teaching makes me a better artist and a better human,” says M.F.A.

Program actor Kim Hollkamp (class of 2020). “It helps me hone my craft and connect with other artists, regardless of age. I intend to be an actor and teaching artist for my entire career.”

“A.C.T.’s Citizen Artist training prepares us to look beyond what we perceive to be normal. It helps us to question our privilege and reflect on how to be aware of that privilege when working with artists from all sorts of backgrounds,” says M.F.A. actor LeRoy S. Graham III (class of 2020). “It is important to understand how to enter a room and work with a person who may be carrying around some sort of trauma. Citizen Artist training helps prepare us for that. It has helped me become more comfortable in my approach to tackling sensitive topics in a number of different settings.”

Many students continue to develop their teaching artist skills over the summer by teaching in Young Conservatory and high school residency programs. “In my first summer teaching for A.C.T.’s Education & Community Programs, we had a Boys & Girls Club student who would come to class and never say a word,” says third-year actor Caleb Lewis (class of 2019). “Slowly, she came out of her shell, joining the theater games and participating more and more. After our penultimate class, the director of the arts programs said, ‘I’m absolutely amazed. I’ve never seen her talk so much.’ To see someone transform, open up, and let more of her light shine because of theater was amazing.”

Graham had a similar experience working with students from Downtown High School. “I was working with a student on monologues that she and her classmates had created on the theme of war. The first time she did the monologue, it lacked a bit of energy, but once we started to dig into the circumstances of her character, she started to own the monologue. Her voice started to fill the room. It was a great moment to see a student work to achieve a goal.”

“A.C.T.’s Citizen Artist program showed me that if you put faith in people and trust that they will bring themselves completely to the work, then it will be spectacular,” says M.F.A. alum Alexa Erbach (class of 2017), who is currently an actor and teaching artist in Chicago. “Working with SAFEhouse Arts and La Colectiva de Mujeres were some of my most beautiful experiences at A.C.T. They showed me that if you believe in other people, they’re going to believe in themselves.”

A.C.T. Profiles

Melissa Smith (Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two- to a three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.’s artistic wing, while also teaching and directing in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. In 2013, she launched the San Francisco Semester, a semester-long intensive that deepens students’ acting. In 2016, she was honored by Theatre Bay Area as one of 40 individuals who have changed the face of Bay Area theater. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of the Program in Theater and Dance at Princeton University. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages in various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University’s La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition.

Jennifer Bielstein (Executive Director) joins A.C.T. with more than 25 years of theater management experience. She serves on the board of Theatre Forward and is president of the League of Resident Theatres (LORT)—an organization that represents 75 theaters nationwide—having previously served as LORT’s vice president; chair of its Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion Committee; secretary; and on multiple union negotiating teams. Before relocating to the Bay Area, Bielstein was the managing director of the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, managing director of Actors Theatre of Louisville, and executive director of Writers Theatre in Chicago. She has also worked for Steppenwolf Theatre Company, About Face Theatre, Northlight Theatre, and Lincoln Park Zoo, and served on the boards of the League of Chicago Theatres, the Arts and Cultural Attractions Council, and other civic boards. She has received the Center for Nonprofit Excellence’s Pyramid Award of Excellence in Leadership, and has been recognized in Louisville’s Business First’s 40 Under 40. In 2017, Bielstein was named by Twin Cities Business as a Person to Know, and, in 2018, Minnesota Business magazine named her as a Real Power 50 member. Bielstein is a graduate of University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, attended Stanford’s Graduate School of Business Executive Program for Nonprofit Leaders in the Arts, and earned an MBA from Bellarmine University, where she received the MBA Faculty Merit Award and was inducted into Beta Gamma Sigma, the honor society for business programs.

Pam Mackinnon (Artistic Director) is celebrating her inaugural season as A.C.T.’s fourth artistic director. She is a Tony, Drama Desk, and Obie Award–winning director, having directed upwards of 70 productions around the country, off-Broadway, and on Broadway. Her Broadway credits include Beau Willimon’s The Parisian Woman (with Uma Thurman), Amelie: A New Musical, David Mamet’s China Doll (with Al Pacino), Wendy Wasserstein’s The Heidi Chronicles (with Elisabeth Moss), Edward Albee’s A Delicate Balance (with Glenn Close and John Lithgow), Edward Albee’s Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (Tony Award, Drama Desk Award, and Outer Critics Circle nomination), and Bruce Norris’s Clybourne Park (Obie Award for Excellence in Direction, Tony and Lucille Lortel nominations). After five years as board chair of Clubbed Thumb, a downtown New York theater company dedicated to new American plays, she sits on its advisory board. She is an artistic associate of the Roundabout Theatre Company, a Usual Suspect of New York Theatre Workshop, and an alumna of the Drama League, Women’s Project, and Lincoln Center Theatre’s Directors’ Labs. She is also the executive board president of the Stage Directors and Choreographers Society (SDC). She grew up in Toronto, Canada, and Buffalo, New York, acted through her teens, but majored in economics and political science at the University of Toronto and briefly pursued a PhD in political science at UC San Diego, before returning to her true passion: theater.

AT THE THEATER
A.C.T.’s Geary Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The theater opens 30 minutes before curtain.

ABOUT OUR PLAYS
Copies of Words on Plays, A.C.T.’s in-depth performance guide, are on sale in the main lobby, at the theater bars, at the box office, and online at act-sf.org/wordsonplays.

REFRESHMENTS
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the theater.

CELL PHONES
If you carry a pager, beeper, cell phone, or watch with an alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

PERFUMES
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented aftershave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

EMERGENCY TELEPHONE

LATECOMERS
Performances begin promptly, and late seating is at the house manager’s discretion. Latecomers may have to watch the performance on a video monitor in the lobby until intermission. Latecomers and those who leave the theater during the performance may be seated in alternate seats (especially if they were in the first few rows) and can take their assigned seats at intermission.

LISTENING SYSTEMS
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performances. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.
