“City National helps keep my financial life in tune.”

So much of my life is always shifting; a different city, a different piece of music, a different ensemble. I need people who I can count on to help keep my financial life on course so I can focus on creating and sharing the “adventures” of classical music. City National shares my passion and is instrumental in helping me bring classical music to audiences all over the world. They enjoy being a part of what I do and love. That is the essence of a successful relationship.

City National is The way up® for me.

American Conservatory Theater was founded in 1965 by William Ball.
Edward Hastings, Artistic Director 1986-92

American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco’s Tony Award-winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our relationship to the rich theatrical literature and traditions that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of our creative work. Founded by pioneer of the regional theater movement William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. Since then, we’ve performed more than 350 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. We reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs every year.

Rising from the rubble of the catastrophic earthquake and fires of 1906 and immediately hailed as the “perfect playhouse,” the beautiful, historic Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped a gaping hole in the ceiling, destroying the proscenium arch and dumping tons of debris on the first six rows of orchestra seats, the San Francisco community rallied to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild it. The theater reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over after A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings, retired in 1992.

Perloff’s 23-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and “locavore” theater—theater made by, for, and about the San Francisco area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

A.C.T.’s 46-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, and our intensive Summer Training Congress attracts enthusiasts from around the world. Other programs include the world-famous Young Conservatory for students ages 8 to 19, led by 25-year veteran Craig Slaight, and Studio A.C.T., our expansive course of study for adults. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as stages and screens across the country.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 10,000 Bay Area school students each year. Central to our ACTsmart education programs, run by Director of Education & Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen, is the longstanding Student Matinee (SMAT) program, which has brought hundreds of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and in-depth study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the opening of The Costume Shop theater, the renovation of The Strand Theater across from UN Plaza, and the launch of our mobile Stage Coach initiative, A.C.T. is poised to continue its leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.
A uniquely San Francisco Nutcracker.

Dear Friends,

Big openhearted holiday greetings to every one of you! Whether you’re here for the first time or because A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol is an indispensable part of your annual solstice celebration, we’re thrilled and honored to have you with us.

This version of Dickens’s beautiful story, which Paul Walsh and I created ten seasons ago, grew out of the very depths of A.C.T.’s being. We are, uniquely, an intergenerational theater in which children and adults, professionals and students, masters and emerging artists train, create, and play together on a regular basis. Because we house one of the most renowned M.F.A. programs in America, and because we are blessed with the truly one-of-a-kind Young Conservatory (YC), in which students ages 8–19 study and perform and grow, we made sure that A.C.T.’s Carol would feature an extraordinary range of artists of all ages, collaborating on this exquisite tale of redemption and transformation.

This year, our Carol is, as always, blessed by the presence of some of the Bay Area’s most beloved actors—including James Carpenter and Anthony Fusco (our inimitable Scrooges), Ken Ruta, Sharon Lockwood, Nicholas Pelczar, Cindy Goldfield, and many more. It also features 29 children from our YC and the entire M.F.A. Program class of 2016. This is an incredible gift: a chance for the larger A.C.T. family to work together and for you, our Carol audience, to see the breadth of A.C.T.’s commitment to artists of all ages. So from our family to yours, welcome! By supporting A Christmas Carol, you are also supporting our scholarship fund for young people who want to make theater part of their lives, and for that we are deeply grateful.

Paul Walsh and I wanted this Carol to salute the power of the imagination to transform even the crustiest of souls. Dickens’s novella is exceptionally theatrical: much of it is written in dialogue, and it centers around the striking presence of four ghosts who perform a series of “interventions” on Scrooge until his heart is reawakened and he begins his life anew. Now more than ever, the themes of Dickens’s story of greed and renewal resonate, as we continue to wrestle with ever more pervasive income inequality and struggle to hold onto our empathy and imagination in an increasingly divided world.

It is worth remembering that Dickens trusted the artistic imagination to lift us out of the darkness and set us on a more inspiring path. It is also worth noting, for those of you who are here with children, that it has been proved again and again that when young people are exposed to the transformative power of live theater, their scholastic work and worldview open up in wonderful and surprising ways. With each passing year, A.C.T. becomes more and more deeply engaged in arts education for young people throughout the Bay Area, and A Christmas Carol is often the first experience that Bay Area children have of live theater. (To find out more, please contact our Education & Community Programs Department at education@act-sf.org.) In the 23 years I have been at A.C.T., Dickens’s incredible story has been a remarkable constant, and a way for us to come together to reassess, to celebrate, to imagine.

We hope you feel that you’ve given yourselves a gift by being here, and we wish you a fulfilling and empathetic year ahead. I invite you to return this winter and spring to experience the artists and artistry of A.C.T.’s extraordinary 2015–16 season, both here at The Geary and at our new theater, The Strand, where great adventures await you.

Best,

Carey Perloff

When Charles Dickens was 12 years old, his father’s tenuous hold on the middle class collapsed in a heap of mounting debt. John Dickens was incarcerated in the Marshalsea debtors’ prison, where he was joined a few weeks later by his wife and four of their six children. Charles was put to work in a Thames warehouse that manufactured bootblackings. The boy found himself alone in a world without comfort or security, living in a rundown rooming house in Camden Town. At night he played on coal barges or wandered the streets. So began his lifelong acquaintance with the meanest quarters and poorest people of London.
Although Charles’s time in the warehouse lasted at most five months, the sudden descent into the desperate world of London’s poor left a lifelong mark. Beginning at 15, he held a series of jobs that kept him in close contact with that world. The first, as an office boy in a law firm, introduced him to the workings of the legal system and its effects on the middle class and the poor. He saw how this system might work for people on occasion; more often it benefited the lawyers, who never seemed to lack clients. His opinion of the law did not improve when he became a court reporter at an obscure institution, the Consistory Court of Doctors’ Commons. At 20, he became a journalist, covering Parliament. He observed the operation of a government controlled by aristocrats, industrialists, and wealthy merchants that blocked every attempt to aid the poor.

This boy is Ignorance. This girl is Want. Beware of them both, and all their kind, but most of all beware this boy, for on his brow is written “Doom.”

Charles Dickens, A Christmas Carol

Once Dickens saw the legal system at work, it did not take him long to find his true vocation. By the time he took a seat in the Visitors’ Gallery of the Houses of Parliament, he was turning the scenes he had witnessed in the law offices and courts into fiction. Two years later he was famous, thanks to a collection of short pieces called Sketches by Boz. One of these described a visit to the Court of Doctors’ Commons, where a “hard-featured old man” with a “deeply wrinkled face,” whose every look and gesture “told of wealth, and penury, and avarice,” was busily planning to rob a poor man of a long-awaited inheritance.

By 1840, only about 20 percent of London’s children had any schooling. Education for all children regardless of class became another issue about which Dickens developed passionate feelings. He founded and edited two weekly newspapers in which he wrote about the need for universal education, sanitation laws, labor laws, and prison reform.

As potent as his journalism was, it was his fiction that made Dickens famous, and where he created the images that caused the world to take notice. In Oliver Twist, he attacked the workhouse system. In Nicholas Nickleby, he exposed the exploitation of children by ruthless schoolmasters more interested in profit than education. The Marshalsea became the primary setting and symbol of Little Dorrit, and John Dickens the model for William Dorrit.

In A Christmas Carol, Dickens created an image of children who lived without hope, food, or education. The Ghost of Christmas Present shows Scrooge two desperate, starving children. He tells Scrooge, “This boy is Ignorance. This girl is Want. Beware of them both, and all their kind, but most of all beware this boy, for on his brow is written ‘Doom.’” Dickens came to believe that the privileges and priorities of the wealthy men who controlled Parliament would obstruct all attempts to solve the national problems of poverty, poor working conditions, and substandard education. This only made his vision of British society more uncompromising. His work evolved from melodramas of good characters beset by evil ones to complex tapestries of good people victimized by a system of corruption.

Through 15 novels, the work of his imagination was an attempt to understand a world in which debtors’ prisons and workhouses could exist. Through a public spirit forged from private pain, he found a purpose for his life, giving voice to those whom society ignored. The journey of Charles Dickens’s life was from concern for self to dedication to others—just as it is for Ebenezer Scrooge.
In the 1800s, a strange and spooky fad took the Western world by storm: talking to ghosts. Mediums were in high demand as people organized séances to contact the dead. The craze, known as spiritualism, stemmed from a few different sources. It came from improvements in communication technology—if you could send near-immediate telegraphs to your cousin several hundred miles away, perhaps it wasn't such a stretch to imagine you could contact your mother from beyond the grave. It came from an increase in the hiring of household staff; seen but never heard, a servant's presence may have seemed rather ghostly to those living there. And it may have even been related to hallucinations brought on by carbon monoxide coming from the gas lamps popular at the time.

The upshot of all this was “a progressive internalization of horror,” according to Dr. Andrew Smith, author of The Ghost Story 1840–1920. This proved to be irresistible psychology for many nineteenth-century Western authors, and thanks to the rise of the periodical press, spooky stories flourished. Of course, there had always been spirits throughout the history of English literature, but their primary function had been to further the plot—take, for example, the ghost of the titular character’s father in Shakespeare’s Hamlet. Now the specters had a new purpose: terrify the reader.

The ghost stories of Sheridan Le Fanu, like Green Tea (1869), had credible settings, which made the phantoms that appeared all the more realistic and therefore frightening. Henry James’s tales explored the psychological, internal aspects of horror in stories like The Turn of the Screw (1898). M. R. James’s scary stories relied on realistic settings and were written as though they were factual accounts, such as “Canon Alberic’s Scrap-Book” (1895). Thanks to the innovations of these authors and many others, the Victorian era was when ghost stories truly came into their own.

In Victorian England, ghost stories were especially popular around Christmastime. These yuletide tales of specters and spirits tended to take on a less spooky tone, however—the intention wasn’t necessarily to scare. Instead, says Tara Moore in Victorian Christmas in Print, “Supernatural agents enter the narrative to alter reality and . . . bring about a Christmas utopia of reunion and spiritual redemption.” Charles Dickens’s A Christmas Carol was one of the most famous of these yuletide ghost stories, and while the spirits in it can be frightening, they are carefully constructed to convince Ebenezer Scrooge to change his miserly ways.

For his part, Dickens tended toward scientific explanations of “supernatural” events and blamed them on “a disordered condition of the nerves or senses.” But he maintained a measure of agnosticism, writing to a friend, “Don’t suppose I am so bold and arrogant as to settle what can and what cannot be, after death.” He also joined the London Ghost Club, where he participated in several séances. He remained unconvinced of their legitimacy, believing that alcohol may have played more of a role than anything truly supernatural: “The seer had a vision,” he said, “which nothing but spirits could account for, and from which nothing but soda-water, or time, is likely to have recovered him.”

“. . . ‘THE STRANGE HUMAN CRAVING FOR THE pleasure of feeling afraid KEEPS US COMING BACK . . .”

This notion—that the senses are easily affected by explainable physical circumstances—comes through in A Christmas Carol. After Scrooge questions the reality of the first ghost, the spirit asks him why he doesn’t trust his senses. Scrooge responds, “Because . . . a little thing affects them. A slight disorder of the stomach makes them cheats. You may be an undigested bit of beef, a blot of mustard, a crumb of cheese, a fragment of an underdone potato. There’s more of gravy than of grave about you, whatever you are!”

But Dickens knew that, no matter how much scientific reasoning one could muster, the vision of a ghost was still very real—and sometimes terrifying—to those who truly believed they saw one. The monsters might come from within our own psychology, but that does not necessarily mean we have the power to make the spirits go away. Scrooge certainly does not, which he realizes as the four ghosts force him to witness painful events from his past, present, and future. The inescapability of the ghosts serves to make the story that much more frightening, and, 172 years later, that which Virginia Woolf calls “the strange human craving for the pleasure of feeling afraid” keeps us coming back to A Christmas Carol again and again.

ARTHUR WISE is a third-year student in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. Past Conservatory productions include Crazy for the Country (Sabina), The Cherry Orchard (Pishchik), A Midsummer Night’s Dream (Bottom), Our Lady of 121st Street (Father Lux), and Kalos Kai Agathos (Sphinx). He also performed in the North American tour of My Fair Lady and regionally in White Christmas at the Arkansas Repertory Theatre; Amadeus at Northern Stage; Guys and Dolls at Great Lakes Theater; The Odd Couple at Porthouse Theatre; Hair and Kiss Me, Kate at Cain Park; and numerous new musical theater workshops and concerts in New York City. Wise received his bachelor of music from the Music Theatre Program at Baldwin Wallace University’s Conservatory of Music.

CHARLES DICKENS was born February 7, 1812, in Portsmouth, England. His literary success began in 1836 with the publication of Sketches by Boz, a collection of urban scenes, and The Pickwick Papers, a series of comic narratives written to accompany artistic engravings. These were followed by Oliver Twist (1837–39), Nicholas Nickleby (1839), Barnaby Rudge (1841), Martin Chuzzlewit (1844), A Christmas Carol (1843), and David Copperfield (1850). Alongside dramatic plot twists and lively depictions of London street life, the most memorable aspect of his work was a gallery of larger-than-life characters, whose foibles and adventures... immediately endeared them to millions of readers. His work, primarily published first in serial format, was easily adapted for the stage and appeared frequently at playhouses throughout England (always without the permission of the author, who did, however, have a great love of the theater and at one point in his life even intended to be an actor). In the 1850s Dickens’s marriage to Catherine Hogarth dissolved, and his work began to tackle darker themes and more fully criticize industrial society. The novels of this period include Bleak House (1853), Hard Times (1854), Little Dorrit (1857), A Tale of Two Cities (1859), and Great Expectations (1860). He wrote 15 novels, and all remain in print. An exhausting series of reading tours late in life led to a decline in Dickens’s health, and he died in 1870 working on the unfinished manuscript of The Mystery of Edwin Drood.

PAUL WALSH (Co-adaptor) is professor of dramaturgy and dramatic criticism at Yale School of Drama. For nine years (1996–2005), he was dramaturg and director of humanities at A.C.T., where his translations of Henrik Ibsen’s A Doll’s House (2004) and Hedda Gabler (2007) were produced. His new translations of August Strindberg’s five Chamber Plays were produced at San Francisco’s Cutting Ball Theater and have been published by EXIT Press. Walsh has worked as a dramaturg, translator, and coauthor with theater companies across the country, including the Tony Award–winning Theatre de la Jeune Lune, with whom he collaborated on such notable productions as Children of Paradise: Shooting a Dream, Don Juan Giovanni, and The Hunchback of Notre Dame. Walsh received his PhD from the Graduate Centre for the Study of Drama at the University of Toronto.

KARL LUNDEBERG (Composer), a CBS/Sony recording artist, has recorded four albums with his jazz/world-music group, Full Circle. He has performed extensively throughout the United States, Canada, Scandinavia, continental Europe, Japan, and Brazil. His contemporary classical music compositions have been performed by a variety of orchestras, including the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sinfa Nova, and the Swedish Radio Symphony Orchestra, and have been featured at the prestigious Mitsui, Perugia, Venice Biennale, Teatro Español, Next Wave, Castle Hill, and San Sebastián festivals. Theater and ballet music includes scores for the American Repertory Theatre, Brooklyn Academy of Music, Seattle Repertory Theatre, Center Stage in Baltimore, Arizona Theatre Company, Pan Asian Repertory Theatre, the Kennedy Center Theater, South Coast Repertory, the Mark Taper Forum (composer-in-residence, 1996–2001), and the Ahmanson Theatre. Lozano also translated The Caucasian Chalk Circle, which premiered at A.C.T. in 2010. Lozano is an associate artist with California Shakespeare Theatre, where she has performed in more than 20 productions.

ALEJANDRA ZAVALA IS A FOURTH-GRADER AT TENDERLOIN Community School. A student in A.C.T.’s after-school residency at the Tenderloin Boys & Girls Club, she has taken theater classes with A.C.T. Community Artistic Director Tyrone Davis for the past two years. This month, she makes her professional debut at The Geary Theater in A Christmas Carol.

Nine-year-old Zavala has appeared in two plays directed by Davis at the Boys & Girls Club—Sleeping Beauty and The Wizard of Oz. Davis relates that she was a late entry, but everyone in the class gets a role, so he cast her in the ensemble for Sleeping Beauty. In the next class, one girl had dropped out, but Zavala knew her lines. In fact, she knew everyone’s lines. And so the late addition ended up playing the lead, Maleficent.

Now the talented youngster is preparing for the role of Precious Wilkins in A Christmas Carol, her first mainstage appearance. “When the call came letting us know, I was nervous. My name is Zavala, so it was the last name called. As soon as we heard it, we started screaming. Right now I feel nervous, but also excited. I didn’t think I could do it. But Tyrone said, ‘Yes, you can do it.’ I’ve only told my teachers and my best friend. I didn’t really tell anybody else, because I thought that would be bragging.”

Zavala got into acting after watching her brother David perform. “I really look up to my brother,” she says. “He’s 13. When he was little, he played the lead in Shrek. I saw it and thought, ‘Wow, I would like to be a star like that one day.’ After that I started singing and dancing around the living room.”

A.C.T. has offered Zavala a scholarship to attend our Young Conservatory, which gives her access to advanced theater training and participation as Precious in A Christmas Carol. “It gets me to be a better actress,” she says. “I think I need to work on my acting skills.” What in particular? She grins: “Being a sad person. There are characters—they’re angry, they’re selfish, they’re jealous. And the characters I play are happy. It’s hard to balance being angry and sad with being happy. Whenever I try to be mad, when I’m acting, they’re like, ‘You’re just faking!’”

The fourth-grader may be preparing for the stage this season, but the fan of TV’s Dog with a Blog already has her eye on the small screen. “I want to be an actress in a TV series. When you do a movie, yes, it’s great, but it doesn’t last long. But when I do a TV show, I don’t have to worry about looking for another thing to do.”

Zavala’s journey is an adventurous one, from rehearsing in a Tenderloin community center to performing at The Geary Theater. She is one of 10,000 students in the community who experience theater every year thanks to A.C.T.’s Education & Community Programs. Support from our donors enables children from all over the Bay Area to take their own dramatic journeys. That’s not just Precious, it’s priceless.
Frank Ottiwell was A.C.T. through and through. The longtime Master of Fine Arts Program faculty member, who passed away on August 20, 2015, at the age of 86, first joined the teaching staff back in 1965 when the company was founded in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. When A.C.T. moved to San Francisco, he was part of the migration, and he went on to teach the Alexander technique to students of the Advanced Training Program (which later became the M.F.A. Program) until his retirement in 2011.

Ottiwell, a scene-stealing actor in his own right, appeared in many A.C.T. productions and played the Ghost of Christmas Past in A Christmas Carol for two decades. He leaves behind a legacy of commitment to acting and teaching, having worked with thousands of young actors at A.C.T. “When I think of Frank,” says actor Patrick Russell (M.F.A. Program class of 2009), “I see his welcoming smile, a lightness and ease of presence, and an empathic and nurturing look in his eyes that could lift this timid acting student out of self-doubt and fear.”

The Montreal-born artist also trained more than 300 teachers in the Alexander technique. “He called himself a ‘one trick pony,’” says Kari Prindl, who trained with Ottiwell and now teaches the Alexander technique in the M.F.A. Program, “but that one trick was brand new every time. He could see right to the essence of a situation, speak the truth—usually with a twinkle in his eye—and open up the situation into multiple possibilities. Right up until the end, he continued to work on himself with clarity and curiosity. His brilliance will be greatly missed.”

“I see his welcoming smile, a lightness and ease of presence, and an empathic and nurturing look in his eyes that could lift this timid acting student out of self-doubt and fear.”

Young Conservatory Students Turn Practice into Performance

BY | CECILIA PADILLA

It’s a rare occasion that A.C.T. audiences find actors of all experience levels performing on one stage. This holiday season, A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol features a unique combination of professional actors, students in our Master of Fine Arts Program, and 29 young actors enrolled in our Young Conservatory (YC). Together, they bring Charles Dickens’s holiday classic to the Bay Area.

For students who have just discovered the thrill of live theater, figuring out how to dive in can seem overwhelming—but they can look to the young actors in A Christmas Carol for examples of the many ways to discover the world of acting with the YC. For example, Maximilian Wix, a fourth-grader at Presidio Hill School in San Francisco, came to A.C.T. last summer for our Junior Acting Intensive, and now he’s making his theater debut.

Cassidy Hurabiell Trader has been performing as an actor, singer, and ballerina since 2009. She looked to the YC to sharpen her skills when she started taking classes here in 2012. Her work with A.C.T. doesn’t stop there. She played Emmy (as a voice-over) in A.C.T.’s 2013 M.F.A. Program production of A Doll’s House. A Christmas Carol offers her a great opportunity to perform in a mainstage production.

Some Christmas Carol YC actors know their way around the backstage of The Geary like the backs of their hands. This is Seth Weinfield’s fourth year in the holiday classic—he’s playing Boy Scrooge. In addition to studying ballet and jazz, he also takes advanced theater classes with the YC.

Wix, Hurabiell Trader, and Weinfield are just a few of the young actors who have developed their performance skills with A.C.T. classes and who now appear in A Christmas Carol. As you can see from the array of classes these three students took, the YC offers a range of learning experiences for aspiring actors at all skill levels. Our introductory courses are geared toward cultivating confidence, developing a creative imagination, and strengthening collaborative skills, while our intermediate training and performing opportunities are for students who have begun to gather stage experience.

THE YC’S MISSION IS GEARED TOWARD SEEING THE WORLD THROUGH A YOUTHFUL PERSPECTIVE.

YC DIRECTOR CRAIG SLAIGHT

The YC also caters to high school students who are considering pursuing theater at the college level. The College Preparatory Program hosts seminars on nationwide acting programs, resume building, monologue and song selection for auditions, and self-analysis of performance strengths and weaknesses. In order for these students to find the right school for them, the YC has developed a deep alumni base for student networking among various college acting programs. By placing college in context with theater, the YC helps high school students plan a future on the stage. High school students in the YC also get to tackle challenging new works. In February 2016, the YC will perform Punk Rock, a contemporary play by British playwright Simon Stephens, in which high school students struggle with bullying, relationships, expectations, and mental health issues, all while discovering their moral compass without the influence of adults. “The YC’s mission is geared toward seeing the world through a youthful perspective,” notes YC Director Craig Slaight, “and Punk Rock embodies that vision.”

This past summer, as part of the YC International Collaboration, students and directors from His Majesty’s Theatre in Aberdeen, Scotland, were in residence in San Francisco working on a co-commission of a new play by Timothy Mason, The Life to Come. This play, set in the United States during World War I, will be produced by the Scottish company this winter and by A.C.T. the following year. The YC is also currently considering a new collaboration in London for 2016.

As a supplement to acting classes, four audition-based cabarets in The Garret showcase YC talent this season, starting with high school students appearing in The Magic of Lennon and McCartney. A combination of middle and high school students take the stage with Singer’s Choice, a cabaret in which young performers select their own music. Comedy tonight will present audiences with comedic songs and, later in the year, another cabaret will pay tribute to Jason Robert Brown’s compositions as inspired by A.C.T.’s mainstage production of The Last Five Years.

Overall, the YC’s mission is to provide students like Wix, Hurabiell Trader, and Weinfield with meaningful performance opportunities that enable them to develop into professional actors. Whether they go on to study in the A.C.T. M.F.A. Program or return years later as professional actors in a mainstage production such as A Christmas Carol, the YC instills in students the foundation for a successful acting career.
A.C.T. is deeply grateful to all of our contributors for their exceptional support of the Strand Theater Campaign.
