MAJOR BARBARA
Fascinated with the astonishing natural beauty of Lake George in upstate New York, Georgia O’Keeffe reveled in the discovery of new subject matter that energized her signature modernist style. From magnified botanical compositions to panoramic landscapes, this exhibition offers a deeper understanding of the spirit of place that was essential to O’Keeffe’s artistic evolution.
San Francisco’s THEATER COMPANY

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER, San Francisco’s Tony Award–winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Executive Director Ellen Richard, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of our creative work. Founded by pioneer of the regional theater movement William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. Since then, we’ve performed more than 350 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. We reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs every year.

The beautiful, historic Geary Theater—rising from the rubble of the catastrophic earthquake and fires of 1906 and immediately hailed as the “perfect playhouse”—has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped a gaping hole in the ceiling, destroying the proscenium arch and dumping tons of debris on the first six rows of orchestra seats, the San Francisco community rallied together to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild it. The theater reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over after A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings, retired in 1992.

Perloff’s 20-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and “locavore” theater—toward made by, for, and about the San Francisco area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

Perloff also put A.C.T.’s conservatory and educational programs at the center of our work. A.C.T.’s 45-year-old conservatory, led by Conservatory Director Melissa Smith, serves 3,000 students every year. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs. Our M.F.A. Program students often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area as alumni. Other programs include the world-famous Young Conservatory for students ages 8 to 19; Studio A.C.T. for adults; and the Summer Training Congress, an intensive program that attracts enthusiasts from around the world.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 9,000 Bay Area school students each year. Central to our ACTsmart education programs, run by Director of Education Elizabeth Brodersen, is the longstanding Student Matinee (SMAT) program, which has brought tens of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching artist residencies, in-school workshops, and in-depth study materials to Bay Area schools and after-school programs.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the opening of The Costume Shop theater and the current renovation of The Strand Theater across from UN Plaza, A.C.T. is poised to continue its leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

Dear Friends,

Happy New Year! What a robust and wonderful way to welcome in 2014. This production of Major Barbara came about in the most joyful way possible, as the fruit of our longstanding affection for Canadian theater and the result of conversations that began when Theatre Calgary Artistic Director Dennis Garnhum graciously invited Tosca Café to open his 2011 season in Alberta. In watching Tosca Café, it occurred to Dennis that the Canadian actor playing the Bartender, Dean Paul Gibson, would make a superb Andrew Undershaft, and so the idea for a cross-border Major Barbara was born. Theatre Calgary and A.C.T. made the commitment to share the production in every way, casting both American and Canadian actors in equal measure and collaborating with designers from both sides of the border. This kind of union is almost unprecedented in the North American theater, and it widens all of our perspectives. I’m especially pleased that two talented M.F.A. Program students will first perform in this production here on the Geary stage and then travel with the show to Canada to experience the play in an entirely different cultural context. What an education!

Major Barbara is a play about guns and money. What could be more trenchant? Shaw asks us to question whether or not it matters that some of the most committed and generous donors to charities and nonprofit institutions have derived their fortunes from such questionable sources as gun powder and munitions. It is difficult to find a contemporary play that wrestles with the themes of family, firearms, and philanthropy as vividly and immediately as Major Barbara has done for more than 100 years.

I have always been drawn to the feisty and contradictory young woman at this play’s center. Barbara’s father may be something of a cunning master of the universe, but he is also a brilliant and talented man whom Barbara recognizes as very like herself in his passions and determination. What is the child of a ruthless parent to do? How can she hold on to her beliefs in the face of an onslaught of virile debunking and dismissal? And how should we as an audience feel about the seductive arguments of Undershaft, given that they are so logical and persuasive? In many ways, Shaw asks his audience to be the jury in this electrifying trial between father and daughter, between capitalism and compassion, between pragmatism and idealism—and he never rigs the outcome.

This is going to be a spring filled with the international exchange of ideas and artists at A.C.T. Following Major Barbara is Napoli!, a remarkable Italian play that also wrestles with war and money—although money flows from contraband coffee rather than gunpowder in DeFilippo’s stunning Neopolitan tragicomedy. April will bring Peter Brook’s miraculous adaptation of the South African adultery tale The Suit, and then we journey with BD Wong to the Chinese court of The Orphan of Zhao, where intrigue and sacrifice play out against a thrilling mystery between a father and a son. It is only fitting that as citizens of this global city, we open the doors to artists and inspirations from around the world to test our own presumptions and awaken our senses and our minds to new sensations and new ideas.

We are also in the midst of a new chapter in A.C.T.’s creative and civic life, as we begin construction on our new Strand Theater in Central Market. I’m trying to imagine how Shaw would have constructed the story of a decaying porn house purchased by a nonprofit theater to create new theatrical experiences in the center of a neighborhood surrounded by government, technology companies, immigrant families, and a lot of bike lanes. How can the arts create a bridge between such different strands of urban life? How can A.C.T. help create dialogue and beauty and safety in a complex neighborhood undergoing epic changes?

These are daunting and invigorating questions, and we look forward to hearing from all of you about your own hopes and dreams for The Strand as we rescue this once-blighted building from decay and return it to the center of San Francisco’s cultural life.

Welcome to Major Barbara, and to an exciting year ahead,

Carey Perloff

Theatre Calgary is among Canada’s largest and longest-running professional theater companies and performs in a 750-seat theater in the heart of Calgary, Alberta. Since its founding in 1968, the company has grown into one of the country’s leading creators of large-scale classical and contemporary theater productions.

Under the leadership of Artistic Director Dennis Garnhum and President Tom McCabe, Theatre Calgary’s diverse year-round programming features a five-play subscription season, an annual collaboration with Calgary’s High Performance Rodeo arts festival, and a beloved presentation of A Christmas Carol that has just celebrated 27 years of spirited holiday tradition. In the summer, Theatre Calgary invites the whole city to celebrate emerging theater artists through Shakespeare in the Park, an innovative program that provides professional training and mentorship to recent graduates of theater training programs while showcasing their talents in an outdoor Shakespeare production.

Theatre Calgary has premiered plays by some of Canada’s finest playwrights, and through FUSE: The Enbridge Play Development Program, the company has renewed its commitment to launching exciting large-scale plays into the modern repertoire. As part of the 2010 Winter Olympiad in Vancouver, Theatre Calgary premiered Beyond Eden, a rock musical based on the history and traditions of the Haida First Nations people. As well, projects such as Lost – A Memoir (nominated for the Governor General’s Literary Award) and a new adaptation of Pride and Prejudice (in partnership with the National Arts Centre in Ottawa) have gone on to subsequent productions at theatres across North America.

Theatre Calgary is thrilled to take part in its first international coproduction with American Conservatory Theater. “A.C.T. is a bold and inspiring company,” says Garnhum. “Major Barbara has been an extraordinary opportunity to share artists and artistry across the border.”

A bustling Italian common room in a distinctly Neapolitan neighborhood is the context for the complex Italian masterpiece coming up next, in A.C.T.’s internationally flavored season. In a sparkling new translation of the celebrated dark comedy, Italian dramatist Eduardo De Filippo blends humor and social realism to plot the moral transformation of a family who resorts to selling contraband to get out from under the boots of fascism and poverty.

“De Filippo is masterful at reconstructing the reality and veracity of this dark time in Italian history,” notes A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff. “With its robust cast of colorful characters, the impact of World War II—and the irrepressible atmosphere in this Neapolitan neighborhood—is felt with heart-stopping immediacy.”

The incomparable Canadian actor Seana McKenna (previously seen at A.C.T. in the title role of Phèdre), will play Amalia, the resourceful matriarch who is determined to help her family survive at any cost. A.C.T. Associate Marco Barricelli (last seen here in Vigil) will return to play Gennaro—Amalia’s sensitive and surprising husband.

One of the most remarkable works in the Italian canon, Napoli! is a miraculous play that percolates with humanity and pathos. “De Filippo has the ability to fill your heart with laughter,” says Perloff, “and then break it—in equal measure.”

THERE WILL BE ONE 15-MINUTE INTERMISSION.
"MY WAY OF JOKING IS TO TELL THE TRUTH. IT’S THE FUNNIEST JOKE IN THE WORLD."
George Bernard Shaw, born in 1856 in Dublin, first went to the theater in that city as a boy. The theater of that era—its actors and plays—was gigantic. The fare was melodrama, farce, and Shakespeare, who, along with Dickens with his own oversized emotional world, became the boy’s favorite writer. A product of a family where abuse and neglect took the place of love, Shaw found a substitute home in Dublin’s Theatre Royal. There, he later wrote, “Existence touches you delicately to the very heart, and where mysteriously thrilling people, secretly known to you in the dreams of your childhood, enact a life in which terrors are as fascinating as delights; so that ghosts and death, agony and sin, became, like love and victory, phases of an unaccountable ecstasy.”

When he came to write his own plays, he harkened back to this world of huge emotions, theatrical gestures, musical speech. “My procedure,” he wrote, suggesting the size and vitality with which he endowed his characters, “is to imagine characters and let them rip.” While Shaw’s predecessors and even contemporaries used these artificialities to cocoon audiences in a world of thrills, fascination, and escape, Shaw employed them to wake up his characters to reality. That is the pattern of many of Shaw’s plays: a character, usually a young woman, has been living her life according to a belief she’s been taught is true. Through the play’s action, she learns that truth to be false, and life isn’t what she thought it was. She awakes from an illusion. Now she must choose: will she remain a child, or will she grow up? Will she go back to sleep, or will she live in the world as it is?

GOOD AND EVIL

Employing what were even then becoming old-fashioned stage falsities of acting, action, and emotion in order to pull reality onto the stage is only one of many paradoxes that run through every aspect of Shaw’s career. Another concerned the confluence—or lack of—between his careers as playwright and crusader for socialism. In the latter endeavor, Shaw wrote scores of pamphlets, speeches, essays, and books urging Britain to adopt socialism as its form of economic organization. He also wrote reams of art, music, and theater criticism, and journalism on a wide range of topics, all aimed at converting readers to his point of view. You might expect such a writer to carry his habitual didacticism into his main work, playwriting. But he doesn’t. Bertolt Brecht, a great admirer of Shaw, noticed that you might never discern Shaw’s personal point of view on an issue from reading his plays. Shaw allows every character her or his opinion, and it’s a matter of honor with him that the most compelling and convincing speeches go to the character that other playwrights would call the villain.

For Shaw, lover of old-fashioned melodrama where Good is Good and always triumphs over Evil, there are no heroes or villains. There are only people doing what they think is right, from the best of motives. In the preface to St. Joan, a play in which he gave the most memorable speeches to the men charged with trying and convicting Joan of Arc, he wrote that there were no villains in his version of her story: “It is what men and women do at their best, with good intentions . . . that really concern us. . . . If Joan had not been burnt by normally innocent people in the energy of their righteousness her death at their hands would have no more significance than the Tokyo earthquake, which burnt a great many more maidens.” For Shaw, people come with their virtues and vices mixed together. It’s a lesson that Barbara learns in the course of Major Barbara: “There is no wicked side [of life]; life is all one,” she says to her father. “You may be a devil, but God speaks through you sometimes.”

EMOTIONAL AND INTELLECTUAL
Waking up to the world of reality, facing the fact that you’ve spent your life dreaming, comes with a cost. After Barbara undergoes such an awakening, Undershaft says to her, “You have learnt something. That always feels at first as if you had lost something.” This feeling of loss leads us to another Shavian paradox. For a long time, Shaw’s plays (and Shaw) have been accused of being devoid of emotion, all brain and no heart. This is because when the critics of Shaw’s time (and ours) speak of emotion, what they usually refer to, in the context of drama, are the emotions expressed between grown men and women—that is, love. That Shaw almost always refuses to give us a love story doesn’t mean his plays aren’t emotional. It means, as the critic Eric Bentley has pointed out, that we’re looking for emotions where Shaw doesn’t put them.

Where does he put them? One place is in ideas. Shaw’s major characters are on fire with their ideas and hold them with a passion that can only be described as love. It’s as much as they can do to sit still and be quiet for two minutes while somebody else is talking. The stakes are desperately personal, because Shaw’s characters identify so personally with their ideas. To reject their ideas is to reject them. That’s the negative side. The positive side is that because they and their ideas are indivisible, it’s essential that they be heard and accepted in the world. For Shaw’s characters, everything is at stake when they tell you what they believe.

The other place where powerful emotions reside in Shaw’s plays is in the relation between child and parent or parent-figure. A child rejects her mother or father and declares herself independent. Often this is the moment when she wakes up to the reality from which she’d been shielded, as in Mrs. Warren’s Profession. Sometimes, as in Pygmalion, the character realizes she needn’t be subservient anymore. Henry Higgins makes Eliza Doolittle into a woman—a duchess—in Act IV; in Act V she makes herself into an independent woman. In St. Joan, Joan rejects those who would be her worldly father figures and gives herself to her true Father. Major Barbara is unusual in that while Barbara awakes to the true relationship between her father and The Salvation Army, this marks the beginning of a new relationship, not just the end of an old one.

PERSONAL AND PUBLIC
In these moments, it becomes clear that Shaw’s plays are both determinably public and intensely personal—another paradox. They’re personal in the deep emotions they contain, if you know where to look for them. They’re public not in the sense of being position papers, which they never are, but because they make us confront significant public issues. Or, rather, Shaw wants us to confront ourselves confronting them, because while he asks big questions, he refuses to provide the answers.

If, for example, a British audience member in 1905 was shocked by the fact that in an unregulated capitalist society the very poor had to rely for sustenance on the self-interest of the enormously wealthy, then what was he going to do about it? That we are confronting similar questions today only indicates how short a distance we’ve traveled in the century since Shaw asked them. If Undershaft’s methods and opinions outrage us, we should direct our outrage not at him but at ourselves for allowing society to develop along the lines wherein an Undershaft can wield such power. Shaw’s targets are not his characters, which he tends not to judge, but us, in our complacency. Although he might (and did) say it in a speech or pamphlet, in a play like Major Barbara he didn’t feel it necessary to point out that any society that, rather than tending to the education of its young and the welfare of its poor, ill, and elderly, chooses instead to rely on the generosity of its tycoons, is going to get what it deserves. To come to that conclusion is the job of the audience.

If Shaw wasn’t a propagandist in the theater, if he gave every character his or her say, refused to point fingers at villains or celebrate heroes, and didn’t give us a lesson or an evening of intellectual gamesmanship, then what was he up to? The answer lies not just in the words of his plays but in the actions, what the characters do: a person awakens and chooses to grow up by seeing the world as it is, not as she’s been told it is. She learns to think and feel for herself, to see that the conventional wisdom is always more conventional than it is wise. She becomes her own authentic person. He has the same hope for us.

All of his work, Shaw wrote, was about “the struggle between human vitality and the artificial system of morality”—between the real value and the false. He was not an economic or political revolutionary, but a moral one. His plays are, at heart, serious, but they are also some of the funniest in the English language. “My way of joking,” he said, “is to tell the truth. It’s the funniest joke in the world.”

George Bernard Shaw was the son of a corn merchant and a singer, who exposed him to a musical education and the theater. While well read, Shaw never attended university, instead entering the work force as a clerk in a land agent’s office when he was 16. The following year, his parents divorced, and when he was 20 he followed his mother to London.

In 1876, the same year he moved, Shaw published the first of his musical reviews in the Hornet as a ghostwriter; his column ran until September 1877. While living mostly off the income his mother earned as a voice teacher, Shaw completed five novels over the next seven years, but he could not find anyone to publish them. One publisher said they were “too clever for the ‘general.’”

Through his voracious reading, Shaw began to develop his progressive political stance, taking to soapboxes to deliver speeches. In 1884, the 28-year-old Shaw joined the Fabian Society, a socialist group that, compared to other socialist groups of the day, had a decidedly pragmatic and gradualist approach to the reform of English society. Instead of destroying societal structures, the Fabians’ strategy was to permeate existing legislative systems with progressive ideas. Shaw became one of the society’s most famous spokespeople.

Shaw continued to earn a living by writing criticism and reviews of the theater. After almost ten years of this, he decided the best way to illustrate his disappointment in modern English theater would be to write plays himself. His first produced play was Widowers’ Houses in 1892 with the Independent Theatre Society in London, which was committed to producing plays of high literary and artistic value that were rejected by commercial theaters or suppressed by censors.

In 1898, Shaw published two collections of plays that attacked social hypocrisy called Plays Pleasant and Plays Unpleasant, one of which, Mrs. Warren’s Profession, was subsequently banned by the Lord Chamberlain from being performed in public in England due to its sexual content. That same year, Shaw married Charlotte Payne-Townsend, a rich Irish heiress he met through the Fabian Society. After a successful run of The Devil’s Disciple in America, Shaw was no longer reliant on his mother or journalism for money. With this freedom, he focused on politics and playwriting and wrote three of his most famous plays: Man and Superman (1903), John Bull’s Other Island (1904), and Major Barbara (1905). These plays, produced at London’s Royal Court Theatre, solidified Shaw’s reputation as a leading dramatist of his day.

Shaw again won admiration for Pygmalion in 1914, but he quickly lost favor after he wrote an essay entitled “Common Sense about the War” after the outbreak of World War I. He felt the war was “a monstrous crime against civilization and humanity,” going against the mounting war fever of his fellow countrymen. It would be seven years before one of his plays (Back to Methuselah) saw even moderate success. He regained mainstream popularity with Saint Joan, performed in 1924, and the following year Mrs. Warren’s Profession finally received a public performance in England. In 1926, Shaw was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature—“for his work which is marked by both idealism and humanity, its stimulating satire often being infused with a singular poetic beauty.”

After Saint Joan, most of his later plays met with only middling success. He traveled the world and remained politically active through his writing. He oversaw the making of the film adaptations of Pygmalion (1938), Major Barbara (1941), and Caesar and Cleopatra (1945). In late 1950, Shaw fell and fractured his thigh while trimming a shrub in his garden; while in the hospital, he developed a kidney condition for which he refused operations. He died on November 2, 1950, at 94 years of age.
ABOUT THE PLAY

A Brief History of the Salvation Army

BY SHANNON STOCKWELL

London's East End experienced a huge population boom during the nineteenth century, and the city could not keep up with the flood of people. Many were left homeless and desperate in overcrowded and unsanitary slums. In 1865, Methodist preacher William Booth and his wife, Catherine, cofounded the East End Christian Mission in Whitechapel, which aimed to convert those whom other churches had rejected: thieves, prostitutes, gamblers, and drunkards. By the late 1870s, the Christian Mission increasingly used military metaphors to entice the working classes, which were enamored with militarism; in 1878, it officially changed its name to The Salvation Army.

As its name suggests, at first The Salvation Army’s goal centered on saving souls. Salvationists believed that once a person accepted Jesus Christ, good fortune would follow. After a while, however, Booth realized that the denizens of the East End were not responding to his call. Encouraged by members of the female ministry (which The Salvation Army controversially supported) and influenced by the popularity of philanthropic organizations, Booth (along with journalist W. T. Stead and fellow Salvationist Frank Smith) wrote and published In Darkest England and the Way Out in 1890, which marked a major shift in philosophy: before they could save someone’s soul, they had to feed them. This understanding led The Salvation Army into the twentieth century, and seeing to people’s material as well as spiritual needs remains at the core of its mission today. It currently exists in 122 countries and has almost 16,000 corps and more than a million soldiers.

GET TO KNOW THE REAL SALVATION ARMY!

DID YOU KNOW?

- The Salvation Army was established in London in 1865.
- We have been supporting those in need without discrimination in San Francisco since 1883.
- Examples of our services include meal programs, emergency disaster services, drug and alcohol rehabilitation, senior services, and youth programs.
- 82 cents of every dollar The Salvation Army spends is used to support its programs in 5,000 communities nationwide.
- Nearly 30 million Americans receive assistance from The Salvation Army every year.

SCOTTSBORO BOYS PARDONED

On November 21, 2013, 82 years after the nine Scottsboro Boys were wrongly convicted of raping two women on a train traveling in the South—sparking one of our country’s earliest Civil Rights battles and leading to two landmark Supreme Court rulings, one about the inclusion of black Americans on juries and the other about the need for adequate legal representation at trial—the Alabama Board of Pardons and Paroles voted to posthumously pardon the men. State Senator Arthur Orr, who helped move the legal process along, said at the historic event, “Today is a reminder that it is never too late to right a wrong. We cannot go back in time and change the course of history, but we can change how we respond to history.”

A.C.T. audiences saw this tragic story of how racism destroyed the lives of nine black teenagers brought to life in Susan Stroman’s production of Kander and Ebb's musical The Scottsboro Boys when it came to The Geary in 2012. Since then, the celebrated show has moved on to Los Angeles and London. After the legal development last November, the production’s creators issued the following statement, “In the years since their arrests, these nine boys have changed lives, sparked movements, and altered the course of history. They have proved that justice need not be denied, that the truth will set you free—and most of all, that they matter. And now, after all these years, they are free to hop a freight and go back home.”

A.C.T. BREAKS GROUND ON THE STRAND THEATER

by Dan Rubin

FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT THE STRAND THEATER

Visit act-sf.org/strand
On October 2, 2013, San Francisco Mayor Edwin M. Lee joined Supervisor Jane Kim, Senator Mark Leno, A.C.T. leadership, community development partners, and a crowd of excited members of the A.C.T. family to break ground on The Strand Theater at 1127 Market Street, across from UN Plaza and just two doors down from A.C.T.’s Costume Shop theater in Central Market. The design for the new Strand by Skidmore Owings & Merrill LLP (SOM), a highly distinguished architecture, interior design, engineering, and urban-planning firm, will restore the distinct façade and many of the unique elements of the century-old cinema. Scheduled to open its doors in spring 2015, The Strand will include a 285-seat theater, a 120-seat black box venue, and a café that will remain open even when no shows are performing. The flexible spaces will allow A.C.T. to present new work and emerging artists, expand our education programs, and produce innovative theater in versatile ways.

The Strand will also enable A.C.T. to play an important role in shaping the future of the cultural landscape of the city. “Market Street is happening,” remarked A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff (who has been dreaming of building a second stage for A.C.T. since she took charge 21 years ago) at the groundbreaking, “and it is really important that arts groups, as we always do in this country, take the lead in creating civic discourse in our culture. . . . The Strand is going to welcome the neighborhood and light up the block.”

In his speech at the ceremony, Mayor Lee said that when his office was first thinking about how best to reinvest in the Central Market corridor, his team predicted there would be moments that truly signaled big, transformative change—and he acknowledged that The Strand was one such moment. “It wasn’t Twitter that started to revitalize Market Street; it began with arts organizations, grass-roots arts organizations taking the risk. . . . We talk a lot about technology in this city, but technology cannot live without the arts—and vice versa.” He said that he is excited to show off The Strand when San Francisco hosts the U.S. Conference of Mayors in 2015.

Financing for the purchase of The Strand in early 2012 was made possible by a gift from ten-year A.C.T. board member Jeff Ubben and his wife, Laurie. The renovation is projected to cost $32.5 million, which will be funded through a capital campaign that raises contributions from individuals, corporations, and private foundations. A.C.T. has already raised $26.5 million in private donations and from tax credits; New Markets Tax Credit (NMTC) and Historic Tax Credit (HTC) financing is making the building’s renovation financially feasible as it represents one-third of the renovation costs. We need to raise another $6 million to complete our goal.

“To marry two interests and know that they are naturally symbiotic is exciting for any donor. That is how I felt about being a part of bringing A.C.T.’s second stage to Market Street,” explained Jeff Ubben, who is the chair of the Strand Capital Campaign, at the groundbreaking. “To advance A.C.T.’s programming with a space that will allow for risk-taking and new works and collaborations with artists fits perfectly with the exciting possibilities of the Central Market corridor.”

To learn more about playing your part to ensure the Strand Capital Campaign is a success, contact Amory Sharpe, A.C.T. Senior Director of Development/Capital Campaigns, at asharpe@act-sf.org or 415.439.2472. JANUARY IS M.F.A. PROGRAM MONTH

by Helen Rigby

January is M.F.A. Program Month at A.C.T., celebrating and raising awareness of our nationally renowned Master of Fine Arts Program and the talented student actors who are training here. Four of them appear in Major Barbara, and they will be traveling with the production to Canada immediately following our run. Throughout January, our young actors will be active in our Geary Theater: Before weekday evening performances of Major Barbara, you can catch them in vaudevillian M.F.A. Variety shows in The Garret, our cabaret space on the fifth floor. Patrons will also experience our students clowning in the lobby, and you’ll have a chance to chat with them in the VIP Lounge. This is a perfect opportunity to enjoy getting to know the next generation of great theater artists. “I am not sure people realize just how much we do, how far and wide our actor training goes in the M.F.A. Program—or how virtuosic our students are,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith. “Their training is a 360-degree experience, and we are thrilled to show off their versatility.”

No group is more passionate about our graduate students than the members of our Master of Fine Arts Program Board of Directors, which Jennifer S. Lindsay recently joined. As a principal with the U.S. audit, tax, and advisory services firm KPMG LLP and with a background in economics (she holds a B.A. in economics and aerospace engineering from Texas A&M University and an M.A. in economics from Stanford University), Lindsay is excited to help forward the mission of the M.F.A. Program Board in developing a sustainable financial model to support the program through annual contributions and grants, the establishment of endowments for student scholarships, faculty chairs, and other initiatives.

Board members like Lindsay serve as ambassadors for the M.F.A. Program by seeking to heighten awareness of the program regionally, nationally, and globally. She recently co-chaired our annual Conservatory Awards Luncheon, which honored actors Harry Hamlin, Heidi Armbruster, and Peter Friedrich and raised funds for our school. Here is what Lindsay had to say about why she is invested in our students:

WHEN DID YOU FIRST DISCOVER A.C.T., AND WHY DID YOU BECOME A SUBSCRIBER? I moved to San Francisco right after the 1989 earthquake and started attending A.C.T. when it was performing in many different venues while The Geary was under renovation. As a new resident of the Bay Area, it was fun for me to get to know all these different theater venues. During those years, I would pick and choose the shows that I wanted to attend, but when the refurbished Geary reopened its doors in 1996 and I saw The Tempest with David Strathairn, I was completely charmed by the whole package: Carey, David, the beautiful purple chairs. I haven’t missed a season since.

HOW DID YOU FIRST HEAR ABOUT THE MASTER OF FINE ARTS PROGRAM? WHAT M.F.A. PROGRAM PRODUCTIONS THAT YOU HAVE SEEN STAND OUT IN YOUR MIND? As a longtime donor and subscriber, I was invited to contribute to the Next Generation Campaign in 2006. On the donation form, there was a choice to focus my gift on scholarships for the M.F.A. Program. I liked that idea and then began to attend some of the M.F.A. Program productions. I really enjoyed last season’s productions of A Doll’s House and Seven Guitars. I am a huge August Wilson fan and that production was wonderful.

WHY DID YOU JOIN THE M.F.A. PROGRAM BOARD? I believe the M.F.A. Program is a hidden jewel that provides training for actors to learn a trade that can be applied to multiple media—including film and TV. Just look at the school’s track record, and you can see how many stars have been through the program. When I attend plays at other companies in the Bay Area, I am always impressed that “graduate of the A.C.T. M.F.A. Program” appears in the biographies of so many actors. I don’t think the public understands what the training here is doing for the entire field. It is a top-notch program.

“M.F.A. MONTH IS THE OPPORTUNITY FOR OUR PATRONS TO DEVELOP A SYNERGETIC EXCHANGE OF ENERGY WITH OUR TALENTED STUDENTS AND RAISE AWARENESS OF THE M.F.A. PROGRAM AND OUR STUDENTS’ DEDICATION TO THEIR CRAFT.”

M.F.A. PROGRAM BOARD MEMBER JENNIFER LINDSAY

YOU SERVED AS A CO-CHAIR OF THE CONSERVATORY AWARDS LUNCHEON THIS SEASON. WHAT WAS THAT EXPERIENCE LIKE? It was a kick to meet the award winners. They each had amazing stories to tell about their personal dedication and sacrifice to their craft—with serendipity also playing a bit of a role. They each spoke about how the M.F.A. Program contributed to their ongoing success. I find it reaffirming that the school continues to fulfill its purpose of influencing and enhancing the current and future state of theater.
In 1952, two professors from San Francisco State College, Herbert Blau and Jules Irving, founded The San Francisco Actor’s Workshop, which quickly became the city’s major theater and one of the nation’s cutting-edge regional theaters. It lasted for 12 years and produced more than 100 shows at Marine’s Memorial Theatre, but in 1965, Irving and Blau left for New York to take over the artistic direction of the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center, and the Workshop, suffering financial hardships, closed. San Francisco was again without a major resident theater company.

On behalf of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, three civic leaders launched a search to find a company to fill the hole the Workshop’s absence created in the cultural landscape of the city. Cyril Magnin (1899–1988) was one of San Francisco’s most prominent businessmen, most notably as the chief executive of the family business, Joseph Magnin Co., a popular brand of upscale women’s clothing. Magnin was also an important player in national politics as a major fundraiser for the Democratic Party, but he eventually focused on local happenings, earning himself the title “Mr. San Francisco,” given to him by none other than columnist Herb Caen. In 1964, he became the Chamber of Commerce’s chief of protocol. Magnin met Melvin Swig (1917–93) through their overlapping political involvement. Swig was a real estate developer, heir to the St. Francis Hotel chain, and chairman of the board of the Swig Weller & Dinner Development Co., which controlled the Fairmont Hotel chain. Rounding out the trio was Mortimer Fleishhacker, Jr. (1907–76), who could trace his San Francisco roots back to the Gold Rush. He was an original trustee of the Fleishhacker Foundation, founded by his father, a successful banker and businessman, in 1947 “to improve the quality of life in the San Francisco Bay Area.” After his father died in 1953, Fleishhacker took over management of the foundation; most of its early grants supported the arts.

In July 1966, a young acting troupe called the American Conservatory Theater was playing an engagement at Stanford University. Founded by William Ball at Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh in 1965, the company had taken to the road with a repertory of eight shows. Before they arrived in the Bay Area, a representative of the company named Bill Baer visited San Francisco’s Chamber of Congress and pointed out that the city had a vacant theater and that he had a theater company looking for a permanent home. Magnin writes in his autobiography, “The man’s intensity and perseverance were attractive to me—I have always appreciated people of passionate conviction and besides, he piqued my interest with his challenge. The least we could do was take a look.”

Magnin, Swig, and Fleishhacker organized a busload of 15 prominent San Franciscans (“culture vultures,” as Magnin labeled them) to travel down to Stanford for a performance of Charley’s Aunt, starring René Auberjonois. Although it was woefully under-rehearsed, the city leaders were excited by what they saw and started negotiations immediately to bring A.C.T. to San Francisco. But as part of its tour, A.C.T. continued on to Chicago, where civic leaders also made a bid to move the troupe to their city. Promising to raise $200,000 for A.C.T.’s first season, the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce won the bidding war. Our trio of founding fathers contributed $35,000 of their own money and then went on every radio and television show to raise the remainder. On January 21, 1967, A.C.T. began its San Francisco life with a production of Tartuffe, also starring Auberjonois.

Nearly 50 years later, San Francisco’s premiere nonprofit theater company is still a thriving cultural institution, and at this season’s annual Gala we are thrilled to be honoring our founding fathers.

JOIN THE YC TODAY!

At our Tony Award–winning conservatory, students ages 8 to 19 develop their talents, perform in professional-caliber productions, and gain the confidence to succeed—all in a comfortable, creative, and fun environment. From acting and musical theater to clowning and Shakespeare, Young Conservatory classes are exciting, engaging, and challenging. By training in the YC, students learn to incorporate the craft of theater into their everyday lives, developing concentration, imagination, professionalism, character, and self-confidence along the way.

THIS SPRING, DON’T MISS THIS WORLD PREMIERE MUSICAL FROM THE YC!

STAYING WILD

Music and Lyrics by Creighton Irons

CAREY PERLOFF (A.C.T. Artistic Director) recently celebrated her 20th year as artistic director of A.C.T., where she most recently directed Underneath the Lintel, Arcadia, Elektra (coproduced by the Getty Villa in Malibu), Endgame and Play, Scorched, The Homecoming, Tosca Cafe (cocreated with choreographer Val Caniparoli and recently toured Canada), and Racine’s Phèdre in a coproduction with the Stratford Festival. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff has also directed for A.C.T. José Rivera’s Boleros for the Disenchanted; the world premieres of Philip Kan Gotanda’s After the War (A.C.T. commission) and her own adaptation (with Paul Walsh) of A Christmas Carol; the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s The Invention of Love and Indian Ink and Harold Pinter’s Celebration; A.C.T.-commissioned translations/adaptations of Hecuba, The Misantrophe, Enrico IV, Mary Stuart, Uncle Vanya, A Mother, and The Voysey Inheritance (adapted by David Mamet); the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian’s Singer’s Boy; and major revivals of ‘Tis Pity She’s a Whore, The Government Inspector, Happy End (including a critically acclaimed cast album recording), A Doll’s House, Waiting for Godot, The Three Sisters, The Threepenny Opera, Old Times, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Creditors, The Room, Home, The Tempest, and Stoppard’s Rock ‘n’ Roll, Travesties, The Real Thing, and Night and Day. Perloff’s work for A.C.T. also includes Marie Ndiaye’s Hilda, the world premieres of Marc Blitzstein’s No for an Answer and David Lang/Mac Wellman’s The Difficulty of Crossing a Field, and the West Coast premiere of her own play The Colossus of Rhodes (Susan Smith Blackburn Award finalist).

Her play Luminescence Dating premiered in New York at The Ensemble Studio Theatre, was coproduced by A.C.T. and Magic Theatre, and is published by Dramatists Play Service. Kinship was developed at the Perry-Mansfield New Play Festival and at New York Stage and Film (2013); Waiting for the Flood has received workshops at A.C.T., New York Stage & Film, and Roundabout Theatre Company. Higher was developed at New York Stage and Film and presented at San Francisco’s Contemporary Jewish Museum in 2010; it won the 2011 Blanche and Irving Laurie Foundation Theatre Visions Fund Award and received its world premiere in February 2012 in San Francisco. Her one-act The Morning After was a finalist for the Heideman Award at Actors Theatre of Louisville. Perloff has collaborated as a director on new plays by many notable writers, including Gotanda, Nilo Cruz, Timbersale Wertebaker and Robert O’Hara.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language, and many classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won numerous OBIE Awards, including the 1988 OBIE for artistic excellence. In 1993, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A recipient of France’s Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres and the National Corporate Theatre Fund’s 2007 Artistic Achievement Award, Perloff received a B.A. Phi Beta Kappa in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. Perloff is on the board of the Hermitage Artist Retreat in Sarasota, Florida, and is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

ELLEN RICHARD (Executive Director) joined A.C.T. as executive director in August 2010. She served previously as executive director of off Broadway’s nonprofit Second Stage Theatre in New York City. During her tenure at Second Stage, she was responsible for the purchase contract of the Helen Hayes Theatre and substantial growth in subscription income and growth in individual giving. Under Richard’s leadership, Second Stage provided the initial home for the Broadway productions Everyday Rapture, Next to Normal, and The Little Dog Laughed.

From 1983 to 2005, Richard enjoyed a rich and varied career with Roundabout Theatre Company. By the time she departed as managing director, Roundabout had been transformed from a small nonprofit on the verge of bankruptcy into one of the country’s largest and most successful theater companies of its kind. Richard is the recipient of six Tony Awards as producer, for Roundabout productions of Cabaret (1998), A View from the Bridge (1998), Side Man (1999), Nine (2003), Assassins (2004), and Glengarry Glen Ross (2005). Producer of more than 125 shows at Roundabout, she had direct supervision of all general and production management, marketing, and financial aspects of the theater’s operations. She conceptualized and oversaw the redesign of the three permanent Roundabout stages—Studio 54, the American Airlines Theatre, and the Harold and Miriam Steinberg Center for Theatre. She directed the location search for Cabaret and supervised the creation of that production’s environmental Kit Kat Klub.

Prior to her tenure at Roundabout, Richard served as business manager of Westport Country Playhouse, theater manager for Stanford Center for the Arts, and business manager for Atlas Scenic Studio. She began her career working as a stagehand, sound designer, and scenic artist assistant.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two- to a three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.’s artistic wing; she has also taught and directed in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught introductory, intermediate, and advanced acting. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages at various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University’s La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition. Also a professional actor, she has performed regionally at the Hangar Theatre, A.C.T., California Shakespeare Theater, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre; in New York at Primary Stages and Soho Rep; and in England at the Barbican Theater (London) and Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Smith holds a B.A. from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from Yale School of Drama.
AT THE THEATER
A.C.T.’s Geary Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The theater opens 30 minutes before curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
Copies of Words on Plays, A.C.T.’s in-depth performance guide, are on sale in the main lobby, at the theater bars, at the box office, and online.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the theater.

Cell Phones!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cell phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2317 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performances. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and Recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Restrooms are located in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair Seating is located in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

A.C.T. is pleased to announce that an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is now available on site.

Lost and Found
If you’ve misplaced an item while you’re still at the theater, please look for it at our merchandise stand in the lobby. Any items found by ushers or other patrons will be taken there. If you’ve already left the theater, please call 415.439.2471 and we’ll be happy to check our lost and found for you. Please be prepared to provide us with the date you attended the performance and your seat location.
