San Francisco’s Theater Company

American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco’s Tony Award–winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Executive Director Ellen Richard, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of our creative work. Founded by pioneer of the regional theater movement William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. Since then, we’ve performed more than 320 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people, and reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs every year.

The beautiful, historic Geary Theater—rising from the rubble of the catastrophic earthquake and fires of 1906 and immediately hailed as the “perfect playhouse”—has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped a gaping hole in the ceiling, destroying the proscenium arch and dumping tons of debris on the first six rows of orchestra seats, the San Francisco community rallied together to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild it. The theater reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over after A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings, retired in 1992.

Perloff’s 20-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; crossdisciplinary performances and international collaborations; the reintroduction of a core acting company; and “locavore” theater— theater made by, for, and about the San Francisco area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

Perloff also put A.C.T.’s conservatory and educational programs at the center of our work. A.C.T.’s 45-year-old conservatory, led by Conservatory Director Melissa Smith, serves 3,000 students every year. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs. Our M.F.A. Program students often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area as alumni. Other programs include the world-famous Young Conservatory for students ages 8 to 19; Studio A.C.T. for adults; and the Summer Training Congress for enthusiasts from around the world.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 8,000 Bay Area school students each year. Central to our ACTsmart education programs, run by Director of Education Elizabeth Brodersen, is the longstanding Student Matinee (SMAT) program, which since 1968 has brought tens of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching artist residencies, in-school workshops, and in-depth study materials to Bay Area schools and after-school programs.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the opening of The Costume Shop theater and the current renovation of The Strand Theater across from UN Plaza, A.C.T. is poised to continue its leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

Dear Friends,

Big openhearted holiday greetings to every one of you! Whether you’re here for the very first time, or because A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol is an indispensable part of your annual solstice celebration, we’re thrilled and honored to have you with us.

This version of Dickens’s beautiful story, which Paul Walsh and I created eight seasons ago, grew out of the very depths of A.C.T.’s being. We are, uniquely, an intergenerational theater in which children and adults, professionals and students, masters and emerging artists train, create, and play together on a regular basis. Because we house one of the most renowned M.F.A. programs in America, and because we are blessed with a truly one-of-a-kind Young Conservatory (YC), in which eight-to-nineteen-year-olds study and perform and grow, we made sure that A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol would feature an extraordinary range of artists of all ages, collaborating together on this exquisite tale of redemption and transformation.

This year, our Carol is, as always, blessed by the presence of some of the Bay Area’s most beloved veteran actors—including Jim Carpenter, our inimitable Scrooge, and Ken Ruta, who is returning to his role as the unfortunate Jacob Marley—familiar to A.C.T. audiences from numerous productions on our magnificent stage. It also features 26 children from our YC, the entire M.F.A. Program class of 2013, and members of our core acting company. This is an incredible gift: a chance for the larger A.C.T. family to work together and for you, our Carol audience, to see the breadth of A.C.T.’s commitment to artists of all ages.

Paul Walsh and I wanted this Carol to salute the power of the imagination to transform even the crustiest of souls. Dickens’s novella is exceptionally theatrical: much of it is written in dialogue, and it centers around the striking presence of four ghosts who perform a series of “interventions” on Scrooge until his heart is reawakened and he begins his life anew. Now more than ever, the themes of Dickens’s story of greed and renewal resonate, as protesters around the world continue to wrestle with the gap between the haves and the have-nots and we struggle to hold on to our empathy and imagination in an increasingly divisive world.

It is worth remembering that Dickens trusted the artistic imagination to lift us out of the darkness and set us on a more inspiring path. It is also worth noting, for those of you who are here with children, that it has been proved again and again that when young people are exposed to the transformative power of live theater, their scholastic work and world view open up in wonderful and surprising ways. With each passing year, A.C.T. becomes more and more deeply engaged in arts education for young people throughout the Bay Area (to find out more, please contact our director of education, Elizabeth Brodersen, at ebrodersen@act-sf.org), and Carol is often the first experience that Bay Area children have of live theater. In the 20 years I have been at A.C.T., this incredible story has been a remarkable constant, a way for us to come together to reassess, to celebrate, to imagine.

We hope you feel that you’ve given yourselves a gift by being here, and we wish you a fulfilling and empathetic year ahead. I invite you to return this winter and spring to experience the artists and artistry of A.C.T.’s extraordinary 2012–13 season.

Yours,

Carey Perloff
Artistic Director
Your 21-year-old grandson: it’s lovely when he visits, but what happens when he stays?

When the previously announced A.C.T. production of A Streetcar Named Desire became unavailable due to a possible national tour of the recent Broadway production, A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff immediately looked into filling the slot with another beautiful American drama. “We are thrilled to have been awarded the honor of producing the West Coast premiere of Amy Herzog’s acclaimed 4000 Miles, a funny and moving new work that has played to sold-out houses and received staggering accolades from critics since it premiered in 2011,” she says. “We can’t wait to bring our audiences this exciting new work from a young playwright who has the potential to transform the American theater.”
At 33 years old, Herzog has emerged as a star playwright of her generation. Prominent theater companies are clamoring to produce her work (with upcoming premieres scheduled at Playwrights Horizons and New York Theatre Workshop) and she has earned a reputation, according to the New York Times, as “a young writer of stature, one who draws on her family’s history—and her own—to create forceful, literate, compassionate drama.”

In 4000 Miles, 21-year-old Leo unexpectedly arrives on the doorstep of his feisty 91-year-old grandmother Vera’s New York apartment, inviting us into an unconventional and beautifully nuanced relationship that spans, tests, and collapses the distance between generations. Leo has recently completed an eventful cross-country bike trip and is recovering from a devastating accident. He’s out of touch with his parents, but he turns to Vera for solace as he attempts to reunite with his old girlfriend, deal with his baggage, and move on with his life. Sparks fly as Vera’s old-lefty political views collide with Leo’s crunchy, hippie lifestyle, but the two begin to find common ground through their frank—and often hilarious—conversations.

One of Herzog’s earlier works, The Woody Play, received its world premiere at A.C.T. in 2008 as a coproduction of the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program and Young Conservatory. Even then, Herzog drew on personal experience in creating her onstage world—the tale of a bright, young playwright teaching at a prestigious summer conservatory is “somewhat autobiographical,” she admits.

Continuing on this impulse, the character of Vera Joseph in 4000 Miles is based on Herzog’s own grandmother, Leepee Joseph, now 95, whose West Village apartment was recreated as the set for the New York production. Like Vera, Leepee has been passionate about left-wing politics throughout her life, from demonstrating for free lunches (with an arrest for picketing) when she was a schoolgirl, to standing with a sign at an Occupy Wall Street rally earlier this year.

Herzog drew inspiration for 4000 Miles in part from a desire to give voice to an older character after perceiving that, in society, older people can seem to disappear. “I feel, in a very pronounced way, my own grandmother’s fight to remain present and relevant,” she says. “This character, Leo, isn’t me at all, but I did live with my grandmother for a while when I first graduated from college and I encountered what it’s like to be her roommate. I’m very grateful for that period, mostly because we got in some fights, which I now think is completely remarkable. I worked through fights with my grandmother. Very few people can say that.”

ABOUT THE PLAY

Charles Dickens and the Invention of Christmas
by Michael Paller

THE CHRISTMAS STAGECOACH
Imagine a Christmas without carols or cards. No day off to spend with the family. No festive dinner, or presents Christmas morning under the tree. No tree. This was Christmas in most places before A Christmas Carol was published on December 19, 1843. Charles Dickens has been called “the man who invented Christmas,” and while that’s an exaggeration, it’s not a big one. He didn’t invent the modern holiday by himself, but for many people, his vision of Christmas is Christmas.

Raucous Beginnings

By the time Dickens wrote Carol, Christmas had fallen into a bad way. In Elizabethan days, Christmas was a raucous affair, reminiscent of the frenzied pagan rituals celebrating the winter solstice from which it emerged. The growing population of London or other large cities, and the law behavior of cross-dressing bands of mummers who donned disguises, celebrated in the streets, and mocked authority. When they seized power in 1642, the Puritans denounced Christmas as nothing less than a pagan assault on Christ, called it an “Anti-Christ masse,” and banned it. They also outlawed another roguish activity, the theater, and tore down most of the existing playhouses (including Shakespeare’s Globe). Christmas and the theater disappeared in England together, and neither returned until the Stewart kings restored them in 1660. By then, however, most of the revelry and customs associated with Christmas had been forgotten.

Christmas in America

The situation in America was mixed. The Pilgrims, who came to America in 1620 in the name of religious liberty, disdained Christmas much as their Puritan cousins did. They banned the holiday in Boston, and fined celebrants. In the English colony of Jamestown, Virginia, where wealth, not religion, was the principle pursuit, the inhabitants were left to worship as they chose, and Christmas celebrations were the norm. The American Revolution brought an end to most British traditions in the colonies, Christmas included, and while the holiday was observed again in the last years of the eighteenth century, it wouldn’t be officially recognized on a national level until 1870. When some Americans began celebrating it again, many did it in the wild spirit of old: New York City had to create its first police force in 1828 in order to quell the riots of unemployed revelers.

The Industrial Revolution

Christmas was grim in England’s cities during the Industrial Revolution. Factories and businesses were open on December 25 and there was no day off for employees like Martha Cratchit. Still, while Christmas wasn’t much celebrated in London or other large cities, some of the old customs were still observed in remote rural villages. There it was a day for games, carols, and dances; garlands of evergreens and sprigs of mistletoe were hung throughout some of the large manor houses, and the gentry retained the ancient custom of opening their homes to their less well-off neighbors and distributing food and drink to the poor. As a child, Dickens heard of these customs from his father, whose parents were servants at a grand country estate, Crewe Hall, in Cheshire, in northwest England. Years later, his friend William Sandys, a historian who recorded the old traditions, told him about others. In Christmas Carols, Ancient and Modern, Sandys wrote about a tradition that had generally vanished from London: “In the West of England . . . carol-singing is still kept up, the singers going from house to house . . . and in some of the parish churches, meeting on the night of Christmas eve and singing in the sacred morning.”

Back in America in 1820, Washington Irving published The Sketch Book of Geoffrey Crayon, Gentleman, a collection of tales and essays. In addition to “Rip Van Winkle” and “The Legend of Sleepy Hollow,” the book contained three chapters devoted to Christmas at a British country estate called Bracebridge Hall. The place was fictional, but the accounts of the Christmas celebrations were based on what Irving had seen and heard during several years of travel in Europe and Great Britain. He described in detail the sumptuous dinners, the blazing yule logs, the dances, games, and songs—the spirit best summed up in Squire Bracebridge’s confession to the narrator, “I love to see this day well kept by rich and poor; it’s a great thing to have one day in the year, at least, when you are sure of being welcome wherever you go, and of having, as it were, the world all thrown open to you.” The images and sentence rhythm could have been Dickens’s own. In fact, Irving was one of Dickens’s favorite authors, and the year before he wrote Carol, the Englishman cheerfully declared, “I do not go to bed two nights out of seven without taking Washington Irving under my arm upstairs to bed with me.”

Dickens, then, had several sources of inspiration for a Christmas that neither he nor thousands of others ever had really experienced. This kind of Christmas matched his own temperament and needs, which were forged in a childhood of want and uncertainty.

The Carol Philosophy

In 1824, when Dickens was 12, his father was declared bankrupt. He and the entire family except for Charles were imprisoned for debt. The boy, suddenly alone in the world, was removed from school and put to work. It was the formative experience of his life. It’s not surprising, then, that in a series of pieces beginning in 1835 with an essay called “Christmas Festivities,” Dickens depicted a holiday centering around families, and especially children who were loved, cared for, and surrounded by warmth and good cheer. Dickens eventually produced five short books and numerous articles on Christmas themes, but A Christmas Carol has always been far and away the most popular, and the most successful in setting out what he came to call his “Carol philosophy.”

First stated in “Christmas Festivities,” the philosophy is an earthly one, concerned with the welfare of all in the here and now, however much it might find echoes in religious texts: “And thus the evening passes, in . . . good-will and cheerfulness,” he wrote, “doing more to awaken the sympathies of every member of the party on behalf of his neighbor, and to perpetuate their good feeling during the ensuing year, than all the homilies that have ever been written, by all the Divines that have ever lived.”

Modern Christmas Is Born

Dickens’s image of Christmas as a time that prompts generosity in the hearts of all struck an immediate chord with his readers even if they’d never sung carols, kissed beneath the mistletoe, or spent the holiday with their family or Christmas Eve among spirits. The English poet Thomas Hood wrote in his review of A Christmas Carol, “If Christmas with its ancient and hospitable customs, its social and charitable observances, were in danger of decay, this is the book that would give them a new lease.” It did. Most of the reviews were ecstatic. “Many men,” the novelist and critic William Makepeace Thackery observed, “were known to sit down after perusing it, and write off letters to their friends, not about business, but out of the fullness of their heart, and to wish old acquaintances a happy Christmas.” “Scrooge” quickly entered the vocabulary to describe a miserly man, and by the end of 1844, at least 12 unauthorized theatrical adaptations had appeared in London.

At the same time, other Christmas traditions were being born that, together with Carol, created Christmas as we know it. In 1822, New Yorker Clement Clarke Moore wrote “A Visit from St. Nicholas,” which was largely responsible for creating the image of a Santa Claus who delivers gifts to children via a sleigh drawn by eight tiny reindeer. In 1841, Prince Albert, the German consort of Queen Victoria, brought a Christmas tree to Windsor Castle. A tradition from his homeland, it was decorated with hand-blown German glass ornaments, candles, fruit, and gingerbread. By the end of the decade it had become ubiquitous. (It had come to America earlier, probably by the 1820s.) The same year that Carol was published, Sir Henry Cole, who already had helped popularize the self-adhesive postage stamp, created the Christmas card. To Carol goes the credit for reinventing Christmas dinner. Before Carol, goose was the preferred Christmas bird. After Carol, turkey, an import from America, became the meal of choice. “Dickens’s Christmas Carol helps the poultry business amazingly,” a magazine noted in 1867. “Everybody who reads it and who has money immediately rushes off and buys a turkey for the poor.”

It’s a sad irony that the profit-driven atmosphere of the early nineteenth century that led Dickens to write Carol has infected the holiday in our own time. Still, Carol is an antidote to what a contemporary critic referred to as “this money-seeking age and money-getting country.” Dickens’s vision of Christmas isn’t about money; it doesn’t divide rich from poor. It encompasses all, child and adult, fortunate and unfortunate, the loved and the orphaned. It’s summed up in a sentence that, if it has accumulated sentimental baggage in the ensuing 169 years, is still revolutionary in its plea that the bounty of life be shared among all: “God bless us every one!”

PERFORMING IN THE DRILL COURT AT SAN FRANCISCO’S MISSION ARMORY
This is the 35th season that A.C.T. has brought the holiday fable of Ebenezer Scrooge and Tiny Tim to life for San Francisco audiences. When A.C.T. first presented A Christmas Carol in our 1976–77 season, the show immediately became a local sensation and an annual tradition. In 1985, San Francisco Chronicle writer Steven Winn mused, “It isn’t true that A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol is as enduring as the holiday itself. To a San Franciscan, it only seems that way.” He went on to celebrate Carol as “a generous, inclusive marvel” and “a celebration that fills the theater with first-timers—adults as well as children.” “Like Christmas itself,” he concludes, “it becomes all things to all people, reflecting our growth and change with each new exposure to it.”

For many, A.C.T.’s annual holiday production is a beautiful introduction to the wonders of live theater—and this is as true for our young actors as it is for our audiences. This season’s production welcomes 26 actors from our world-renowned Young Conservatory (YC) to the Geary stage. These aspiring performers rehearse and perform for two months alongside some of the Bay Area’s most beloved veteran professional actors as well as our third-year Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program actors-in-training, who take their young colleagues under their wings.

Training does not stop when actors “make it.” They must always be exercising their artistic muscles and pushing their craft further by taking classes, learning from their colleagues, and passing on their own knowledge to others. This idea has been fundamental to A.C.T.’s mission since the company’s founding in 1965, and our annual production of A Christmas Carol is a powerful example of that philosophy in practice.

When Artistic Director Carey Perloff and dramaturg Paul Walsh created our current adaptation of Charles Dickens’s classic tale in 2005, they wrote a script specifically designed for an intergenerational company, in which established actors would share their expertise with younger performers, who would renew the show every year with fresh energy—ensuring a vibrant performance by a close-knit community of artists.
“My first year here we had an actor in the company whose name was Sidney Walker,” remembers YC Director Craig Slaight, “one of the oldest people in the company at the time. He was playing Scrooge. I came through the office reception area one day, and I saw him sitting, talking to the boy playing Tiny Tim. I thought, ‘That’s about as rich as it gets, somebody in his 70s talking to an eight-year-old about the work.’”

Many relationships develop naturally over the course of the production’s run, but a formal mentorship program that Slaight developed also pairs Carol’s M.F.A. Program cast members with younger cohorts from the YC. Before rehearsals begin with the full cast, the M.F.A. Program and YC actors come together for a week of classes, where they discuss the world of Dickens’s play and begin to learn the period movement and voice technique required for the show, as well as the elements of etiquette they will need to know when they step into what is, for many, their first professional rehearsal process.

A rich dialogue ensues, and deep and often lasting bonds are formed between the older and younger students. “When the YC actors have somebody looking out for them in rehearsal and performance, they can ask questions without feeling embarrassed,” says Slaight. “It’s a once-in-a-lifetime experience for the kids and for the M.F.A. students. I know it pays off onstage, but I also think it pays off in their lives, in discovering the humanness of creating art, in a place that’s very different from most theaters.”

In addition to these performance opportunities, M.F.A. Program and YC students often meet in the classroom during the summer, as many of the M.F.A. Program actors spend their “vacation” between spring and fall sessions teaching in the YC. “I’m excited because I’ve seen the way that mentoring the YC has changed our M.F.A. students,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith. “On the one hand, the YC actors develop relationships with actors who aren’t adults to them, and on the other hand, when the M.F.A. actors teach, they solidify the lessons that they’ve been learning themselves.”

Third-year M.F.A. Program actor Rebekah Brockman, who plays the Ghost of Christmas Past in this season’s Carol, agrees that working with YC students makes her a better, more aware performer. “Kids don’t hold anything back, which makes me less confined in my choices. I feel like I have a lot of freedom to play around with them, but it also makes me check myself to make sure I’m leading well by example.”

Meanwhile, the M.F.A. Program students are themselves mentored by the veteran actors in the cast, including Cindy Goldfield, who is celebrating her ninth season in A Christmas Carol. “I always feed off the energy of the M.F.A. students and get a real boost of determination,” she explains. “Sometimes working with them makes me wish for a chance to go back to grad school and get ‘properly trained,’ but it also makes me realize how much years of experience counts.” In these relationships, too, the benefits are reciprocal, Goldfield says: “Several previous M.F.A. and YC mentees continue to be in my life as friends, colleagues, and inspiration.”

Before every performance, Goldfield leads the preshow warm-ups with the performers onstage. It is one of her favorite parts of the Carol experience. She passes along the story of M.F.A. Program alum Brian Keith Russel, who played Mr. Fezziwig years ago: he told her how seeing an A.C.T. performance as a little boy inspired him to become an actor.

“I point out that at every performance of Carol there will be at least one person in the audience who has never been to a show before,” Goldfield says, “and we have this opportunity to give them their first taste of this magical world.”

A Christmas Carol continues through December 24. Visit act-sf.org/christmascarol for tickets and more information about the show.
For more than 40 years, the Bay Area’s young performers have been coming to A.C.T. for actor training that is both fun and formative. Since Director Craig Slaight took over the Young Conservatory (YC) in 1988, the program has grown to offer four sessions a year, four intensives each summer, and the opportunity to participate in four productions and three cabaret ensembles every season. Last summer alone, the YC trained 426 students; currently there are 155 students enrolled in class and 26 working alongside professional Bay Area actors and A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program actors-in-training in A Christmas Carol.

Like A.C.T. itself, the YC is a local institution with an international reputation. There is hardly a conservatory or undergraduate acting program in the country that YC alumni have not attended. Many have gone on to successful careers in theater, film, and television.

The YC’s sophisticated programming is structured around the interests and needs of students of varying levels. There are introductory courses for those who are trying out acting for the first time. Others are aimed at students who have had prior theater experience and want to take their participation to the next level by working on technique. There are also tracks for advanced students (the “die-hards,” Slaight calls them): these include master classes and, the ultimate lesson, public performances. For the truly serious actors, Slaight began offering a course called Preparing for University and Conservatory Training (now, simply, the “Senior Seminar”), which helps high-school seniors determine which, if any, B.F.A. in acting program is right for them.

“I designed the curriculum so that students can drop in and get a taste or can have an extended journey like Darren Criss,” Slaight explains. “Darren came in at age eight to explore acting as he was exploring music, but he ended up staying all the way through his senior year of high school, took the Senior Seminar, and went to the University of Michigan.

for acting.” Criss (who plays Blaine on the hit television show Glee) returned to A.C.T. in April to headline last season’s Gala. Like countless other YC students, he performed in our mainstage production of A Christmas Carol.

Public performance is a key component of training in the YC. For years, new plays that have come out of the YC’s New Plays Program have been filling the neglected literary niche of dramatic work that views the world through the eyes of young people. Most recently, the YC produced [untitled] Reality Project, a co-commission with Scotland’s Aberdeen Performing Arts. Part of a two-year summer international exchange program with Aberdeen’s Young Persons Company, the play was developed last August with YC students who traveled to Scotland for two weeks of acting and cultural immersion. Next summer, young Scottish actors will come to San Francisco to workshop a play by American playwright Wendy Macleod while taking classes in the YC.

This fall also saw the first YC Cabaret Ensemble production of the season. The Cabaret Ensemble—along with the YC’s Musical Ensemble and Junior Cabaret Ensemble—offers young performers the opportunity to learn to act truthfully and grow characters through song. The next cabaret production, From the Great American Songbook, will take place in January. Next June, Slaight will direct the West Coast premiere of Darling, a lively new jazz-age musical by Ryan Scott Oliver and B. T. Ryback set in 1929 Boston in the turbulent weeks before the stock market crash.

“W. C. Fields said, ‘Never act with dogs or children,’” Slaight chuckles. “I don’t think he would have had a good time at A.C.T. We celebrate the child in all of us here all the time.”

This April, the YC will also produce Every 17 Minutes the Crowd Goes Crazy! a sardonic comedy by Pulitzer Prize–winning writer Paul Zindel.

Alumni Spotlight on Beth Behrs

After graduating from A.C.T.’s Young Conservatory, Beth Behrs attended The UCLA School of Theatre, Film, and Television and appeared on NCIS: Los Angeles and Castle and in a few independent films before landing a costarring role in 2 Broke Girls. The show premiered fall 2011 to 19.4 million viewers and won a People’s Choice Award for Favorite New TV Comedy.

How did the Young Conservatory prepare you for Two Broke Girls?

The YC taught me how to be a professional. The caliber of directors, teachers, and other actors that I had the opportunity to work with there upped my game and definitely helped to prepare me for the rigorous schedule and lifestyle of filming 24 episodes a year.

What advice do you have for young actors?

Study. Know your craft inside and out. Create your own opportunities! Get a group of friends together who are also aspiring artists and write, direct, film, and perform your own material. When I was up for 2 Broke Girls, the creators saw videos I had written and produced with a good friend on the website Funny or Die. It takes a tremendous amount of hard work to be successful in this business. Don’t give up.

A.C.T. Resident Artist Tyrone Davis grew up in inner-city Los Angeles. He developed a passion for theater while in elementary school, and he believes it saved his life. “I was surrounded by gangs, drugs, and violence,” says Davis. “There were very few opportunities for young people in my community. If I hadn’t discovered theater, I would be dead or in jail by now.”

Davis became the first person in his family to graduate from high school, the same year that his father passed away. Honoring his father’s advice, he went on to major in theater in college. During a visit to the Bay Area in 2006, his aunt surprised him with tickets to the A.C.T. production of August Wilson’s Gem of the Ocean. The experience made him realize that theater could not only change his life, but that he could use it to empower others.

In September, shortly after completing his M.F.A. in acting at California Institute of the Arts, Davis joined our staff to apprentice in theater education, community outreach, and artistic administration. His goal during his residency is to develop the skills and experience he will need to eventually establish a professional theater company for youth in the troubled neighborhoods of South Central LA.

While at A.C.T., Davis is teaching in our new in-depth, long-term programs in San Francisco continuation schools (Downtown High School and Ida B. Wells High School), in our community education programs in the Tenderloin, and in our Young Conservatory. Also a dedicated theater practitioner, Davis will perform the role of Brick in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof with the African-American Shakespeare Company in January. He was excited to talk to us about his philosophy and his experience at A.C.T.

How did you come to be so passionate about theater?
When I was nine years old, I played Cogsworth the Clock in Beauty and the Beast at school. It was the first time I felt powerful, like I had a voice, and I loved that feeling. When I went to college, I decided to study acting.

A.C.T.’s Gem of the Ocean was the first professional production I’d ever seen—we sat in the front row of The Geary. I was blown away. The characters felt like people from my life. I realized that theater could be a tool for change in my community. I could use it to create awareness and tell my story.

What makes A.C.T. a good place for your apprenticeship?

Gem of the Ocean changed my life and the way I saw theater, so it’s fitting for me to return here. I knew I wanted to learn from the best, and I have been amazed by how willing [A.C.T. Artistic Director] Carey [Perloff] and the rest of the A.C.T. staff have been to take a chance on me, to mentor me, and to let me be a part of the inner workings of the theater. Not only is A.C.T.’s reputation stellar, it has longevity, which is extremely important. A lot of new theater companies survive only a couple of seasons, and then they collapse. A.C.T. is teaching me how to create a lasting impact.

Working in a theater with a very new education department is also special, because it gives me insight into building something from the ground up. [Director of Education] Elizabeth Brodersen is amazing at making connections and being a presence in the San Francisco community, and she has such enthusiasm for developing effective new programs. I’m very honored that she’s involving me in developing the department curriculum—I love being involved in planning, then exploring what works and what doesn’t.

There are so many, because this is my dream. I wake up in the morning and do what I love to do. I don’t feel like I’m going to work. I love working with the students at the continuation high schools. Many of them come from disadvantaged backgrounds, and they haven’t been successful at other schools. They think, “School sucks, and I must suck, too. I’m not going to get anything out of going to class.” Where I come from, sports and music seem like the only alternatives to selling drugs. I try to show them that there are other routes, possibilities for change. When they tell their stories, they start to think about their lives. Seeing ambition and inspiration and hunger light up in a student for the first time is priceless.

I was working with one girl on a monologue about an argument she had with her mother. She wanted to go out to a party, and her mother wanted her to stay home. I asked her what the outcome was—what happened that night? She said she went to the party, and that she was shot while caught in the crossfire of a gang fight. “Write about that!” I told her, and she did. Her classmates had no idea what had happened to her, and I think when she shared her experience by performing her monologue, she found her voice. She started to realize that this was not the way to live. Now she’s writing more, and she’s always saying, “Tyrone, read this! Tyrone, what do you think about this?” Those moments make everything I do worthwhile.

CHARLES DICKENS was born February 7, 1812, in Portsmouth, England. His literary success began when Sketches by Boz, a collection of urban scenes, and The Pickwick Papers, a series of comic narratives written to accompany artistic engravings, were published in 1836. Soon followed Oliver Twist (1839), Nicholas Nickleby (1839), Barnaby Rudge (1841), Martin Chuzzlewit (1844), A Christmas Carol (1843), and David Copperfield (1850). Featuring dramatic plot twists and lively depictions of London street life, the most memorable aspect of his work was a gallery of larger-than-life characters, whose foibles and adventures immediately endeared them to millions of readers. His work, primarily published first in serial format, was easily adapted for the stage and appeared frequently at playhouses throughout England (always without the permission of the author, who did, however, have a great love of the theater and at one point in his life even intended to be an actor). In the 1850s Dickens’s marriage to Catherine Hogarth dissolved, and his work began to tackle darker themes and more fully criticize industrial society. The novels of this period include Bleak House (1853), Hard Times (1854), Little Dorrit (1857), A Tale of Two Cities (1859), and Great Expectations (1860). He wrote 15 novels in total, and all remain in print. An exhausting series of reading tours late in life led to a decline in Dickens’s health, and he died in 1870 working on the unfinished manuscript of The Mystery of Edwin Drood.

PAUL WALSH (Coadapter) is professor of dramaturgy and dramatic criticism at the Yale School of Drama. For nine years (1996–2005), he was dramaturg and

ELLEN RICHARD
(Executive Director) joined A.C.T. as executive director in August 2010. She served previously as executive director of off-Broadway’s nonprofit Second Stage Theatre in New York City. During her tenure at Second Stage, she was responsible for the purchase contract of the Helen Hayes Theatre and substantial growth in subscription income and growth in individual giving. Under Richard’s leadership, Second Stage provided the initial home for the Broadway productions Everyday Rapture, Next to Normal, and The Little Dog Laughed.

From 1983 to 2005, Richard enjoyed a rich and varied career with Roundabout Theatre Company. By the time she departed as managing director, Roundabout had been transformed from a small nonprofit on the verge of bankruptcy into one of the country’s largest and most successful theater companies of its kind. Richard is the recipient of six Tony Awards as producer, for Roundabout productions of Cabaret (1998), A View from the Bridge (1998), Side Man (1999), Nine (2003), Assassins (2004), and Glengarry Glen Ross (2005). Producer of more than 125 shows at Roundabout, she had direct supervision of all general and production management, marketing, and financial aspects of the theater’s operations. She conceptualized and oversaw the redesign of the three permanent Roundabout stages—Studio 54, the American Airlines Theatre, and the Harold and Miriam Steinberg Center for Theatre. She directed the location search for Cabaret and supervised the creation of that production’s environmental Kit Kat Klub.

Prior to her tenure at Roundabout, Richard served as business manager of Westport Country Playhouse, theater manager for Stamford Center for the Arts, and business manager for Atlas Scenic Studio. She began her career working as a stagehand, sound designer, and scenic artist assistant.

She has worked with people of all ages in venues around the country, including teaching in Hawaii and in Florence, Italy. Also a professional actor, she has performed in numerous off-off Broadway plays and at regional theaters, including A.C.T. In 2004 she toured London and Birmingham (U.K.) in Berkeley Repertory Theatre’s production of Continental Divide. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from Yale School of Drama.
In honor of Artistic Director Carey Perloff’s legacy at A.C.T. and her leadership within the Bay Area performing arts community, A.C.T.’s Board has launched an ambitious fundraising campaign to raise $2.5 million to support important initiatives that are part of Carey’s 20th Anniversary Season.

We are privileged to recognize these donors’ generosity during the September 1, 2011–September 30, 2012, period. Space limitations prevent us from listing all those generous support, including invitations to special events, ticket and merchandise discounts, and opportunities to experience behind-the-scenes tours of the theater.

Annual Fund donors make annual contributions of $75–$1,999 in support of A.C.T.’s operations and programs. They receive a variety of benefits in thanks for their generosity.

Special Subscription Discounts

A.C.T. gift certificates can be purchased in any packages by calling 415.749.2250. To enjoy ticket exchange privileges, insurance is required—limit one ticket per ID. Not valid for nonperformance days. Call 415.749.2228 and use American Express, Visa, or MasterCard; or fax your ticket request with credit card information to 415.749.2291. Tickets are also available 24 hours/day on our website at act-sf.org. All sales are final, and there are no refunds. Only current members may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2317 in an emergency.

A.C.T. Merchandise

Copies of Words on Plays, A.C.T.’s in-depth performance guide, are on sale in the main lobby, at the theater bars, at the box office, and online.

Refreshments

Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the theater.

Perfumes

The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Cell Phones!

If you carry a pager, beeper, cell phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Emergency Telephone

Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2317 in an emergency.

Latecomers

A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems

Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performances. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings

of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

FYI

The scenic, costume, lighting, and sound designers in LORT theaters are represented by United Scenic Artists, Local USA-829 of the IATSE.

A.C.T. operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors’ Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.
