About A.C.T.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Managing Director Heather Kitchen, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities.

A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.’s creative work. Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past three decades, more than 300 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of seven million people; today, A.C.T.’s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 270,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.’s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujamcnyn Theaters Award. In 2001, to celebrate A.C.T.’s 35th anniversary and Perloff’s 10th season, A.C.T. created a new core company of actors, who have become instrumental in every aspect of its work. Today A.C.T. is recognized nationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Since the reopening of the Geary Theater in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of audience expansion and financial stability. In 2001, A.C.T. began producing alternative work at Zeum Theater, which now serves as a venue for student productions and exciting new plays. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, now serves 3,500 students every year. It was the first actor training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university to receive a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, and Winona Ryder are among the conservatory’s distinguished former students. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.

THE BROTHERS COLLYER

The story of the Collyer Brothers, America's famous recluse, reads like a sensational tabloid piece. For more than 50 years, the facts surrounding the lives and deaths of Homer and Langley Collyer have not changed, but in the gaps between what is known and what can never be known, an legend has emerged—one that is part ghost story and part cautionary tale. Homer and Langley were two eccentric hermits who collected as much "stuff" it actually killed them. In The Dazzle, playwright Rich Greenberg lets his imagination run wild through the junk-filled rooms of the Collyer mansion to create an entirely fictional account of their fascinating story—less a historical chronicle then a prism through which to view the world. The following recounts the remarkable facts of what really happened to Homer and Langley Collyer.

On March 21, 1947, the 122nd street police station in New York City received a call from a man claiming that there was a dead body at 2078 Fifth Avenue. The police knew the house, a decaying three-story brownstone in a run-down part of Harlem, as an abode of hermits, Langley and Homer Collyer, two eccentric inclus. No one could recall having seen Homer for years. There were rumors that his dead body was in the house. Langley was seen only when he went out for errant sorties, usually at night.

The day after the call, patrolman William Barker broke into the second-floor bedroom. What he found there took his breath away. The house was filled from floor to ceiling with objects of every shape, size, and kind. It took him several hours to cross the few feet to where the body of Homer lay, threshed in an ancient charred remains. The autopsy report that Homer had not eaten for several days and had died of a heart attack. There was no sign of Langley, and the authorities immedoeately began to search for him. It took three weeks to sift through the estimated 136 tons of junk with which the house was filled. The tissue collection of objects included 14 grand pianos, two organs, and a clavi- chord; human medical specimens preserved in glass jars; the chassis of a Model-T Ford; a library of thousands of medical and engineering books; an armory of weapons; the top of a carriage; six U.S. flags and one Union Jack; a primitive X-ray machine; and 34 bank deposit books with balances totaling $3,007.18. Gradually the story of the "Hermits of Harlem" unfolded, and the presence of some of the contents of the house were explained. Homer Luuk Collyer and Langley Collyer were born in 1881 and 1885 respectively. Their father, Dr. Herman L. Collyer, was an eminent gynecologist and their mother, Susie Gage Frost Collyer, a well-born lady noted for her musical abilities. The family set up home at 2078 Fifth Avenue in then fashionable Harlem. But around 1909, Herman left. When he died in 1923, all the furniture, medical equipment, and books that he had collected over the years were taken back to Fifth Avenue and crammed into his wife's house. Langley had been trained as an engineer; Homer became a lawyer. Both were eccentric in innocuous ways—increasingly so when left to fend for themselves after their mother's death in 1929. The house was already cluttered with the contents of two large houses, but Langley stuffed it with yet more objects picked up on his nightly excursions. On more than one occasion thieves tried to break in and steal the fortune that was rumored to be kept in the house. Langley responded by building booby traps, intricate systems of trip wires and ropes that would bring tons of steel plates crashing down on intruders. A honeycomb network of tunnels carved out in the mountains of junk enabled Langley to glide his way to where Homer sat.

As newspapers revealed the secrets of 2078 Fifth Avenue, there was a final, grisly twist. On April 8, one of the workmen commissioned to clear the place raised a pole of debris near a spot where Homer had been found. His horrified gaze fell first on a foot, then the remains of the body. It had been gnawed by rats, but there was no doubt that it was Langley Collyer. Langley had died some time before his brother, suffocated under the garbage that had cascaded down upon him when he had sprung one of his own buglar traps.

The house was gradually emptied and its more valuable contents sold at auction. But despite the Collyers' lifelong hoarding, the 150 items raised only $1,800. Condemned as a health and fire hazard, number 2078 Fifth Avenue was razed. Today it is a tiny park.

INTRODUCING RICHARD GREENBERG

This Bay Area premiere of Richard Greenberg's The Dazzle marks the much-anticipated A.C.T. debut of a writer whose reputation as one of the American theater's finest and most vital voices has grown steadily since his first critical success, Eastern Standard, played on Broadway in 1988. Introducing Greenberg's work to A.C.T. audiences is an important component of the company's ongoing and deepening commitment to nurturing and producing the work of both emerging and established theater artists whose individual voices eden our collective theatrical experience. In recent seasons, A.C.T. has broadened this creative venture by presenting new work, and work by writers with whom our audiences might not yet be familiar, at the Geary Theater, as well as at smaller performance venues in San Francisco. The company of playwrights Michael Trentham (For the Pleasure of Seeing Her Again), Amy Fried (The Beard of Avoir), Richard Nelson (Goodnight Children Everywhere, James Joyce's The Dead, and Enrico IP), Mac Wellman (The Difficulty of Creating a Field, Constancy Congoun (The Misintelligence and The Interesting Pig)), Sarah Daniels (Duo), and A.C.T.'s own Carey Perloff (The Colleen of Rhodes), who have recently found at A.C.T. a supportive environment in which to test the artistic risks required to test and refine their work. The Dazzle also happens to serve as the perfect vehicle for the talents of three of the four members of A.C.T.'s core acting company.

Although Greenberg, at age 26, received Newday's George Oppenheimer Award for best new American playwright for his 1985 play The Bloodlifters, he first entered the national spotlight three years later when Eastern Standard moved to Broadway, following a strong review from the New York Times' Frank Rich. The prolific Greenberg has since built an impressive body of work, earning a reputation for writing exceedingly intelligent, often tender, and highly whimsical works for the stage that probe the basic longings of the human heart. Perhaps his best-known play is the time-traveling Three Days of Rain (1997), which was a hit in London and a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize for Drama. Highlights of just the last year or so include his Everett Beekin at Lincoln Center, his adaptation of Stramburg's Dance of Death (starring Helen Mirren and Ian McKellen) on Broadway, and the premieres of Greenberg's epic homage to baseball, Take Me Out, which opened here to acclaim at New York's Public Theater and London's Donmar Warehouse and moved to Broadway in February. His most recent play, The Violet Hour—the Dazzle, also set in New York in the early years of the 20th century—premiered in the fall at Greenberg's artistic home, South Coast Repertory in Costa Mesa, which has commissioned eight of his plays to date.

THE INELUCTABLE NATURE OF TIME

Set in the Collyers' now infamous Harlem mansion, The Dazzle found its roots in the playwright's Long Island childhood. Greenberg has said that, as a boy, he used to keep newspapers piled up in his room, drawing the ire of his parents. "They would say, 'It looks like the Collyer brothers in here,'" he recalled in a recent interview. While his father helped him research historical details, Greenberg has said that "some facts are absolutely accurate and true, but I've imagined it more than researched." His aim was not to portray the Collyers literally, but to use them, in imagining how they might have come to such bizarre and tragic ends, to examine the proverbial question, Am I my brother's keeper?

The Dazzle offers no unequivocal answer, but rather provides a framework within which to consider the very essence of human relationship. "Why do people stay together?" Greenberg has said. "They are confined to some destination or to each other. If you spill it out further, you're lying. I got bored when everything is explained to me, and I just don't buy it. Human nature is too variable and deep." Known for the Wildean wit of his dialogue ("Greenberg is one of the funniest playwrights of his generation," wrote Nancy Franklin in the New Yorker) and the eloquent humanity of his characters, Greenberg laces his plays with a haunting sense of poetry and a profound awareness of the relentless passage of time. "Is there a hun in your brain?" Greenberg asked an interviewer recently. "Something that's always there, so you barely notice it?... For me it's the arthmetic of time passing. The ineluctable nature of time, and the tricks of it. It's all I ever think about, so it finds its way into the plays."

In The Dazzle, as in the years pass, Homer and Langley retreat into a world of mounting disorder and isolation, watching the everyday world go by beneath their window in all its dischanted mundanity. I only retrospectively realize the similarities," Greenberg has said about his work, "but when I look back at the plays, they're about characters attempting to shape their own destinies, and people attempting to shape their own characters. And time and history happening in spite of them. Not to spit them, but despite them..."

Richard Greenberg's quotations are drawn from interviews published in the Los Angeles Times and San Diego Union-Tribune.

INTRODUCING RICHARD GREENBERG

THE DAZZLE IS BASED ON THE LIVES OF THE COLLYER BROTHERS, ABOUT WHOM I KNOW ALMOST NOTHING.

She is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

HEATHER M. KITCHEN (Managing Director) joined A.C.T. in 1996. Since that time, Kitchen has overseen the company’s expansion and been instrumental in fortifying the organization’s infrastructure and increasing support for A.C.T.’s artists and staff members. After earning her B.A. in drama and theater arts at the University of Waterloo in 1975, Kitchen began her career in stage management at the prestigious Stratford Festival. Other career highlights include four seasons as production manager of Theatre New Brunswick, a regional touring company located in Eastern Canada, and as general manager of The Citadel Theatre, then Canada’s largest regional theatre. Following 15 years of stage and production management, Kitchen received her M.B.A. from the internationally renowned Richard Ivey School of Business at The University of Western Ontario. She is an active member of the larger San Francisco community, currently serving on the board of the Commonwealth Club of California, and is a past member of the Bay Area Leadership Board of the American Red Cross and of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, San Francisco and the Peninsula. Kitchen is serving her third term on the executive committee of the League of Resident Theatres. She has also participated on peer review panels for Theatre Communications Group, the Canada Council of the Arts, and Forbes magazine’s Business and the Arts Awards.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director) oversees the administration of the A.C.T. Conservator’s Master of Fine Arts Programs, Young Conservatory, Summer Training Congres, and Studio A.C.T., in addition to serving as the master acting teacher of the M.F.A. Program. Before joining A.C.T., Smith served as director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting, scene study, and Shakespeare for six years. Also a professional actor, she has performed in regional theaters and in numerous off-off-Broadway plays, including work by Mac Wellman and David Greenspan. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIRE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne’s National Repertory Theater. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and George (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen’s Don’t Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Ibsen’s Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw’s Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International’s award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle. AT THE THEATER
The Geary Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The auditorium opens 30 minutes before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour prior to curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
A.C.T.-branded souvenirs—clothing, jewelry, videos, travel maps, and other novelty items—as well as books, scripts and Work on Plays, are on sale at the souvenir desk in the main lobby and at the Geary Theater Box Office.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sandwiches, salads, and other savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred's Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. There is a mini-bar in the main lobby. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Food and drink are not permitted in the auditorium.

Beverages
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarms, please make sure that it is set to the "off" position while you are in the theater. Or you may leave it and your seat number with the house manager, so you can be notified if you are called.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Best Rooms
Best rooms are located in Fred's Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the Geary Theater. Please call 415.749.2423 in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.
