Look closely at the MDX and you’ll find much more than a luxury SUV. You’ll find advanced safety features developed through rigorous testing. It begins with car-to-car research that more accurately reflects real-life collisions. The first crash simulator with pitching capabilities is used to simulate rear-end lift during a crash. And one of the world’s most sophisticated crash barriers helps analyze and improve the distribution of impact forces.

It continues with the Advanced Compatibility Engineering™ (ACE™) body structure that helps maintain the integrity of the passenger cabin during frontal collisions. There are dual-stage airbags and energy-absorbing knee bolsters. The MDX even integrates the Vehicle Stability Assist™ (VSA™) system with Super Handling All-Wheel Drive™ to help reduce the likelihood of a collision happening in the first place. With so many advanced safety features, it’s no surprise that the MDX received a 5-star crash-safety rating from NHTSA* and was named an IIHS 2009 Top Safety Pick. To learn more, visit acura.com.

ABOUT A.C.T.

American Conservatory Theater nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Executive Director Heather Kitchen, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.’s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past four decades, more than 320 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of more than seven million people; today, A.C.T.’s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 230,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.’s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award. In 2001, to celebrate A.C.T.’s 35th anniversary and Perloff’s 10th season, A.C.T. created a new core company of actors, who have become instrumental in every aspect of its work.

Today A.C.T. is recognized nationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Since the reopening of the Geary Theater (now the American Conservatory Theater) in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of audience expansion and financial stability. In 2001, A.C.T. began producing alternative work at Zeum Theater, which now serves as a venue for student productions and exciting new plays. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, led by Melissa Smith and George Thompson, now serves 3,000 students every year. It was the first actor training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, and Elizabeth Banks are among the conservatory’s distinguished former students. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.

Bolero for the Disenchanted 5
Dear Friends,

One of the fascinating things about American dramaturgy is that it is so endlessly various, because our culture is a weave of so many disparate cultural stories. With every new American play we have produced at A.C.T. we have explored a different corner of that tapestry: from the aftermath of the Japanese-American internment camp experience in Philip Kan Gotanda’s After the War to the Midwest–California conflicts in the wake of the Bay Area fires in The Quality of Life. The universe of José Rivera’s Boleros for the Disenchanted is at once totally specific and completely magical. It draws upon the Puerto Rico of José’s childhood in the fifties and travels to the deepest recesses of our hearts.

I first encountered Boleros last season when we were in rehearsals for José’s play Brainpeople at Zeum. Brainpeople was truly a brainteaser, so I was quite astonished to discover how limpid and accessible Boleros is—this is a play wrenched directly from the heart, filled with longing and desire and dreams. The play is clearly autobiographical, beginning with his mother’s multihued memories of the tiny town of Miraflorès in Puerto Rico where José spent his early childhood, and journeying to the bland army base in Dalesville, Alabama, where his parents spent much of their later years. But the play is also a fable, a magical exploration of the astonishing durability of love over a long period of time. It is enormously challenging to represent extended periods of time onstage; that prerogative is usually reserved for the novel. But José has come up with a fascinating structural solution to this quandary: he has written a play with two discrete sections, separated by 39 years, and with two quite distinct tones and qualities. He has said that what interests him most as a writer is the beginnings and endings of things: the first spark of love, for instance, and the last warming glow of its embers. What happens in between is left to our imaginations.

In Boleros, we begin in 1953, when Eusebio and Flora first meet, and then we leap to 1992, when their relationship is tested by illness, betrayal, and age. By a theatrical sleight-of-hand, in Boleros the young become old and their love transforms from the passion of youth into something infinitely more complicated and melancholy and surprising. It’s a complex, transformative journey for the actors, all of whom are making their A.C.T. debuts with this production and each of whom has a very specific personal connection to this material—from Rachel Ticotin, who called her Puerto Rican mother the night before she auditioned to make sure she got the pronunciation right; to Robert Beltran, who grew up in a huge Mexican family in Bakersfield and remembers the charismatics filling his town with religious fervor; to Dion Mucciacito, who was the only kid eating tamales in his elementary school in Alaska. The story of Boleros is both highly specific to the Puerto Rican experience and at the same time totally universal to the American experience: the question of what one gains and what one loses as one leaves one’s culture behind is enormous and never ending.

José has said that “plays are like maps that chart the course of our changes and transformations,” and this particular play travels through territory at once familiar and utterly mysterious. We are asked to consider whether love is destiny or choice, whether commitment is folly or wisdom, whether it is ever possible to predict when love will bloom and when it will die. The play, filled with José’s earthy poetry and wit, is both brutally honest and surprisingly hopeful.

The more you engage with a writer, the more you discover that every piece represents yet another aspect of a multifaceted personality. Part of the pleasure of producing writers on multiple occasions is the chance to watch them grow, and to see new parts of their stories reveal themselves. With Boleros, we are given a generous window onto José Rivera’s rich meditations on marriage, language, trust, and enduring love. I’m thrilled to continue this dialogue with José, and look forward to many more creative outings in the years to come!

Enjoy.

Yours,

Carey Perloff

FAMILY STORIES

An Interview with José Rivera

BY DAN RUBIN

José Rivera encourages every playwright to create his or her own genre. This may be why his own dramaturgy is difficult to define. Variously referred to as magical realism, surrealism, “mad realism,” and the theater of “more so,” the style of Rivera expands and contorts the ordinary into something beyond the conventionally “real,” yet still familiar. As A.C.T. audiences saw in last season’s production of Rivera’s Brainpeople, a simple—enough dinner party can quickly unravel into a psychological circus in which anything can happen and anyone—be it any of one character’s multiple personalities or the spirits of the hostess’s deceased parents—can unexpectedly grab the highest trapeze and launch themselves into metaphysical space. When asked to describe his writing, Rivera explains that he creates theater that “lives in the intersection of real and unreal and freely jumps that border in a theatrical way. The plays seek to examine some aspect of society in a way that the artist is given the permission to wander into the world of the unreal or the dreamlike.”

Rivera caught his first break on February 26, 1983—a day he celebrates as an anniversary—when The House of Ramon Iglesia, a play about his parents returning to Puerto Rico after living on Long Island for almost two decades, won a CBS–sponsored playwriting contest. He quit his day job immediately. He had no formal playwriting training, but he had been writing plays since high school, and in college he wrote, produced, and directed a play a year. Since 1983 he has become one of America’s most respected playwrights, earning OBIE awards for Marisol and References to Salvador Dali Make Me Hot and an Academy Award nomination for his film adaptation of The Motorcycle Diaries, while consistently pushing the boundaries of theatricality. In Boleros for the Disenchanted, however, Rivera takes a sabbatical from his exploration of unreality in order to pay homage to the simpler, yet no less dramatic, story of his parents’ marriage.

Puerto Rico in the 1950s still suffered profoundly from the economic repercussions of the Great Depression. At the same time, the cost of air travel between San Juan (Puerto Rico’s capital) and New York City dropped significantly. The outcome was a massive emigration from Puerto Rico to the U.S. mainland. Of the many pilgrims who fled poverty for the American promise were four-year-old José Rivera and his parents. In 1959, the family settled on Long Island, where they joined the local working-class community of Italian and Irish Americans. They were not welcomed warmly: José’s parents were cursed, firecrackers and rocks were hurled through their windows, and José was beaten and bullied at school until he found sanctuary in sports and theater. Growing up in this atmosphere, he remembers, “forced me to be in my head rather than the real world. The real world wasn’t very pleasant at times.”

José’s father worked various odd jobs, supporting his family but never realizing the American ideal of prosperity and security. After 19 years spent raising six children, José’s parents returned to Puerto Rico with his three youngest siblings in the late 1970s. They came back to the States when José’s father’s health declined. They remained nomadic for a while, living near their children in Ohio, then Georgia, and eventually settling near the Fort Rucker Army Base in Alabama where we catch up with them in Act II of Boleros.

Though Ramon Iglesia and Boleros are the most obvious examples, Rivera often adopts elements of his family’s personal stories for his work. Rivera explains: “My parents came over in the ’50s and they struggled, and nobody in my family went to college except for my sister and me. It feels like if I don’t write these stories, then nobody would know them. These are not people who get written about. Since I am lucky enough to have this ability, this is one way that this kind of person, this kind of family, will not be forgotten. They will live somewhere in the literary memory of this country.”

The week before rehearsals began for A.C.T.’s production of Boleros for the Disenchanted, Rivera spoke to us about what it was like to recreate his parents’ lifelong love story for the stage.

HOW DID THE PROCESS OF CREATING BOLEROS BEGIN FOR YOU?

The events of the first act are stories my mom told me over the years—how she met my father and the circumstances of her life in Puerto Rico in the 1950s. The Act II events I witnessed myself when my parents were living in Alabama. I had wanted to write a play about them for years, but it wasn’t until I put the two acts together in my mind that I knew what the play should be. Once that happened, the writing process happened very fast.

HOW WAS THE EXPERIENCE OF WRITING BOLEROS DIFFERENT FROM WRITING THE HOUSE OF RAMON IGLESCIA, WHICH IS ALSO ABOUT YOUR PARENTS?

The plays are separated by 30 years of life and writing experience. When I was writing The House of Ramon Iglesia, I was very aware of the great plays I wanted to emulate. I was reading a lot of Chekhov and O’Neill. Ramon Iglesia took a long time because I was just learning the craft of playwriting and I was very self-conscious about what I was doing. Whereas by the time I wrote Boleros, that craft was already innate to me, part of my unconscious process. I didn’t feel like I needed to search for form. So in that way, this play was a lot easier to write, even though emotionally the events of Boleros were much harder to deal with.

WHY WAS THAT?

Well Act I wasn’t, but Act II—with the decline of my parents and seeing the situation my father was in—was more difficult, and because my mom is still living I knew she would see the play, so I wanted to be respectful of her yet I wanted to be honest about what really happened. I stressed a lot about what she would think about it.

DID SHE ENJOY IT?

Yes, she did. I had sent it to her first to read, and then I took her to a rehearsal and the opening at Yale [Repertory Theatre] and the opening in Boston [at the Huntington Theatre Company]. I really wanted to get her prepared. It was tough: she was literally shaking with emotion at one point in rehearsal, especially the scene where the young soldier appears on the street corner and plays the jukebox, which is the same music my father played for her. It was just a lot of emotion to deal with. And of course Act II is really hard for her to watch. But ultimately the play is a celebration of her, her strength and her commitment to being with my father.

DID SHE EVER GIVE YOU NOTES CORRECTING YOU ON THE WAY THINGS REALLY HAPPENED?

She did give me one note. I couldn’t believe it: she didn’t like the name “Flora” for her character. [Laughter] She doesn’t like that name for some reason. So I asked her, “What would you call Rico during the rehearsal period of the New Haven production, The truth is, those little towns don’t change a lot. I was in Puerto ment be psychologically plausible and emotionally honest—that’s not easy to get to. It’s not like my other work.

WERE YOU EVER TEMPTED TO ALLOW THE WORLD TO BECOME FANTASTICAL?

Not really, but I did allow, at least in some passages, the language itself to be rich and lovely and magical. There are a few (not many) passages where I just let the characters go, and they speak in a way that you wouldn’t hear in real life.

YOU ENCOURAGE PLAYWRIGHTS TO WRITE FROM ALL OF THE SENSES, NOT JUST THE BRAIN. WHEN DOES THE BRAIN COME INTO YOUR PROCESS?

It’s early. I do feel I need a philosophical underpinning to the work so that I am not just writing theater but I am also presenting a thesis or some kind of point of view on life. Then that gets abandoned and I write from the other senses to make it as visual as possible, to make the language sing as much as possible, to make it an experience for the gut and the heart. Early in the process is where I do most of my “thinking,” and then that gets abandoned for something else. When we’re in rehearsal during table work, a lot of the ideas in the play get expressed because the actors and directors ask about them. It’s funny because I’m forced to reexamine some of the ideas I had forgotten about.

WHEN YOU CREATED PUERTO RICO IN THE FIRST ACT, WERE YOU WORKING FROM YOUR OWN MEMORIES OR WERE YOU WORKING LARGELY OFF THE STORIES FROM YOUR FAMILY?

The truth is, those little towns don’t change a lot. I was in Puerto Rico during the rehearsal period of the New Haven production, and I went back to the little town where my mom lived, and it still feels the same from my memory of being [there when I was] four years old. Certain things change: the houses are bigger and people are better fed, but kids who don’t have cars ride horses wherever they need to go, bareback; people still have animals—goats, horses, chickens, cows—and pluck mangos out of the trees. So there are a lot of similarities. The play is a mixture of my memories, my mother’s memories, some fiction, some invention on my part. The dialogue of 1953 was invented; obviously I wasn’t there. My mom was very loquacious, but my dad wasn’t, so the young soldier in Act I is much more of a speaker than my father ever was.

YOU CONSISTENTLY WRITE ABOUT THE PUERTO RICAN EXPERIENCE IN AMERICA. HOW DOES BOLEROS FIT INTO THAT CONVERSATION?

A lot of plays deal with the postmigration experience in the United States and what that did to Puerto Ricans who lived here: the promise of the New World, the myth of America, and what people did to provide for their families. Act II is the crushing reality of what that myth ended up becoming. It is a migration story.

In a lot of my plays the central characters are yearning for home and yearning to belong. A lot of characters are without family, rootless, disconnected. I find that very theatrically interesting and [that it] reflects the Puerto Rican experience because we are from a country that is not a country: it is a territory of the United States without sovereignty. We are a people without a country.

DURING THESE DIFFICULT ECONOMIC TIMES, WHAT DO YOU THINK THE PRIORITIES OF THEATER NEED TO BE?

I think it’s the old cliché from Hamlet about holding up a mirror to nature. It is more urgent than ever to be socially responsible and to talk about the important issues of the period. I would hate to see the theater use this as an excuse to get safer and more escapist. I think it is a time to be bold and bring audiences into an experience they are not going to get elsewhere. There is no substitute for the live event. There is that feeling that—even if you know the play, and even though you know it’s scripted—maybe this is really happening in front of us. It has never happened before. There is no way to predict the next moment. When theater is working on all cylinders, there is a thrill of going into the unknown with a group of people.

MICHAEL PALLER (Dramaturg) joined A.C.T. as resident dramaturg and director of humanities in August 2005. He began his professional career as literary manager at Center Repertory Theatre (Cleveland), then worked as a play reader and script consultant for Manhattan Theatre Club, and has since been a dramaturg for George Street Playhouse, the Berkshire Theatre Festival, Barrington Stage Company, Long Wharf Theatre, Roundabout Theatre Company, and others. He dramaturged the Russian premiere of Tennessee Williams’s Small Craft Warnings at the Sovremennik Theater in Moscow. Paller is the author of Gentlemen Callers: Tennessee Williams, Homosexuality, and Mid-Twentieth-Century Drama (Palgrave Macmillan, 2005) and has written theater and book reviews for the Washington Post, Village Voice, Newsday, and Mirabella magazine. Before his arrival at A.C.T., he taught at Columbia University and the State University of New York at Purchase.

MERYL LIND SHAW (Casting Director) joined the A.C.T. artistic staff as casting director in 1993. She has cast roles for Magic Theatre, the Huntington Theatre Company, Arizona Theatre Company, the San Francisco Symphony and Opera, and the San Francisco productions of White Christmas, Jitney, and Picasso at the Lapin Agile. Before joining A.C.T. as casting director, she stage-managed more than 60 productions in theaters throughout the Bay Area, including A.C.T.’s Creditors and Bon Appétit! She was resident stage manager at Berkeley Repertory Theatre for twelve years and production stage manager at the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival for three seasons. She has served on the Bay Area advisory committee of Actors’ Equity Association, the negotiating committee for the LORT contract (1992 and 1993), and the board of trustees of the California Shakespeare Festival. She has taught or guest lectured at A.C.T., Rutgers University, Carnegie Mellon University, Santa Clara University, St. Mary’s College, and San Francisco’s Academy of Art University, among others.

ELISA GUTHERTZ (Stage Manager) most recently worked on Rich and Famous, The Quality of Life, What You Will, Curse of the Starving Class, Speed-the-Plow, and The Rainmaker at the American Conservatory Theater and on the A.C.T. production of Death in Venice at Zeum.

Theater. Her numerous other productions for A.C.T. include Blackbird, The Little Foxes, A Number, Sexual Perversity in Chicago, Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, A Moon for the Misbegotten, Well, Eve Ensler’s The Good Body, Levee James, Waiting for Godot, The Three Sisters, The Misanthrope, Long Day’s Journey into Night, Tartuffe, Mary Stuart, The Rose Tattoo, and A Streetcar Named Desire. She has also stage–managed The Mystery of Irma Vep, Suddenly Last Summer, Rhinoceros, Big Love, Civil Sex, Collected Stories, and Cloud Tectonics at Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Other productions include The Good Body at the Booth Theatre on Broadway, Big Love at Brooklyn Academy of Music, and The Vagina Monologues at the Alcazar Theatre.

COURTNEY AMES (Assistant Stage Manager) previously worked on the A.C.T. First Look workshop of José Rivera’s Brainpeople at Stanford University. Other local credits include TheatreWorks’s It Ain’t Nothin’ But the Blues, Théophile North, and M. Butterfly; Marin Theatre Company’s My Children! My Africa!, The Seafarer, and Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris; and American Musical Theatre of San Jose’s The Full Monty and Little Shop of Horrors. She received her masters of fine arts degree in stage management from UC San Diego.

PATTI AND RUSTY RUEFF (Executive Producers) are A.C.T. subscribers who have both loved and actively participated in theater their entire lives, attending various theaters together for the past two decades. After serving on the boards of regional theaters in Dallas, Texas, and Taos, New Mexico, they wanted to get involved in theater in the Bay Area, where they made their permanent home in 1998. Rusty, former CEO of the digital music commerce company SNOCAP and executive vice president of Electronic Arts (EA), joined the A.C.T. Board of Trustees in 2003 and now co-chairs the Committee on Trustees and Governance. Patti is a former special events consultant. She chaired A.C.T.’s wildly successful Ruby Jubilee in April 2007 and co-chaired the 2006 and 2008 A.C.T. galas. Patti is currently in her first term as president of the Hillsborough Auxiliary for the Family Service Agency of San Mateo County.

CARLIE WILMANS (Executive Producer) joined the A.C.T. Board of Trustees in 2005 and, with a passion for developing new, multidisciplinary works, lends her time to the Next Generation Campaign Committee and the New Works Committee. Born and raised in San Diego County, she is a director of the Phyllis C. Wattis Foundation. With bachelor’s and master’s degrees in art history, she is a founder of the 500 Capp Street Foundation and devotes her time to the boards of several other arts organizations, including San Francisco Museum of Modern Art and California College of the Arts.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE AN A.C.T. PRODUCER

The process of bringing a play—particularly new work—to the stage is a complex, challenging, and ultimately deeply gratifying experience for all involved. At A.C.T. an essential component of that process is the support provided by members of the A.C.T. Producers Circle, whose generosity enables A.C.T. to bring innovative, groundbreaking productions to our stage. Executive producers—like A.C.T. Trustee Rusty Rueff, who with his wife, Patti, has produced six A.C.T. productions—also have the opportunity to participate in every stage of the creative process. Rueff explains what the experience means to him:

“Regardless of the medium—whether it be visual or performing arts—our ‘thing’ is to see the creative process unfold and come to life. What I have learned over the years is that what happens throughout that process—from the first reading of a play by the cast and director (and sometimes in the presence of the playwright), through studio rehearsals, into previews and opening night, and sitting in the booth to hear the stage manager ‘call the show’—is the creation of magic. What starts as something so rough and raw that it seems unimaginable that it will ever make it successfully to ‘the big stage’ ultimately comes alive and pulls together on opening night, and real magic is created. And as producers we can bask in being a part of that process.

“At the annual A.C.T. gala someone asked me, ‘What do you get out of executive producing?’ The answer came easy: We receive the intrinsic reward of being ‘noncreatives’ who can be a part of bringing to life a production that is unique and special for the audience and the actors.”

For information about becoming a member of A.C.T.’s Producers Circle, contact Paul Knudsen at 415.439.2353 or pknudsen@act-sf.org.

CAREY PERLOFF (Artistic Director) is celebrating her 17th season as artistic director of A.C.T., where she most recently directed Tom Stoppard’s Rock ‘n’ Roll, John Ford’s Tis Pity She’s a Whore, and Nikolai Gogol’s The Government Inspector. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff has also directed for A.C.T. the world premieres of Philip Kan Gotanda’s After the War (A.C.T. commission) and her own adaptation (with Paul Walsh) of A Christmas Carol, the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s The Invention of Love and Indian Ink and Harold Pinter’s Celebration and The Room; A.C.T.-commissioned translations/adaptations of Hecuba, The Misanthrope, Enrico IV, Mary Stuart, Uncle Vanya, and A Mother (based on Maxim Gorky’s Vasa Zhelezovskiy); Harley Granville-Barker’s The Voysey Inheritance (adapted by David Mamet); the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian’s Singer’s Boy; and major revivals of Bertolt Brecht/Kurt Weill’s Happy End (including a critically acclaimed cast album recording), A Doll’s House, Waiting for Godot, The Three Sisters, The Threepenny Opera, Old Times, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Creditors, Home, The Tempest, and Stoppard’s Travesties, The Real Thing, Night and Day, and Arcadia. Perloff’s work for A.C.T. also includes Marie Ndiaye’s Hilda, the world premieres of Marc Blitzstein’s No for an Answer and David Lang/Mac Wellman’s The Difficulty of Crossing a Field, and the West Coast premiere of her own play The Colosus of Rhodes (Susan Smith Blackburn Award finalist). Her play Luminescence Dating premiered in New York at The Ensemble Studio Theatre, was coproduced by A.C.T. and Magic Theatre, and is published by Dramatists Play Service. Her play Waiting for the Flood has received workshops in A.C.T.’s First Look series and at New York Stage & Film and Roundabout Theatre Company; her latest play, Higher, was developed at New York Stage and Film and as part of A.C.T.’s First Look series at Stanford University. Her one-act play The Morning After was a finalist for the Heideman Award at Actors Theatre of Louisville. Perloff has collaborated as a director on new plays by many notable contemporary writers, including Gotanda, Robert O’Hara, and Lucy Caldwell. She is currently developing a new dance-theater piece, The Tossa Project, with choreographer Val Caniparoli; a major production of Phèdre (translated by Timberlake Wertenbaker) for the Stratford Shakespeare Festival; and a new Bacchae for the Getty Center in Los Angeles.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Eléctra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language and The Birthday Party, and many classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, Classic Stage won numerous OBIE Awards, including the 1988 OBIE for artistic excellence. In 1993, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A recipient of France’s Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres and the National Corporate Theatre Fund’s 2007 Artistic Achievement Award, Perloff received a B.A. Phi Beta Kappa in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. She is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

HEATHER KITCHEN (Executive Director), now in her 13th season with A.C.T., has strengthened the organization’s infrastructure and overseen the company’s expansion to include the development and performance of new work and the addition of a third year to A.C.T.’s acclaimed Master of Fine Arts Program. Her decision to undertake an M.B.A. degree from the Richard Ivey School of Business at The University of Western Ontario followed a 15-year career in stage, tour, and production management ranging across Canada, the United States, and the United Kingdom. Credits include the Stratford Festival, Canadian Stage Company, Charlottetown Festival, Theatre New Brunswick, New Play Centre, Vancouver, and Neptune Theatre in Halifax. As general manager of The Citadel Theatre, Kitchen managed a five-theater performing arts complex and school that annually produced 16 productions, an International Children’s Festival, and a Teen Festival. As a member of the executive committee of the Edmonton Performing Arts Consortium, Kitchen authored the benchmark study Economic Impact of the Nonprofit Arts in Edmonton. An active community member, Kitchen serves on the board of the Commonwealth Club of California, as well as the board of the National Corporate Theatre Fund in New York. She is a past member of the San Francisco Leadership Board of the American Red Cross, the board of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, San Francisco and the Peninsula, and the Salvation Army Auxiliary in Edmonton and served three terms on the executive committee of the League of Resident Theatres. She has also participated on peer review panels for Theatre Communications Group, Canada Council of the Arts, and Forbes magazine’s Business and the Arts Awards. The San Francisco Business Times has named Kitchen one of the most influential women in business in the Bay Area for the past five years.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director) oversees the administration of the A.C.T. Conservatory’s Master of Fine Arts Program, Young Conservatory, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T., in addition to serving as the master acting teacher of the M.F.A. Program. Before joining A.C.T. in 1995, Smith served as director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting for six years. She has worked with people of all ages in venues around the country, including teaching in Hawaii and in Florence, Italy. Also a professional actor, she has performed in numerous off-off Broadway plays and at regional theaters, including A.C.T. In 2004 she toured London and Birmingham (U.K.) in Berkeley Repertory Theatre’s production of Continental Divide. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIRE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne’s National Repertory Theater as an actor and stage manager. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and Georgy (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen’s Don’t Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Isen’s Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw’s Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International’s award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle.

Dear Friends,

From that first moment I stepped onto the A.C.T. stage in The Black Rider five years ago, I knew I had found a home—a place where artists and audiences can come to know each other over time and together can take risks and share experiences. I am constantly inspired and challenged here to find truth in my work, whether I’m performing onstage or mentoring students in our conservatory.

A.C.T. is breaking new ground in the American theater—an accomplishment that would not be possible without the generosity of A.C.T.’s Annual Fund contributors. With each new production, we strive to make theater that matters, that is bold and exciting, heartfelt and passionate. For me, where else but A.C.T. would I be given the chance to dance with a prima ballerina from San Francisco Ballet?

Your support breathes life into everything we do here. During these difficult times, the opportunity that live theater provides to lose ourselves in the moment of the play, to come together as a community and gain new perspectives, is more vital than ever. Please consider making a contribution to A.C.T. with your subscription, single ticket purchase, or online at www.act-sf.org and help us keep A.C.T. a thriving part of the Bay Area. We can’t do it without you.

Sincerely,

Jack Willis
A.C.T. Core Acting Company

P.S. As an Annual Fund donor, you are invited to join us for upcoming behind-the-scenes tours of the A.C.T. Prop and Scene Shop (May 14) and Costume Shop (May 21). Annual Fund donors make annual contributions of $75–$1,499 in support of A.C.T.’s operations and programs. They receive a variety of benefits in thanks for their generous support, including invitations to special events, ticket and merchandise discounts, and opportunities to experience behind-the-scenes tours of the theater. We are privileged to recognize these donors’ generosity during the March 1, 2008–March 31, 2009, period. Space limitations prevent us from listing all those who have generously supported the Annual Fund. For information about giving to the A.C.T. Annual Fund, please contact Emily Carr at 415.439.2462 or ecarr@act-sf.org.

April 19, 2009 ★ Carla Crane and Chandra Geiger Gordon, Co-chairs

In addition to their annual gifts, the following individuals and businesses made generous commitments to A.C.T.’s 2009 gala, Illuminate the Night, Sunday, April 19, 2009. A benefit event in support of A.C.T.’s conservatory for actor training and youth education programs, Illuminate the Night featured Tony Award winners Judy Kaye and Anika Noni Rose. The spectacular evening united Bay Area community leaders, philanthropists, and artists in celebration of the next generation of professional actors in American theater.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Rest rooms are located in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the theater. Please call 415.749.2ACT in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

A.C.T. is pleased to announce that an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is now available on site.

A.F.I.L.I.A.T.I.O.N.S
A.C.T. is a constituent of Theatre Communications Group, the national organization for the nonprofit professional theater. A.C.T. is a member of the League of Resident Theaters, Theatre Bay Area, Union Square Association, San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, and San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau. A.C.T. is a participant in the National Theatre Artist Residency Program, administered by Theatre Communications Group and funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts.

A.C.T. operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theaters and Actors’ Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.

The scenic, costume, lighting, and sound designers in LORT theaters are represented by United Scenic Artists, Inc., an independent national labor union.

A.C.T. is supported in part by an award from the National Endowment for the Arts.

A.C.T. is supported in part by a grant from the Grants for the Arts/San Francisco Hotel Tax Fund.
