ABOUT A.C.T.

American Conservatory Theater nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.’s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past four decades, more than 320 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of more than seven million people; today, A.C.T.’s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 230,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.’s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award. In 2001, to celebrate A.C.T.’s 35th anniversary and Perloff’s 10th season, A.C.T. created a new core company of actors, who have become instrumental in every aspect of its work.

Today A.C.T. is recognized nationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Since the reopening of the Geary Theater (now about a.c.t.) in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of audience expansion and financial stability. In 2001, A.C.T. began producing alternative work at Zeum Theater, which now serves as a venue for student productions and exciting new plays. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, now serves 3,000 students every year. It was the first actor training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, Anika Noni Rose, and Elizabeth Banks are among the conservatory’s distinguished former students. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.

Dear Friends,

I love virtuosity. One of my favorite things about live theater is watching a performer do something remarkable in real time (like Olympia Dukakis telling the entire story of a woman’s life and feelings just through the expressivity of her face and body in Vigil), or seeing a single directorial touch that explodes the emotional life of a play (like Emma Rice’s film of the waves crashing against the shore and the lovers falling backwards at their first meeting in Brief Encounter), or listening to an exquisitely expressed piece of language that cuts to the heart of a feeling, as in Racine’s Phèdre: “This is not sweet love coursing through my veins / But Venus tooth and claw gnawing my limbs.”

Virtuosity is the first thing that came to mind when I reread Alan Ayckbourn’s The Norman Conquests as we prepared for this production of Round and Round the Garden, which is the third part of that trilogy of plays. Ayckbourn is such an effortless craftsman that one could easily overlook the sheer virtuosity of this delightful cycle, which explores a perfectly balanced ensemble of six characters and their tangle of hilariously fraught relationships. It helps that the performers in our production of Garden have collaborated with each other often in the course of many productions over many years, so they have a rich history upon which to build. They are aided immeasurably by comic master John Rando, our director, and by the vividly imagined physical world of designer Ralph Funicello, a member of the A.C.T. artistic family who has been creating onstage worlds in our gorgeous theater since the company’s earliest days in San Francisco. Ralph had the wonderful notion of creating an ivy-covered house that is as hairy and full of libido as Norman himself. This is a play about unbridled desire as it collides with bourgeois convention, and while it is certainly a product of its time, reveling in new notions of open marriage, feminism, and free expression, it contains within it absolutely universal truths about the unpredictable nature of male-female relationships and the restlessness of the human spirit.

Meanwhile, as I write this letter, our studios and offices are abuzz with activity: we are preparing to go into rehearsals with our world premiere of The Tosca Project, to launch the 2010 graduates of our esteemed Master of Fine Arts Program into their professional careers, and to open Craig Slaight’s visionary Rufus Wainwright musical for the Young Conservatory, Beautiful Child. At the same time, we are in the midst of an institution-wide strategic planning process to explore the next ten years at A.C.T., both in terms of the kinds of work we want to explore and the role we want to play in the community.

And we are thrilled to have announced our 2010–11 season, which is filled with the ambitious, eclectic, and entertaining work for which A.C.T. is acclaimed. Next season is all about visionary collaborations and storytelling: it includes our welcome to the astonishing new writer Tarrell McCraney with his Marcus; Or the Secret of Sweet, part of a city-wide celebration of his remarkable trilogy, The Brother/Sister Plays; our international collaboration with Vancouver’s visionary Electric Company Theatre on their multimedia No Exit; our celebration of the late great Harold Pinter with his masterpiece The Homecoming, accompanied by a memorial to his life and work; our reunion with the divinely funny Bill Irwin, who teams up with our core acting company, our exceptional M.F.A. Program students, and the best local clowns to create Scapin; and our much-anticipated musical exploration of Armistead Maupin’s iconic and beloved Tales of the City.

We couldn’t be more excited about the variety, scope, and sheer pleasure of the work ahead, and look forward to sharing it with all of you.

Finally, we want to take a moment to celebrate the wildly successful conclusion of our Next Generation Campaign, which provides the first-ever endowment for our distinguished institution, to ensure that it will have a long and healthy life well into the future. To ALL of you who have been part of this effort, we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. The fact that we accomplished this hugely ambitious campaign in the worst economy in memory is a testament to the depth of passion and commitment of this community for live theater and for training future generations of theater artists and audiences. We have much in store for you, and are deeply grateful for your continued support.

Yours,

Carey Perloff,

THE MOLIÈRE OF THE MIDDLE CLASSES

BY KATIE MAY

The author of some 74 plays, Alan Ayckbourn is one of the most produced playwrights of all time (second only to Shakespeare) and the most produced playwright in his own lifetime. He also holds the record for having the most plays running simultaneously in London’s West End (The Norman Conquests, Absurd Person Singular, and Absent Friends) and on Broadway (The Norman Conquests and Absurd Person Singular), all in the year 1975. His plays have won countless awards, including a Laurence Olivier Special Award in 2009 for lifetime contribution to the theater.

Despite his popularity, Ayckbourn’s work has typically been met with a certain amount of academic snobbery. Often hailed as the “Molière of the middle classes” for his precise and almost cruelly comic depiction of a particularly ordinary slice of English life, Ayckbourn has been attacked for the narrowness of his view, by critics who favor instead his more political contemporaries (and fellow knights) Sirs David Hare, Tom Stoppard, and Harold Pinter. Director Peter Hall, who championed Ayckbourn’s plays at London’s National Theatre, once told him: “If you didn’t write so much they’d realize you were quite good.”

Ayckbourn makes no apologies, however, either for his commercial success or for his injection of comedy into even his most serious dramas. “I have an ability to make audiences laugh, so I should treasure that. I don’t want to lose that,” said Ayckbourn in a 2007 interview with London’s Telegraph. “There are plenty of people who can make audiences cry. Unlike David Hare, who writes about the state of the nation and current affairs, I write about domestic affairs. I see myself more as a Jane Austen who can’t seem to say the right thing while Comforting the bereaved Colin after his fiancée has died in a drowning accident. (When asked if she would like milk in her tea, Marge innocently replies: “Yes, but don’t drown it.”)

In his 2002 book, The Crafty Art of Playmaking, Ayckbourn writes: “Comedy is an essential part of any play. Without light how can we possibly create shadow? It’s like a painter rejecting yellow. I think if I’ve contributed anything to the sum of modern playwriting it has been to encourage comedy and drama to exist together as they used to in the days of old.” This philosophy is perhaps no better illustrated than in Ayckbourn’s smash hit, and possibly seminal work (it’s hard to pick from 70+ full-length plays), The Norman Conquests, in which an inexplicably and often confoundingly charming Norman relentlessly pursues both of his sisters-in-law, right beneath his wife’s nose, in a trilogy of plays that both celebrate and poignantly satirize the sexual freedom of the early 1970s and the dark truths and disappointments that often lie beneath the surface of any marriage.

Following his appointment as permanent artistic director of The Library (now the Stephen Joseph) Theatre in Scarborough, England, in 1972, The Norman Conquests were Ayckbourn’s 1973 commission to himself. The project came about as the result of an off-the-cuff remark to a journalist who had asked him at the end of the previous summer’s season, “What are you working on next?” Ayckbourn, who admits he had no idea what he was going to be

Dr. David Arm went on to direct a second trilogy, The Roundabout, consisting of Round the Garden, Round the Corner, and Round the Corner Again, all of which were revived in 2008 to huge success and won the Edinburgh Comedy Award. The Roundabout also became the first comedy trilogy to be published, with the works containing the Crucial Line: "You can’t say things. You can only drop hints."

Ayckbourn’s plays have won countless awards, including for best revival of a play. Despite his unrelenting commitment to making his audiences laugh, Ayckbourn is in fact a master of contrasts—his deeply flawed characters are typically so desperately unhappy that it is a wonder his audiences don’t cry more often. Perhaps it is a testament to the precision of his craft and his seemingly flawless timing that Ayckbourn is able to bring the lightness of laughter to some of the darkest situations; among his best running jokes are the continually thwarted attempts at kitchen suicide found in Absurd Person Singular and the painfully awkward group of acquaintances in Absent Friends who just can’t seem to say the right thing while comforting the bereaved Colin after his fiancée has died in a drowning accident. (When asked if she would like milk in her tea, Marge innocently replies: “Yes, but don’t drown it.”) working on next, airily replied: “Possibly a trilogy, who knows?” When the same journalist called the following March to ask how the trilogy was coming along, Ayckbourn realized he had better get to work. Two weeks later, Table Manners, Living Together, and Round and Round the Garden—later collectively titled The Norman Conquests—were born.

Because Scarborough is a vacation destination with tourists arriving and departing daily, Ayckbourn was careful to bear in mind that few people would be able to attend the theater three nights in a row. As a result he wrote three thematically related plays—each telling the same story of a weekend of hilariously attempted infidelity, but each depicting events taking place in three different parts of the house—plays that not only stand alone, but were also written “crosswise.” In other words, rather than progressing linearly to write one play after the other, Ayckbourn wrote scene one of Round and Round the Garden (considered the most conventionally structured play of the three, with an identifiable beginning, middle, and end), followed by scene one of the other two plays, then scene two of all three plays, and so on to the story’s conclusion. “I found myself grappling with triplet sisters all with very different personalities,” writes Ayckbourn of the trilogy. “Each play, although dealing with the same characters and events, began to develop a distinct atmosphere of its own. . . . Although very closely related thematically and in every other way, they were meant to be enjoyed as individual plays.”

Collected below (by Simon Murgatroyd, Ayckbourn’s official archivist) are some of Ayckbourn’s thoughts, expressed in interviews throughout his long and prolific career, about comedy, drama, and the creation and enduring appeal of Round and Round the Garden and its sister plays.

WHY DID YOU DECIDE TO WRITE THE NORMAN CONQUESTS AS THREE SEPARATE PLAYS?

I wanted to explore offstage life. That is, the life of characters immediately before they come on and just after they leave the stage. I was also interested in experimenting with theatrical form. Whether in viewing the same weekend three times and making each play a complete evening in itself, I could also uncover fresh insights and altered perceptions of the characters each time someone sat down to re-see it. And whether seeing them in different orders would change their perception. As far as I know this had never been tried and although it owes a lot to the form, it’s not strictly multiviewpoint theater. I love pushing theater to see how far it will shove.

HOW DIFFICULT WAS IT TO WRITE THE NORMAN CONQUESTS CROSSWISE?

I think it all seemed fairly easy at the time. The problem was that one can never, as the writer, read the plays individually with an innocent eye. I needed several fresh pairs of eyes to read them before I was assured that they worked “downwards” as well as crosswise. It was the natural way to write those plays. I needed to cross-plot the parallel stories and it was the simplest way of keeping track. I finished two of them in one night. I doubt that I’ll ever do that again.

WHAT MADE YOU CHOOSE THE DINING ROOM, SITTING ROOM, AND GARDEN AS LOCATIONS FOR YOUR TRILOGY?

They were sort of logical locations. I’d just done kitchens (three of them) in Absurd Person Singular, so I couldn’t use them again. Living rooms and dining rooms seemed ideal locations for people to assemble or pass through, giving me a great freedom to move my characters about. A lot of The Norman Conquests is about getting people on and off. The garden naturally followed and gave the piece a nice contrast. Drama always has such a different feel when it’s out of doors.

BENEATH THE HUMOR OF THE NORMAN CONQUESTS, THERE IS A DARKER SIDE WHERE HUMAN WEAKNESSES ARE EXPOSED. WAS IT YOUR INTENTION TO WRITE THE PLAY IN THIS WAY?

I always set out, when I write a play, with some fairly serious intentions. The stronger the serious base upon which I build a play, the more I can allow my humorous side to run away a bit. I love this tension that the comic and the serious create when they run successfully side by side. It’s a matter of balance; too dark becomes unbearable; too light and you are in danger of laughing at the characters, which is really, for a writer, a terrible act of betrayal.
A BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF ALAN AYCKBOURN

Alan Ayckbourn was born in Hampstead in 1939 to a violinist father and a mother who was a writer. No doubt he inherited their creativity, but a bigger gift was his first close-up view of two people who couldn’t be happy together. By 1945 they had split up, and in 1948 his mother married her bank manager. They were utterly incompatible, and she had a complete breakdown before Alan persuaded her to leave home. He left school at 17 with two A-levels and an exhaustive knowledge of miserable relationships perceived through the woman’s eyes, which may explain so much of his writing. Two years in regional theater as an actor and stage manager led in 1959 to the writing of his first play, The Square Cat, for Scarborough’s theater-in-the-round at the instigation of his then employer and subsequent mentor, Stephen Joseph. Some 73 plays later, his work has been translated into more than 35 languages, is performed on stage and television throughout the world, and has won countless awards. There have been English and French screen adaptations, the most notable being Alain Resnais’s fine film of Private Fears in Public Places.

Major successes include Relatively Speaking, How the Other Half Loves, Absurd Person Singular, Bedroom Farce, A Chorus of Disapproval, The Norman Conquests, A Small Family Business, Henceforward…, Comic Potential, Things We Do for Love, House & Garden, and My Wonderful Day. Ayckbourn is also a noted director, and it was only in 2009 that he retired as artistic director of the Stephen Joseph Theatre, Scarborough, a post he held for 36 years. Indeed, he would perhaps consider his greatest achievement to be the establishment of this permanent home for the theater-in-the-round company he first worked for all those years ago, when the splendid two-auditoria complex fashioned from a former Odeon Cinema opened in 1996.

Ayckbourn’s current plans include directing a revival of Taking Steps at Richmond’s Orange Tree in-the-round theater, a revival of Communicating Doors for the Stephen Joseph Theatre, and, in the autumn of this year, the premiere of his 74th play, Life of Riley. In addition to the many honorary degrees and other awards he has received, he was recently inducted into the American Theatre Hall of Fame, received the Society of London Theatre Special Award, and this year was honored with the Critics’ Circle Award for Services to the Arts. He was knighted in 1997.

AYCKBOURN ON COMEDY

I’ve found that the darker the drama the more you need to search for the comedy. If you don’t let the audience off the hook occasionally to laugh when you want them to, you’ll find them roaring with laughter during moments you didn’t intend. One of the endearing features of the human race is that we can’t generally keep serious for long. Be thankful for it. If we could we’d probably have become extinct long ago.

MAKING MUSIC WITH BEAUTIFUL CHILD

“When I have finally found my room filled with toys
Be banging on my crib excited by noise . . .
Oh, how I’ll feel like a beautiful child
Such a beautiful child again.”
—“Beautiful Child,” by Rufus Wainwright

In May A.C.T.’s Young Conservatory (YC) will present the world premiere of Beautiful Child, an original musical written by YC Director and A.C.T. Associate Artist Craig Slaight and directed by A.C.T. Associate Artist Domenique Lozano, featuring and inspired by the songs of singer/songwriter Rufus Wainwright. The latest in a series of productions developed by and for the YC to pay tribute to the work of a modern composer, Beautiful Child follows the journey of six teens trying to reclaim the innocence of their childhoods—childhoods uncompromised by adult manipulation or sullied by the corruption of the adult world.

In creating these unconventional theatrical works, says Slaight, “I’m constantly listening to music, looking particularly for composers who have a body of work that tells a story. Rufus Wainwright has always fascinated me. He’s an incredibly intelligent modern-day song writer, who is difficult to categorize. He’s very much a crossover, appealing to older as well as younger people. He is enigmatic, and his music is eclectic. I was interested in looking at what happens to young people when they’re the product of corrupt parents. In considering the life journey of young people, I feel one must consider the difficulty of finding your place in the world, which is frequently at the heart of Wainwright’s lyrics.”

Past original YC musicals—all created by Slaight—have featured the music of Simon and Garfunkel (Dangling Conversations, 2002), Bob Dylan (Forever Young, 2003; toured to the National Theater in London), Joni Mitchell (Ladies of the Canyon, 2004), James Taylor (Shed a Little Light, 2005), Sting (Fields of Gold, 2007), and Elton John (I’m Still Standing, 2008). Each composer has been supportive of Slaight’s goal of enabling young artists to discover the dramatic possibilities inherent in his or her body of music.

In keeping with the YC’s mission to develop new work that views the world through the eyes of young people, Slaight eschews traditional musical convention in favor of creating original pieces that explore a composer’s songs within a unifying narrative structure written specifically for teens. The productions began as “sort of staged music videos,” according to Slaight, “but then with our Bob Dylan piece, I experimented with using two different forms of text, current news clippings and the poetry of R. D. Lang, and it was wonderful. Eventually I felt the need for more of a story. So in 2006 I wrote a book that incorporated 20 songs by Lennon and McCartney called Across the Universe.”

Across the Universe also marked the beginning of a continuing collaboration between A.C.T. and San Francisco’s Bird School of Music, which provides training to young musicians in the Bay Area. This fruitful partnership has resulted in three more musicals featuring Bird musicians as the band supporting YC actor/singers, and has continued to distinguish the YC as an innovator in the training of the next generation of theater artists. “Most high schools put on a musical every year,” says Slaight. “They’re usually doing Broadway blockbusters, a fine place for that, you can have many young people involved. But I was more interested in finding ways in an acting school to deepen the acting work, while strengthening the music technique, for singer/actors. So creating music/theater performance pieces seemed a better fit,” says Slaight.

“I’ve always felt that, as the flagship theater of Northern California and a major regional voice in the country, we should be not just consuming but also contributing to the body of work, while providing a variety of experience to our performers and our audiences.”
SHOWCASING OUR TALENT

This spring, after completing three years of intensive actor training at A.C.T., the graduating Master of Fine Arts Program class of 2010 will embark upon careers as professional actors. The culmination of their studies is a showcase production presented annually to professional theater and film directors, agents, and casting directors in the frighteningly competitive entertainment centers of San Francisco, New York, and Los Angeles. The showcase provides A.C.T. students with an invaluable opportunity to exhibit their talents to industry professionals and discuss potential career opportunities.

Each of the students has been guided throughout their final year by A.C.T. Associate Artist Gregory Wallace in choosing and perfecting for performance three two-and-a-half minute scenes. “What’s interesting about this group of actors,” Wallace reports, “is that they are emotionally generous and intricate and complicated and talented and versatile, so they can reveal many layers in themselves.” The challenge is getting all that great stuff across to discriminating professional observers in the brief amount of time each actor has onstage. “Showcase is basically a taste,” explains Wallace. “A really good taste so the audience will want the rest of the gourmet meal these actors have to offer.” On the tasting menu this year are scenes by playwrights Theresa Rebeck, James McClure, and Sharman Macdonald.

“All year we’ve been bringing in scene after scene,” student Nick Childress recalls. “You come in with 20 options, and you try each of them on, and the object is to find out which ones fit you best and really show them who you are.” Even with the pressure of industry professionals in the audience, student Caroline Hewitt stresses that, as with any performance, “the really important thing is that, after the show, I can lay my head on my pillow and go to sleep at night knowing I’ve done good work.”

These young artists have also grown in their business acumen, as they themselves have had to raise much of the $30,000 required for travel and venue rentals by staging fundraising events and soliciting donations. The A.C.T. community has united around the soon-to-be-graduates: first- and second-year M.F.A. Program students helped third-year students put up a production of Amiri Baraka’s Dutchman, and visiting artist Geraint Wyn Davies performed a special presentation of the one-man show Do Not Go Gentle to benefit the showcase fund, while people from all over A.C.T. have dug deep to make individual contributions.

Wallace muses: “My hopes for showcase are that it is lots of fun, and surprising, and that the casting directors and agents leave the performance wanting to know each and every one of these actors better. I actually think it’s going to be pretty easy to do that. For the students, this event is an incredible chance that most aspiring actors in the big city just don’t get—it’s like seven years of pounding the pavement in an afternoon.”

A.C.T.’S M.F.A. 8 PRODUCE THEIR OWN LIE OF THE MIND

“...a sudden, brutal act of domestic violence throws two families into crisis. What follows ruptures all notions of memory, love, and home in the American landscape. A.C.T.’s M.F.A. 8 explore the poetic complexities of Sam Shepard’s A Lie of the Mind in their first public performance.”

So reads the latest draft of a press release written by the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program’s first-year class of the M.F.A. 8 as they prepare for their upcoming production of Shepard’s sardonic twist on the American western, which opens April 28, 2010, in Hastings Studio Theater. Last fall, A.C.T. ushered in a new era of actor training that incorporates a more comprehensive education in theater making. In addition to their curriculum of acting, vocal work, physical theater, etc., students now take seminars with A.C.T.’s administrative and production departmental leaders with the goal of understanding all the elements that go into producing live theater.

This new approach to training is made possible by a generous innovation grant from The James Irvine Foundation. Conservatory Project Coordinator Rebecca Nestle explains, “The Irvine Foundation is particularly interested in innovation as it relates to audience engagement in the arts as a whole. So our proposal was to train this first-year class—as well as the classes that will follow—to produce their own work and take it out into the community to look for those audiences in their 20s and 30s who are not going to theater and try to engage them with performances by their peers.”

With this mandate, the class of 2012 has been working closely with our marketing department to learn how best to promote A Lie of the Mind, their first public production as a class. “This is a great way for the students to become a more integral part of the larger A.C.T. community,” says Public Relations Manager Evren Odcikin, “and I’m excited to see what we can learn from them about new ways to market to their age group, while they learn from us real administrative skills that will make them more complete theater makers.”

Student Alexander Crowther enjoys the challenges presented by Odcikin and his colleagues: “They’ve brought many tough questions forward: ‘Why is this a story that can only be told onstage?’ ‘Who will come to see this show?’” Student Ben Kahre agrees that confronting these tough questions is beneficial: “By asking us to help market our own shows, A.C.T. is putting more responsibility into our hands and helping us grow as potential leaders. The landscape of American theater is demanding, and the more tools we have to succeed in a constantly changing environment the more opportunities present themselves.”

Like all M.F.A. Program productions, A Lie of the Mind serves a pedagogical purpose. As a modern American play, it represents an important style of playwriting for the students to master before starting their careers. Lie also “sits well at the end of their first year,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith. “Shepard’s work is thought of as ‘hyper-real’ or ‘super-real.’ The students can take all the work they’ve done so far on truth and size and apply it on a more expansive scale.” Outside of the classroom, Lie is also an ideal play for the public performance debut of the M.F.A. 8.

“We’re starting with Lie because it is accessible,” observes Nestle. “It’s a quirky play that should engage people’s imagination, and if the idea is to get new people interested in theater, this play is wacky enough to do that.”

“Lie is a fantastic first production for our class because it is truly a challenging, ensemble-based piece with rich imagery and language,” adds student Christina Lorenn Elmore.

While A Lie of the Mind is the first of many public projects the class of 2012 will produce while at A.C.T., the M.F.A. Program’s mission focuses on who these artists will be after they graduate. “We are interested in empowering the students,” explains Nestle. “We want them to graduate and feel control over their careers instead of feeling like they have to wait by the phone.”

Student Jason Frank agrees: “Getting our hands dirty and learning what it means to create and mount our own work is just another step towards becoming a consummate theater professional. That, I believe, is something that will truly set us apart from other actors—the facility not only to act on a professional stage, but also to create meaningful work for ourselves.”

What It Means to Be an A.C.T. Corporate Partner

A.C.T.’s generous corporate partners make exceptional investments to support our acclaimed arts education programs in schools and the actor-training programs in our top-ranked conservatory—support that truly makes a difference in the lives of thousands of young people throughout our community and in our conservatory programs. Few companies exemplify this commitment as profoundly as AT&T, the highest-ranking of Bay Area firms in corporate giving and esteemed by A.C.T. as presenting sponsor of the holiday family classic A Christmas Carol and A.C.T.’s 2010 season gala, the Crystal Ball, which benefits the conservatory. Under the leadership of Kenneth McNeely, president of AT&T California, AT&T has partnered with A.C.T. to ensure that dynamic and transformational family productions and student programming remain alive and vital, energizing the cultural life of our community. McNeely explains why A.C.T. continues to be a part of AT&T’s giving priorities:

At AT&T, we’re committed to making a real difference in the communities where we live and work, especially by supporting innovative programs that inspire young people and enrich our community as a whole. We’re a company dedicated to connecting people with their world. Connecting people is something that the performing arts do, as well—they bring people together, from all cultures and all walks of life, and can give us a window into history, stir emotions, and be a source of education—our primary area of giving. That’s why we’re so proud to support A.C.T., the production of A Christmas Carol, and the Crystal Ball, which benefits the students and actor-training programs of the conservatory. On behalf of AT&T and our 12,000 employees in the Bay Area, I salute A.C.T. and its outstanding performance, education, and outreach programs that connect people to the arts every day.

She has worked with people of all ages in venues around the country, including teaching in Hawaii and in Florence, Italy. Also a professional actor, she has performed in numerous off-off Broadway plays and at regional theaters, including A.C.T. In 2004 she toured London and Birmingham (UK) in Berkeley Repertory Theatre's production of Continental Divide. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIRE  (Producing Director)  began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne's National Repertory Theater as an actor and stage manager. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and Georgy (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Ibsen's Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw's Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International's award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle.

Producers Circle members make annual gifts of $10,000 or more to A.C.T. Their extraordinary generosity supports season productions, actor training in our conservatory, and arts education in our community. Members are invited to participate in the artistic development of A.C.T.’s season by attending production meetings and taking part in numerous behind-the-scenes opportunities. We are privileged to recognize these members’ generosity during the March 1, 2009–March 31, 2010, period. EVERY DOLLAR YOU GIVE MAKES GREAT THEATER HAPPEN!

Did you know that A.C.T. is a nonprofit organization, and that the price of your ticket covers just 60% of our expenses? Your gift to the Annual Fund helps make up the rest. No matter what the amount, you can play an important role at A.C.T.

As a donor, you’ll receive exciting benefits designed to bring you closer to the work you see onstage. Get an inside look at the making of live theater with a visit to our prop and scene shop or costume shop, a backstage tour, or a technical rehearsal.

To learn more, visit act-sf.org/donate or call 415.439.2462.
The Crystal Ball featured A.C.T. alumna Anika Noni Rose, Tony Award winner and star of Disney’s The Princess & the Frog, performing alongside gifted students of A.C.T.’s conservatory—the next generation of theater artists! The spectacular evening brought together Bay Area’s community leaders, philanthropists, and guest stars Olympia Dukakis, Marco Barricelli, Benjamin Bratt, and members of A.C.T.’s core acting company. Crystal Ball proceeds support A.C.T.’s conservatory actor training and youth education programs in the community. The following individuals and businesses made generous commitments to A.C.T.’s 2010 Gala Crystal Ball prior to March 31, 2010.

A.C.T.–branded merchandise, as well as books, scripts, and Words on Plays, are on sale in the main lobby, at the Ticket Services office, and online.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the auditorium.

Cell Phones!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.
