A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.'s creative work.

A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater (now known as the American Conservatory Theater) in 1967; more than 320 A.C.T. productions have since been performed to a combined audience of more than seven million people. Today A.C.T. is recognized internationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting, honored with a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training (1979) and the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award (1996). In 2001, A.C.T. began producing alternative work at Zeum Theater, which serves as a venue for conservatory productions and exciting new plays.

Clybourne Park
The art of performance draws our eyes to the stage

Our community’s commitment to arts and culture says a lot about where we live. Theater brings us together from the moment the lights go down and the curtains come up.

To the cast of Clybourne Park, we applaud this production.
Dear Friends,

What I love about Bruce Norris is that he is unapologetically who he is—a deliberate provocateur who throws controversial ideas onto the table with relish, knowing that they are not destined to make people “feel good.” This is a brave thing to do at a time in which the arts are struggling to survive financially and artists are striving to make a case for the intrinsic and extrinsic value of what they create. But I would argue that the rigorous structure and brilliant language of Norris’s plays does exactly what important art should do, even if it is often squirm-inducing: it defamiliarizes our daily lives and wakes us up to the clichés and hypocrisy of our own discourse. Which is why his work is so incredibly funny and so disturbing at the same time.

Lorraine Hansberry’s landmark 1959 play A Raisin in the Sun has been an icon of the American theater since it was written, introducing generations of high school students and audiences to the complex condition of urban African Americans after the war. Norris takes Raisin as his jumping off point for a clever refocusing of the lens: instead of seeing the escape from the ghetto from the Youngers’ point of view, as Hansberry invites us to do, Norris asks us to look at it from the perspective of the white couple who are selling to the Youngers. He has written the first act of Clybourne Park in a style reminiscent of Clybourne Park and Norris likens this ensemble-driven contemporary act to a “satyr play.” If the characters in Act I are defined by their roles and status in society (the Minister, the Community Organizer, the Maid), the characters in Act II live in that ill-defined contemporary space where it is impossible to tell at first glance who belongs with whom or how the hierarchy stacks up. Here Norris is exploring a new kind of tribalism, in which “taste” has become a buzzword for what group you belong to, and history is buried and distorted in favor of an ostensibly enlightened “postracial” world.

It’s fascinating to explore Clybourne Park in relation to Tarell Alvin McCraney’s Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet, which we produced in November: two contemporary plays exploring questions of racial and sexual politics from completely opposite points of view. Both plays provide much fodder for conversation, which is why we are adding additional postperformance discussion opportunities for Clybourne Park audiences (see page 13). Although Marcus is set in a fictional town on the Gulf and Clybourne is set in Norris’s vision of Chicago, both plays resonate enormously in the Bay Area, a community that prides itself on its tolerance and diversity while continuing to wrestle with the politics of gentrification, race, and sexual identity. In exposing our inability to truly talk about the fraught issues of our time, McCraney and Norris wake us up to the fault lines of our daily experience. And who better to shepherd this particular theatrical outing than Jonathan Moscone, a Bay Area native and directing dynamo who knows the politics of this part of the world better than anyone?

It’s been a thrilling and lively season so far at A.C.T., and behind the scenes we are moving forward every day with our world premiere musical Armistead Maupin’s Tales of the City, which opens June 1. This promises to be an extraordinary event, not only for the Bay Area, but nationally and internationally: when tickets went on sale, purchasers from Australia and the United Kingdom were among the first to snap them up!

Finally, we continue to celebrate the future of the American theater by acknowledging the remarkable Master of Fine Arts Program students and recent alums who have been gracing our stage this season. In Clybourne Park, René Augesen, Manoel Felciano, Anthony Fusco, and Gregory Wallace from our distinguished core acting company and guest artist Richard Thieriot are joined by two remarkable graduates of the class of 2010: Omozé Idehenre and Emily Kitchens. We are extremely proud to call them our own!

Thank you for being here, and we look forward to hearing your thoughts.

Best,

THE FREEDOM TO PROVOKE
An Interview with Playwright Bruce Norris

BY BEATRICE BASSO

Since making his 1992 playwriting debut with The Actor Retires, playwright Bruce Norris has earned a reputation for prodding the uncomfortable truths that lie just beneath the surface of the self-aware, middle-class liberal. “There’s nothing better than the feeling of coming into the room and feeling that something dangerous is happening,” he recently told the London Evening Standard upon winning the paper’s Best Play Award for Clybourne Park. The Actor Retires was a shift for Houston-born Norris, who up to that point had enjoyed a successful career as an actor. After graduating from Northwestern University in 1982 with a theater degree, he worked at the major Chicago theaters—Steppenwolf, the Goodman, and Victory Gardens, among others—before moving to New York, where he was seen on Broadway in Biloxi Blues, An American Daughter, and Wrong Mountain. He also performed off Broadway and regionally—including at A.C.T. in 1999—and was, he says, “hired and fired from a number of television pilots.” These experiences were fodder for his first play, a comedy about an actor who throws out his headshots, fires his agent, and decides to make furniture for a living.

Today Norris is not building furniture—in fact, he originally planned to be a set designer before he discovered it involved “too much manual labor”—but over the past two decades he has built a body of work as a playwright known for his ability to make his audiences simultaneously laugh and squirm. Unlike Lorraine Hansberry—whose seminal 1959 drama A Raisin in the Sun, which was part of school curricula in the 1970s, was one of the first plays (along with Our Town) that he became aware of as a young person. “That play has resonated all through my life because I realized that the only character I could identify with was Karl—I was a whitey in an all-white neighborhood in Houston, Texas.” In fact, he told Washington, D.C.’s Woolly Mammoth Theatre Company, which produced Clybourne Park last spring and will reprise it next summer, “I was always regretful that I never got to play Karl Lindner, so I thought I’ll just give him some more to do [in Clybourne Park]. That’s a way of getting to play that part indirectly.”

On the first day of rehearsals for Clybourne Park at A.C.T., Norris remarked that A Raisin in the Sun, which was part of school curricula in the 1970s, was one of the first plays (along with Our Town) that he became aware of as a young person. “That play has resonated all through my life because I realized that the only character I could identify with was Karl—I was a whitey in an all-white neighborhood in Houston, Texas.” In fact, he told Washington, D.C.’s Woolly Mammoth Theatre Company, which produced Clybourne Park last spring and will reprise it next summer, “I was always regretful that I never got to play Karl Lindner, so I thought I’ll just give him some more to do [in Clybourne Park]. That’s a way of getting to play that part indirectly.”

In a phone interview a few weeks before rehearsals began in San Francisco, we asked Norris his views on race relations in the United States and about his need to provoke.

Clybourne Park is doing very well in London right now, and yet it is so quintessentially American. The white-black divide is nowhere more pronounced than in the United States.

Chicago is particularly distinct that way. The South Side of Chicago is a predominantly black area; the North Side of Chicago is white. And then you’ve got Indian and South Asian and other neighborhoods, but the white and black are pretty much divided along the north and south. You think, this is a function of discrimination or of people being priced out of the housing market or all sorts of conspiracy theories, and yet, at the same time, there’s nothing keeping one of us white people from moving into Harlem or South Chicago or Oakland. Or the other way around. Even if prices in white neighborhoods are higher, how come there’s not more movement? How come we don’t voluntarily integrate?

HOW COME?

I think it has to do with discomfort—with feeling like you’re the minority. It’s uncomfortable to live in an area where you are that minority, no matter which way it works.

PEOPLE WHO ARE NOT FROM THE UNITED STATES, AND I AM ONE OF THEM, COMPLAIN THAT THERE’S SO MUCH POLITICAL CORRECTNESS ABOUT RACE HERE THAT IT’S IMPOSSIBLE TO MAKE JOKES ABOUT IT; BUT THEN THE LONGER WE ARE HERE, THE CLEARER IT BECOMES THAT THERE ARE SCARS THAT ARE SIMPLY TOO DEEP TO BE MADE FUN OF.

I was reading something recently about a person in Germany who made what he thought was a funny remark about Nazis, and of course that’s not a very funny subject if you’re German. There are certain topics like slavery and black-white relations in the United States that are not that funny, especially if you’re a black person.

DO YOU THINK BEING POLITICALLY CORRECT IS A NECESSARY STEP IN SOCIETAL EVOLUTION?

Yes, theoretically it’s a step. So, now that we’ve all been very careful, you think that after some time goes by things will be normalized because we’ve been so careful. We white people (because we are the oppressors) sit around going, “Is it time now? Has enough time elapsed? Can we now say ‘nigger?’” But of course that never happens, so white people feel resentful because we realize the past is going to hang around our necks like millstones forever. There is no end. Even if we gave reparation payments, still it wouldn’t be enough.

AND YET A LOT HAS CHANGED, IN A RELATIVELY SHORT NUMBER OF YEARS.

Well, a lot of superficial changes have happened, to laws and to ways people have access to education and to public services, but what hasn’t changed and what stubbornly refuses to change are our natures. We keep wanting to be around those we feel more comfortable with. If only legislation could change what we are actually like, but it can’t.

YOU’RE SAYING IT’S ABOUT OUR BASIC HUMAN MAKEUP.

I think that racism is just another version of the same thing that leads to wars of any kind. Either it’s tribal solidarity or it’s religious solidarity, or it’s people who live within a certain geographic boundary and want to protect it. There are certain economic and cultural groups that we identify ourselves with, and we think others shouldn’t be able to interfere.

WE ASSIGN WORTH TO CERTAIN VALUES THAT WE THINK IDENTIFY US AS BELONGING TO A PARTICULAR CATEGORY OF PEOPLE, LIKE A CERTAIN STANDARD OF “TASTE,” WHICH IS A CHARGED WORD IN YOUR PLAY.

Taste is an emblem of your group. And it’s a manifestation of the competition that’s going on with all people all the time. We are all looking at each other going, “Am I above or below him, or her? Does she have an advantage over me, or do I have an advantage over her?” So if you’re in any minority group and you look at all these white people walking around with all this privilege all the time, taking it for granted, you don’t buy it when they say, “Oh, we’re just like you,” because, at any given moment, you know that even something as insignificant as taste—“I like this house better than that house, it’s prettier”—identifies us as part of a group that looks at another group skeptically or critically.

That’s what’s dividing red states versus blue states, too, because those of us who live in New York or San Francisco look down on the people who vote for Sarah Palin or for eating frozen dinners or at Outback Steakhouse. We think that’s low class. And they know we think that. So they don’t like us because they think we are snobs. We are snobs. The only thing you can do is try not to be part of any group. Maybe.

YOU’RE SUGGESTING A CERTAIN SORT OF INDEPENDENCE?

It’s hard, because anyone who looks at you will put you in a group whether you think you’re in a group or not. So just saying “I’m not part of any group” would immediately put you in a group.

THE GROUP OF “THE ICONOCLASTS.”

Exactly.

WHAT MADE YOU A PROVOCATEUR?

I have no idea. Probably my place in my family, the role I filled. I’m the one who liked to try and start arguments between my two siblings. I did that at Thanksgiving just recently. It’s not a very nice way to behave, but there are more important things than being nice, I guess.
MORE SPECIFICALLY, WHY THE PROVOCATIVE REVELATION OF THE FOIBLES OF MIDDLE-CLASS EDUCATED PEOPLE?
I get into these conversations a lot. People ask how come I don’t write plays about, say, people in housing projects, and I say, “Well, because those are not the people who go to the theater.” You can say, “We should get them to the theater,” but in actual fact, people who buy subscriptions [to large theaters] are usually wealthy people. They are almost always wealthy, liberal people. So why not write plays that are about those people, since those are the people who are in the audience? If you actually want to have a conversation with that audience, then you should address them directly. That’s what I always think.

WOOLLY MAMMOTH IS BRINGING THE PLAY BACK TO D.C. THIS SUMMER BECAUSE OF THE IMPACT IT’S HAD ON THEIR COMMUNITY, WHICH STANDS AS PROOF THAT THE PLAY, THOUGH SET IN CHICAGO, COULD WORK IN ANY METROPOLITAN REALITY.
Pretty much every big city has some version of this. Even where I grew up in Houston. There is no actual Clybourne Park in Chicago. Or, to be strictly accurate, there is a playground called Clybourn [sic] Park on Clybourn Avenue, but there is no neighborhood called Clybourne [or Clybourn] Park. That is something that Lorraine Hansberry made up. If you want to have a pretty good example of the kind of neighborhood we’re talking about it would either be Wicker Park or Ukrainian Village in Chicago. More Wicker Park. Wicker Park is a neighborhood that was mostly Latino for about 25 years, and it’s very close to where Cabrini-Green used to be. Cabrini-Green was a big, dangerous housing project, which is about three or four blocks from where Steppenwolf Theatre is now.

SO MUCH OF WHAT YOU WRITE MAKES ONE LAUGH OR MAKES ONE CRINGE . . .
Tim Sanford—who runs Playwrights Horizons in New York [where Clybourne Park premiered last February]—was referring to a critical theorist he’s read, who says that tragedy is only possible in a community where everyone shares the same sense of themselves, where everyone has the same identity, and they’re part of a shared community. In a modern society as fragmented and atomized as ours, that’s not really possible. Interestingly, in Clybourne Park, the first part is a tragedy and the second part is a comedy, [because] the people in the first act all understand each other much more than the people do in the second act. In the second act, everybody makes assumptions.

AND EVERYBODY SEEMS TO SELF-EDIT MUCH MORE . . .
Absolutely. Everyone holds their tongue, because we live in a society where speech is much more dangerous than activity—than action. Look at the WikiLeaks thing. All we’re talking about is that someone said out loud what we already knew or have been thinking, but now it’s on the record. That’s a terrible thing in our weirdly polite society. No one knows that they should be embarrassed in the first act; everyone knows they should be embarrassed in the second act. We’re embarrassed about everything.

DO YOU LIKE TO SEE PEOPLE LAUGH, OR CRINGE, IN RECOGNITION?
Cringing and laughing are two really good things. So if audiences do them at the same time, that’s great. I always like it when the audience’s response is really mixed up, when they don’t know whether to laugh or to cringe.

Over the past year, you have seen members of our graduating M.F.A. Program class perform on the A.C.T. mainstage in Scapin, Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet, and A Christmas Carol. You also saw them on the Zeum stage in Once in a Lifetime and Wild Kate and in Hastings Studio Theater in The Three Sisters, and we know you won’t miss the opportunity to see them again in their upcoming productions: the world premiere of Peter Sinn Nachtrieb’s Litter—an unconventional comedy written specifically for and developed with this group of young actors over the past year—and a final classic adventure in Shakespeare’s As You Like It.

This spring, before completing their three years of intensive actor training at A.C.T. and embarking upon careers as professional actors, the M.F.A. Program class of 2011 will travel together to present a showcase production to professional theater and film directors, agents, and casting directors in New York, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. The culmination of their studies at A.C.T., the showcase provides students with their first opportunity to exhibit their talents to industry professionals and to meet with agents and casting people to discuss potential career opportunities.

While A.C.T. is able to provide some support for showcase expenses, the class of 2011 relies on the generosity of friends, family, and colleagues to help with the remaining costs. Your gift, no matter what the amount, will directly support this important career opportunity for these students as they launch their acting careers.

MEET RAYMOND CASTELÁN
A.C.T. M.F.A. PROGRAM CLASS OF 2013

In each program of the A.C.T. mainstage season, we are pleased to introduce to you one of A.C.T.’s remarkable first-year M.F.A. Program students. In this issue, meet Raymond Castelán.

NICKNAME Ray, Ramón, Ramona (after the Beverly Cleary character).

BIRTHPLACE Fresno, California.

HOMETOWN Selma, California.

FIRST THEATER EXPERIENCE In the ninth grade I played one of Pharaoh’s guards in my high school’s production of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. I wore a headdress and a skirt and was given a foam spear that I was supposed to move in time with the music. In retrospect, I think it’s pretty funny that I literally had to shake a spear in my theatrical debut.

FAVORITE THEATER EXPERIENCE The first play I did as an undergrad was an M.F.A. production of A Streetcar Named Desire. I was cast as Pablo and was thoroughly intimidated and scared going into the rehearsal process with these graduate actors I had just spent a year watching and studying under. But that cast was so warm and welcoming; they soon put me at ease. The process was amazing. As an inexperienced actor I couldn’t have asked for a better group of mentors.

IF I COULD PLAY ANY ROLE, I WOULD WANT TO PLAY Aníbal in Cloud Tectonics, Treplyov in The Seagull, and El Pachuco in Zoot Suit.

MY STORY I went to college as a declared bioengineering, pre-med student. During college orientation, a counselor suggested I take an acting course to lighten my academic load, so I did. That turned out to be the hardest course I took that quarter, and I received my first B since the fourth grade. In an effort to redeem myself, I took another acting course the next quarter, and then another, and another. Before I knew it, I had taken more theater classes than pre-med. Eventually I decided to admit to myself (and my parents) that I wanted to pursue a career in theater and acting.

RANDOM FACT When I was 13 I crashed my parents’ minivan into my father’s ’58 Chevy pickup. My dad still likes to remind me how beautiful that truck used to look.

EDUCATION B.A. in theater, UC San Diego.

SPECIAL SKILLS I’m a wiz when it comes to calculus.

(Executive Director) joined A.C.T. as executive director in August 2010. She served previously as executive director of off Broadway’s nonprofit Second Stage Theatre in New York City. Under Richard’s leadership, Second Stage provided the initial home for the Broadway productions Everyday Rapture, Next to Normal, and The Little Dog Laughed.

From 1983 to 2005, Richard enjoyed a rich and varied career with Roundabout Theatre Company. By the time she departed as managing director, Roundabout had been transformed from a small nonprofit on the verge of bankruptcy into one of the country’s largest and most successful theater companies of its kind. Richard is the recipient of six Tony Awards as producer, for Roundabout productions of Cabaret (1998), A View from the Bridge (1998), Side Man (1999), Nine (2003), Assassins (2004), and Glengarry Glen Ross (2005). Producer of more than 125 shows at Roundabout, she had direct supervision of all general and production management, marketing, and financial aspects of the theater’s operations. She conceptualized and oversaw the redesign of the three permanent Roundabout stages—Studio 54, the American Airlines Theatre, and the Harold and Miriam Steinberg Center for Theatre. She directed the location search for Cabaret and supervised the creation of that production’s environmental Kit Kat Klub.

Prior to her tenure at Roundabout, Richard served as business manager of

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE AN A.C.T. PRODUCER

The process of bringing a play to the stage is a complex, challenging, and ultimately deeply gratifying experience for all involved. At A.C.T., an essential component of that process is the support provided by members of the Producers Circle, whose generosity enables A.C.T. to bring innovative, groundbreaking productions to our stage. Producers also have the opportunity to participate in every step of the creative process, attend opening night dinners, get to know the stage managers in the booth, meet the artists, and select the particular productions they want to produce. Producers Janet and Lloyd Cluff chose Clybourne Park for a simple reason: “I grew up in Lincoln Park,” Janet explains, “very near to Clybourn Park—the park, not the neighborhood (there is no actual neighborhood)—in Chicago.”

The Cluffs have more than 35 years of fond A.C.T. memories and don’t hesitate to say their favorite era is “the Perloff years.” Janet explains, “Carey has taken A.C.T. to new heights, and we can always expect an entertaining evening from her (even if there is no play happening!).” A.C.T. Trustee Cherie Sorokin inspired the Cluffs to join the Producers Circle in 2007—with their generous donation matched by PG&E, where Lloyd works. They thoroughly enjoy the camaraderie they feel with their fellow producers and the unique insight they get about what they see onstage. “It makes us feel as though we are an important part of every production,” Janet tells us. “And the annual Producers Circle dinner onstage is one of our favorite donor benefits.”

Janet and Lloyd have been subscribing to A.C.T. together since they were married in 1976, but Janet was a subscriber even before the two tied the knot. Her love of theater began at the Ravinia Festival just north of Chicago, where Kathryn Grayson’s performance in The Merry Widow encouraged her to get involved in high school theater productions. Janet moved to San Francisco in 1973, pretty sure she was heading to paradise. She was attracted by the active cultural scene, and she immediately bought a season subscription to A.C.T. Janet and Lloyd met that year. Lloyd, whose parents were both talented performers, moved here from Provo, Utah, to work at something he loved: chasing earthquakes. He met Janet when he hired her to work at his Oakland office. They married, have three children, and are now grandparents of five.

In addition to producing Clybourne Park this year, Janet and Lloyd are proud members of The Tales of the City Circle, eager to help the new musical develop on its way to its world premiere this June. The Cluffs are also supporters of San Francisco Opera’s 2011 Ring Cycle, the San Francisco Symphony, and Chanticleer.

They receive a variety of benefits in thanks for their generous support, including invitations to special events, ticket and merchandise discounts, and opportunities to experience behind-the-scenes tours of the theater. We are privileged to recognize these donors’ generosity during the November 1, 2009–November 30, 2010, period. EVERY DOLLAR YOU GIVE MAKES GREAT THEATER HAPPEN!

Did you know that A.C.T. is a nonprofit organization, and that the price of your ticket covers just 60% of our expenses? Your gift to the Annual Fund helps make up the rest. No matter what the amount, you can play an important role at A.C.T.

As a donor, you’ll receive exciting benefits designed to bring you closer to the work you see onstage. Get an inside look at the making of live theater with a visit to our prop and scene shop or costume shop, a backstage tour, or a technical rehearsal.

To learn more, visit act-sf.org/donate or call 415.439.2462.

Endow Your Annual Support and Join the Prospero Society

Thank you, subscribers and Annual Fund donors! Your longstanding support, year after year, makes an immeasurable difference to A.C.T. and the work we do. Being able to count on your generosity allows us to take artistic risks, produce the best possible work on our stage, and train the next generation of theater artists. What will happen to this wonderful legacy of support in future generations when you are no longer here to give?

Endowing your annual gift or your annual subscription purchase through your will or other estate plan is a wonderful way to continue your current support after your lifetime and will make you an honored member of A.C.T.’s Prospero Society.

AT THE THEATER
The American Conservatory Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The auditorium opens 30 minutes before curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
A.C.T.–branded merchandise, as well as books, scripts, and Words on Plays, are on sale in the main lobby, at the box office, and online.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the auditorium.

Cell Phones!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Restrooms are located in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the theater. Please call 415.749.2228 in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

A.C.T. is pleased to announce that an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is now available on site.

Lost and Found
If you’ve misplaced an item while you’re still at the theater, please look for it at our merchandise stand in the lobby. Any items found by ushers or other patrons will be taken there. If you’ve already left the theater, please call 415.439.2471 and we’ll be happy to check our lost and found for you. Please be prepared with the date you attended the performance and your seat location.
