Together we’ll go far
Dear Friends,

Big open-hearted holiday greetings to every one of you! Whether you’re here for the very first time, or because A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol is an indispensable part of your annual solstice celebration, we’re thrilled and honored to have you with us.

This version of Dickens’s beautiful story, which Paul Walsh and I created six seasons ago, grew out of the very depths of A.C.T.’s being. We are, uniquely, an intergenerational theater in which children and adults, professionals and students, masters and emerging artists train, create, and play together on a regular basis. Because we house one of the most renowned M.F.A. programs in America, and because we are blessed with a truly one-of-a-kind Young Conservatory in which eight- to nineteen-year-olds study and perform and grow, we made sure that A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol would feature an extraordinary range of artists of all ages, collaborating together on this exquisite tale of redemption and transformation.

This year, our Carol is, as always, blessed by the presence of some of the Bay Area’s most beloved veteran actors—including Jim Carpenter, our inimitable Scrooge—familiar to A.C.T. audiences from numerous productions on our magnificent stage. It also features 19 children from our Young Conservatory and the entire M.F.A. Program class of 2011. This is an incredible gift: a chance for the larger A.C.T. family to work together and for you, our Carol audience, to see the breadth of A.C.T.’s commitment to artists of all ages.

Paul Walsh and I wanted this Carol to salute the power of the imagination to transform even the crustiest of souls. Dickens’s novella is exceptionally theatrical: much of it is written in dialogue, and it centers around the striking presence of four ghosts who perform a series of “interventions” on Scrooge until his heart is reawakened and he begins his life anew. Now more than ever, the themes of Dickens’s story of greed and renewal resonate, as we struggle to hold on to our empathy and imagination in an increasingly divisive world.

It is worth remembering that Dickens trusted the artistic imagination to lift us out of the darkness and set us on a more inspiring path. It is also worth noting, for those of you who are here with children, that it has been proved again and again that when young people are exposed to the transformative power of live theater, their scholastic work and world view open up in wonderful and surprising ways. It is our hope at A.C.T. to become even more deeply engaged in the lives of young people in the Bay Area in the years to come. Meanwhile, we hope you feel that you’ve given yourselves a gift by being here, and we wish you a fulfilling and empathetic year ahead. I invite you to return this winter and spring to experience the artists and artistry of A.C.T.’s extraordinary 2010–11 subscription season.

Yours,

Carey Perloff

In 1843, the year that he wrote A Christmas Carol, the world belonged to Charles Dickens. His first book, Sketches by Boz, had been published in 1836, and his career had been on an upward trajectory since. Boz had been followed by one success after another, including The Pickwick Papers, Oliver Twist, and Nicholas Nickleby. He married Catherine Hogarth in 1836 and by 1839 was living with her and their four children (six more would follow) in a fine house in the Regent’s Park section of London with marble columns in the dining room, rich mahogany-paneled doors, a well-stocked library, a walled garden, and a coach house complete with coach and groom. Every inch the dandy, he was instantly recognizable with wavy brown hair down to his shoulders. His velvet and satin waistcoats in deep greens and reds, often embroidered with brightly colored flowers, were festooned with gold watch chains matched with gold tiepins and rings. These were not affectations but irrefutable expressions of physical vitality and intellectual exuberance. He was a character of his own creation, and he knew it: he nicknamed himself “The Inimitable.”

Dickens’s energy could not be held in check by writing alone. In his early years, the books came almost unbidden; he could be found in the parlor amidst family and friends, contributing to the lively conversation while simultaneously working on the latest installment of Oliver Twist. Games, jokes, puns, songs, laughter poured from him around the dinner table and hearth, which he dominated with his oversized presence; after dark he stalked London, including its worst slums, often until sunrise, working off an inexhaustible fund of excess energy and exercising keen powers of observation and memory. He struck one, a biographer wrote, as “all fire and charm.”

Beneath the blaze thrown off by his outward life was the darkness of another one, as vital to his work as the light. His vivacity, vigor, and high spirits were complemented by driving ambition, restlessness, and profound dissatisfaction. Something in the darkness had created the need for the light; the outward joy was rooted in desolation. Where the light took the form of boundless comic energy in his work, the darkness emerged as the melodrama of innocent people, children mostly, abandoned by parents and endangered by the callous, greedy, and cruel.

Where did the darkness originate? In 1822, when he was ten, the family moved from the town of Chatham to London, where the financial condition of his father, John (never strong to begin with), went from bad to worse. Young Charles, who had a voracious appetite for learning and reading, was taken out of school and sent to the pawn shop with the meager family belongings. Among the first items to go was the small library they’d brought from Chatham.

In 1824, as John Dickens’s debts mounted, Charles was put to work. For twelve hours a day, six days a week, he pasted labels on jars of bootblack in a creaking, rat-infested warehouse on the Thames. Soon after, his father was sent to Marshalsea Prison for indebtedness, and, while the rest of the family went to live there with him, Charles was on his own, living in lodgings. When not laboring at the warehouse or visiting his family in the Marshalsea, the solitary 12-year-old boy walked the city, almost always hungry. After about five months, John Dickens was released, and Charles, over the objection of his mother, who thought the family needed the money, was taken out of the blacking house and returned to school. Although his time in the ramshackle warehouse on the water was relatively short, Dickens
A Christmas Carol tells us, among other things, that a man like Scrooge cannot live fully in the light of the present until he comes face to face with the darkness of his past.

Dickens never spoke of the episode to anyone other than his friend and biographer John Forster. Neither his wife nor children learned of it until they read about it in Forster’s biography after Dickens’s death. For all his charm and volubility, there was in Dickens a well of feelings he never revealed; he held this inner life close. None of the people who knew, or thought they knew, the ebullient author of later years had any notion of the darkness he carried inside and could not forget, but as of yet could only approach sidewise in his work through a generalized, if sharp, sympathy for the poor.

A number of events led to the writing of A Christmas Carol; the two most immediate balanced the pulls in him toward light and dark. A speaking engagement in the northwest industrial city of Manchester in the fall of 1843 took him to the Manchester Athenaeum, a charitable organization that provided education, exercise, and culture to the working and middle classes. As he looked down from the platform over “the bright eyes and beaming faces” of the crowd, he spoke of his gladness that it provided outlets for body and mind amid the clanking machinery of the city’s booming textile factories. Then, returning to London, his walks through the city took him to several Ragged Schools. These were free schools run by volunteers who taught the poorest of the poor. He described the sight in a letter to his friend the philanthropist Angela Burdett-Coutts. The school was held in three most wretched rooms on the first floor of a rotten house: every plank, and timber, and brick, and lath, and piece of plaster shakes as you walk. I have very seldom seen . . . anything so shocking as the dire neglect of soul and body as exhibited among these children. . . . To find anything within them—who know nothing of affection, care, love, or kindness of any sort—to which it is possible to appeal, is, at first, like a search for the philosopher’s stone.

Dickens was so appalled by the conditions and so inspired by the efforts of the volunteer teachers that, in addition to seeking Burdett-Coutts’s aid, he suggested to the editors of the Edinburgh Review that he write an article about them. Almost as soon as he suggested it, however, he put the idea aside in favor of writing a book for the holiday season: A Christmas Carol.
The story poured out of him. “[T]he composition; and thinking whereof such blind-man’s-buffing, such theatre-goings, such kissings-out of old years and kissings-in of new ones never took place in these parts before,” he wrote.

What had A Christmas Carol unlocked that caused a release of energy extraordinary even for him? In it, Dickens didn’t use the terrible memories that had haunted him for two decades, but he made a discovery that would, in fits and starts over the next few years, allow him to turn them into literature for the first time. For A Christmas Carol is the story of a man redeemed by his memories. For years, Ebenezer Scrooge had either blocked them out or chased them away, and as a result, could not live as a whole person. He worked, he ate, he slept, and rarely if ever raised his eyes above his ledger to see either the hunger and need or the happiness of the people around him. The story tells us, among other things, that a man like Scrooge cannot live fully in the light of the present until he comes face to face with the darkness of his past. This is exactly what he does. As Scrooge watches his painful childhood and youth, he remembers, too, the happier times he has also forgotten. The pain of the lonely young Ebenezer is assuaged by the love of a sister; a boy abandoned by his father finds comfort and love in a family of Fezziwigs. “Do You Remember?” asks a song in A.C.T.’s version, and the answer is crucial. The man without a past has no future; in recovering his, Scrooge finds a life, a family, and a purpose.

Dickens couldn’t yet draw directly on the experiences of his childhood for A Christmas Carol, but in it he created a character who could face the darkness in his past and, rather than make an orphan of it, acknowledge its value. That opened the way to David Copperfield and Little Dorrit, rich novels that draw on the full range of Dickens’s life and experience, both the darkness and the light. Carol was Dickens’s gift to the world, and to himself, as well.

WHAT THE DICKENS?

CHARLES DICKENS was born February 7, 1812, in Portsmouth, England. The eldest son of a large middle-class family, he experienced real poverty when his father was imprisoned for outstanding debts, and 12-year-old Charles was forced to leave home and work in a London factory. The experience deeply affected the boy and served as creative inspiration for the writer, whose many novels naturalistically depict the difficult conditions of 19th-century British working-class life. Dickens later went on to work as an office boy and a reporter and experienced instant success as an author when The Pickwick Papers, a series of comic narratives written to accompany artistic engravings, was published in 1836. He followed The Pickwick Papers with the novels Oliver Twist (1839), Nicholas Nickleby (1839), Barnaby Rudge (1841), Martin Chuzzlewit (1844), A Christmas Carol (1843), and David Copperfield (1850). Featuring wild plot twists and lively depictions of London street life, his work, primarily published first in serial format, was easily adapted for the stage and appeared frequently at playhouses throughout England. In the 1850s Dickens’s marriage to Catherine Hogarth dissolved, and his work began to tackle darker themes and more fully criticize industrial society. The novels of this period include Bleak House (1853), Hard Times (1854), Little Dorrit (1857), A Tale of Two Cities (1859), and, often considered his masterpiece, Great Expectations (1860). An exhausting series of reading tours late in life led to a decline in Dickens’s health, and he died in 1870 working on the unfinished manuscript of The Mystery of Edwin Drood.

The little book established over him a strange mastery that drove it on to completion before the end of November,” writes Edgar Johnson, Dickens’s first major 20th-century biographer. Dickens himself wrote that as he worked, he wept and laughed, and wept again, and excited himself in a most extraordinary manner in the composition; and thinking whereof he walked about the black streets of London 15 and 20 miles many a night when all sober folks had gone to bed.

He felt a great release when it was done. He described to a friend how he “broke out like a madman,” and during the holidays that followed he threw himself into festivities as he’d never done before. “Such dinings, such dancings, such conjurings, such blind-man’s-buffing, such theatre-

THE CHILD IN ALL OF US

The notion of ongoing training for actors at every stage of their careers has been a fundamental part of A.C.T.'s mission since the company's founding in 1965. Our annual production of A Christmas Carol—written specifically to include the entire third-year class of the Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program and almost two dozen Young Conservatory (YC) students, in addition to some of the Bay Area’s most beloved actors—is a powerful example of that philosophy in practice.

“My first year here we had an actor in the company whose name was Sidney Walker,” remembers YC Director Craig Slaight, “one of the oldest people in the company at the time. He was playing Scrooge. I came through the office reception area one day, and I saw him sitting, talking to the boy playing Tiny Tim. I thought, ‘That’s about as rich as it gets, somebody in his 70s talking to an eight-year-old about the work.’”

Taking the notion of intergenerational training a step further, A.C.T. formalized a mentorship program that pairs Carol’s M.F.A. Program cast members (who are themselves mentored by actors in A.C.T.’s core company) with younger cohorts from the YC. Before rehearsals begin with the full cast, the M.F.A. Program and YC actors come together for a week of classes, where they discuss the world of Dickens’s play and begin to learn the period movement and voice technique required for the show, as well as the elements of professionalism they will need to know when they step into what is, for many, their first professional rehearsal process.

A rich dialogue ensues, and deep and often lasting bonds are formed between the older and younger students. “It’s a once-in-a-lifetime experience for the kids and for the M.F.A. students,” says Slaight. “I know it pays off onstage. But I also think it pays off in a lifetime experience for the kids and for the M.F.A. students,” says Slaight. “I don’t think he would have had a good time at A.C.T. We celebrate the child in all of us here all the time.”

LIFE IS A CABARET FOR THE YC

Last month the A.C.T. Young Conservatory (YC) cabaret and musical ensembles turned the fifth-floor Garret space of the American Conservatory Theater into a swinging club for a presentation of Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered. The program featured a collection of songs about magic, angst, and bafflement, ranging from Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer’s “That Old Black Magic” to “Some Enchanted Evening” from South Pacific. It was the first of four such cabaret presentations that will span the 2010–11 season.

Now in its sixth year, the YC Cabaret Ensemble began in 2005 as a class but quickly expanded into a series of public presentations when YC Director Craig Slaight realized that the Garret provided an ideal setting for cabaret performances. The shows—scheduled for 5 p.m. on select Saturdays and Sundays after matinees of mainstage A.C.T. productions—are simple, elegant, and intimate affairs, with the area’s best high school performers showcasing their singing and acting chops. “Where else in San Francisco can you have a cocktail, watch incredibly gifted singers and actors—dressed beautifully—and be out in time for dinner?” says Slaight. “We sell out every show. And it’s a completely intergenerational audience. Little kids come in, hoping they will one day be able to join a group like this. The parents of the performers, the grandparents, the aunts, the uncles, and the friends arrive in hordes and take over banks of seats. There’s a lot of energy in that room.”

That energy is also found in the rehearsal room every Saturday over the nine-month cabaret season. YC Cabaret Ensemble member Mackenzie Adams tells us, “Everyone is really good and serious about singing, and it is great to be around people like that.” Slaight’s codirector of the ensembles, Jane Hammett, compliments her students: “They are intuitive musicians. They have an innate understanding of music. They listen to a lot of it, and many also play other instruments. Whatever desire is there, I’m going to support that; whatever ability is there, I’m going to try and stretch that.”

With just 17 slots, membership in the YC Cabaret Ensemble has proved to be a hot commodity. For the 2009 season, 70 hopefuls auditioned for the 8 slots being vacated by graduating seniors. Unwilling to pass up all that talent, Slaight and Hammett decided to create a second track—the YC Cabaret Musical Ensemble—doubling the number of young performers they could accommodate.

Slaight and Hammett have clear goals for the groups: “We are teaching cabaret performance as the combination of the actor and the singer, which, so often with teenagers, gets shoehorned into bad recreations of Broadway musicals. We’re not interested in doing Les Mis Junior, Guys and Dolls Middle School—there’s now a Rent Junior. We’re interested in teaching good interpretive skills, the combination of the singer-actor and the actor-singer. The intimacy of the cabaret environment not only facilitates this but demands it; these young men and women learn how to present themselves elegantly and articulately in front of a group of people, really owning the songs and expressing their points of view.”

Slaight contends that cabaret training serves performers well no matter where their interests lie. It is no surprise that many ensemble members pop up in other YC productions, such as Karen Hartman’s Wild Kate, which closed the same weekend as Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered; next spring’s M.F.A. Program coproduction of two plays from Horton Foote’s Orphans’ Home Cycle; and next summer’s world premiere of the original musical Homefront, with a book by Slaight and music and lyrics by American songwriter Creighton Irons. “We’re busy!” Slaight admits. “But the cabarets are one of the most fulfilling things we do. I just find it gives everybody hope.”

Next up for the YC ensembles: a perennial favorite, Singer’s Choice, which plays the weekend of January 29, 2011. Sentimental Journey: Songs from the Second World War follows the weekend of April 9, and the season ends the weekend of May 21 with the annual Comedy Tonight. “Always leave them laughing,” Slaight smiles.

MEET REBEKAH BROCKMAN
A.C.T. M.F.A. PROGRAM CLASS OF 2013

In each program of the A.C.T. mainstage season, we are pleased to introduce to you one of A.C.T.’s remarkable first-year M.F.A.
Program students. In this issue, meet Rebekah Brockman.

NICKNAME Brockman (said with a grumble).

BIRTHPLACE Meadville, PA.

HOMETOWN Erie, PA.

FIRST THEATER EXPERIENCE
I was Cotton Candy in an Odyssey of the Mind skit in grade school. It was a skit promoting health food. I was the villain.

FAVORITE THEATER EXPERIENCE
After rehearsing for a month to play Juliet in Romeo and Juliet, I was taken to see New York City Ballet’s performance of Romeo and Juliet. It was, also, the first time I had been to a professional ballet. I will never forget the experience of seeing this story come alive through physicality, music, and nonverbal acting.

MY STORY My mum grew up performing with a group called the Golden Triangle Tamburitzans, a performance troupe started by her parents and their friends that focused on ethnic song and dance from Croatia and other European cultures. When it came time to involve my siblings and me in part of our heritage, my parents chose Irish dancing because they were both of Irish descent. I started my performance experience there. Since then it has been a series of events and people—including Melanie Bradish, my grade school theater teacher, and Almi, a local community theater director—who have supported me and nourished my fascination with the arts. I am forever grateful for my upbringing and the mentors and teachers that have shaped me as an artist.

RANDOM FACT I broke my nose once . . . a cowbell was involved . . .
long story.

EDUCATION B.F.A. in musical theater from The American Musical and Dramatic Academy.

SPECIAL SKILLS I eat fire.

RECOMMENDATIONS Plays: Honour, by Joanna Murray-Smith; All My Sons, by Arthur Miller; Double Falsehood; or, the Distrest Lovers, by William Shakespeare. Films: Nights of Cabiria, Forrest Gump,
The Godfather. TV: House, Dexter. Bands: Scythian, Thao with the Paulo Coelho, and The Catcher in the Rye, by J. D. Salinger.

Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

James Haire (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne’s National Repertory Theater as an actor and stage manager. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and Georgy (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen’s Don’t Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Ibsen’s Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw’s Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International’s award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle.

What It Means to Be Parents of a YC Student and Supporters of A.C.T.’s Annual Fund and Season Gala

Susan Berston and Patty Stanton were first introduced to A.C.T. through their son, Samuel, when he signed up for a musical theater class in the A.C.T. Young Conservatory (YC). In the YC, which is led by A.C.T. Associate Artist Craig Slaight, students ages 8 to 19 develop their talents, perform in professional-level productions, and gain the confidence to succeed on- and offstage in courses taught by theater professionals who understand and enjoy working with young people. “We were attracted to the caliber of the instructors,” says Berston, a San Francisco native who teaches business at City College of San Francisco. “Craig has established the YC as not only a well-known Bay Area training ground, but as one that has a stellar reputation well beyond the area.”

Currently performing in the roles of Ned Cratchit and Rory Wilkins in the 2010 production of A Christmas Carol, Samuel, a seventh grader at Brandeis Hillel Day School, has already appeared alongside A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program students and professional actors in several productions. Since his performance on the A.C.T. mainstage in last year’s Carol, he has been seen in the YC production of Barbara Field’s I Was a Rat! and as Nathan, the wise son of an out-of-work millworker, in this fall’s M.F.A. Program cabaret production of The Full Monty. Samuel explains, “The classes and shows are really fun. I’ve learned a lot about myself and to be myself.”

The involvement of Stanton (who volunteers in press and public relations for Muttville, a senior dog rescue program) and Berston with A.C.T. has extended beyond watching their son in class and onstage. They support A.C.T.’s Annual Fund and the company’s annual season gala, which raises funds for A.C.T.’s actor training and education programs, because they have seen firsthand how students build self-confidence, feel a part of something greater than themselves, and make deep friendships through A.C.T.’s programs. “It’s so important to have trust among the actors onstage, and the team-building techniques students learn as they develop that trust are essential life skills,” says Stanton.

The two-month commitment that parents make so their child can rehearse and perform in A Christmas Carol is tremendous, but Stanton and Berston are convinced that the rewards of the experience, and other educational opportunities at A.C.T., are invaluable. “A.C.T.’s programs are developing tomorrow’s audiences and are vital to the future of theater,” says Berston.

By contributing to A.C.T.’s Annual Fund and season gala, Stanton and Berston are directly supporting the work that happens in the YC, the three-year M.F.A. Program, and other A.C.T. training programs. You don’t need to have a child onstage to be involved in magical, life-changing events like A Christmas Carol.

For information about the Annual Fund or next June’s Tales of the City World Premiere Gala, contact Associate Director of Development Paul Knudsen at 415.439.2353.

A Christmas Carol 31
You’ve got your ticket to the show. Now help a student get a ticket of their own.

Do you remember your first theater experience? Unfortunately, many children in the Bay Area don’t have access to live theater. With your help, A.C.T. can introduce this life-changing experience to more than 10,000 underserved youth here in our community.

Your gift of:

• $20 gives two students the opportunity to attend an A.C.T. student matinee.
• $50 introduces the world of the play, playwright, and production to a classroom by providing a study guide for every student.
• $75 gives students an inside look at the theater process at a postperformance talk with the cast.
• $150 enhances students’ experience of the play with an in-school workshop, offering additional insights into technique, design, and acting styles.

In the spirit of the holidays, give young students the gift of live theater.

Make your gift online at act-sf.org/donate or pick up a form in our lobby.
