Dear Friends,

There is always reason to celebrate when Bill Irwin returns to San Francisco. One of the most beloved artists to emerge from the fertile artistic world of the Bay Area in the seventies, Bill has brought a remarkable range of work back to his hometown over the years, from the astonishing physical comedy of Fool Moon to the aching existential wonder of Texts for Nothing (both produced here at A.C.T.) to the dangerous emotional terrain of Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

And now, Scapin! Bill first explored this play more than a decade ago in Seattle and in New York, in a version he created himself in collaboration with playwright Mark O’Donnell. Performing the wild triple-threat feat of adapting, directing, AND starring in Scapin was thrilling and fulfilling for this consummate clown, and he was anxious to continue his work on it as a more mature artist. One of the things that keeps luring Bill back to A.C.T. over the years is our school: he loves young actors and has taught memorable classes in our Master of Fine Arts Program, including a classic three-hour session on “tripping and falling” that was one of the most hilarious and moving educational experiences I have ever witnessed. A happy outcome of those classes was the close collaboration that developed between Bill and Jud Williford, an M.F.A. Program student who went on to join our core acting company and has starred in many productions around the Bay Area. Bill decided that if he ever did Scapin again, Jud would be his Sylvestre. A.C.T.’s core company and the abundant talent of Bay Area actors is another big draw for Bill: in considering Scapin, he knew immediately that he wanted René Augesen for Zerbinette, Gregory Wallace for Octave, Steven Anthony Jones for Argante, and his longtime associate and fellow Pickle Family Circus clown Geoff Hoyle for Geronte. And in a move that bodes well for the future of the American theater, Bill auditioned our current senior M.F.A. Program students and chose three to join this merry troupe, a marvelous way for them to both learn and create under his inspired (and antic!) guidance.

The Bay Area has long been home to circus and physical comedy troupes of all kinds: it was with the groundbreaking, clown-centered Pickles (who influenced the creation of Cirque de Soleil) that Bill first honed his skills. The same can be said for costume designer Beaver Bauer, who currently creates amazing clothes for Teatro Zinzanni, and for Pickle composer/musicians Randy Craig, who has created live scores for many groups around town (including the San Francisco Mime Troupe) for many years, and famed “body percussionist” Keith Terry. But Scapin is much more than circus: it is a deftly constructed comedy of love and loss. It’s a wry and lovely celebration that invites an audience into its comic mayhem, a totally theatrical experience that can only be experienced live. So we’re delighted that you’re here in person to share it with us!

We are also more than delighted to welcome our new executive director, Ellen Richard, to A.C.T. In the coming months we hope you will all have a chance to meet Ellen, at the theater and at gatherings around town. She comes to us from a remarkable career in New York and is something of a legend in theater circles around the country. A.C.T. appealed to Ellen because of our unique mission, the engagement of our audience, and our conservatory, which represents a new challenge for her. She arrives just as we’ve closed the books on the extremely successful 2009–10 season, which we ended with a surplus and The Tosca Project’s celebration of San Francisco. We think this is an auspicious moment for her to join the A.C.T. family, launching her tenure with a project by Bill Irwin, whom she has known and worked with for so many years, and I very much look forward to working with her.

We have spent the summer in feverish preparations for the coming year, including our cross–Bay Area collaboration with Marin Theatre Company and Magic Theatre on Tarell Alvin McCraney’s powerful Brother/Sister Plays trilogy—which brings Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet to our own stage next month—and a great deal of script and score work on our spring blockbuster, the brand-new musical Armistead Maupin’s Tales of the City, based on Armistead’s much-loved San Francisco novels. We are hugely excited about the artists and projects that lie before us and deeply grateful that you have chosen to be part of the season. As always, we look forward to your thoughts, and look forward to the journey ahead.

Yours,

Carey Perloff

CLYBOURNE PARK

by BRUCE NORRIS
Directed by JONATHAN MOSCONE

“A spiky and dammingly insightful new comedy”

The New York Times

Home is where the heart—and history—is in Clybourne Park, which cleverly spins the events of the incendiary 1959 drama A Raisin in the Sun to reveal fresh perspectives on the politics of race, class, and real estate in America. A “buzz-saw sharp new comedy” (The Washington Post) from an adamant provocateur, Clybourne Park explores the potent theme of gentrification as it stirs up the divisive ghosts that lurk beneath the contemporary veneer of political correctness.

ACT NOW!
THE HOMECOMING
by HAROLD PINTER
Directed by CAREY PERLOFF
“Pinter’s masterpiece”
The New York Times
A.C.T. celebrates Nobel Prize—winning playwright Harold Pinter’s legacy with his most sexually provocative play. A long-absent son and his attractive wife, Ruth, return to his contentious childhood home in London’s East End. Caught in a grueling power struggle, father and sons vie for Ruth’s attention and affection with outrageous consequences in a play that changed the face of 20th-century drama.

NO EXIT
by JEAN-PAUL SARTRE
Adapted from the French by PAUL BOWLES
Conceived and directed by KIM COLLIER
“Epic, voyeuristic, theater-as-film staging that can only be described as spectacularly brilliant.” Calgary Herald
Fresh from sold-out performances across Canada, Jean-Paul Sartre’s redefined classic makes its U.S. debut at A.C.T. A mysterious valet ushers three people into a shabby hotel room, and they soon discover that hell isn’t fire and brimstone at all—it’s other people. Sartre’s 1944 existential classic, skillfully reimagined through the perspective of a series of hidden cameras, turns the stage into a cinema, and the audience into voyeurs, as a thrillingly staged “live film” takes place before your eyes.

ARMISTEAD MAUPIN’S
TALES OF THE CITY
A NEW MUSICAL
Libretto by JEFF WHITTY
Music and lyrics by JAKE SHEARS and JOHN GARDEN
Based on ARMISTEAD MAUPIN’s TALES OF THE CITY and MORE TALES OF THE CITY
Directed by JASON MOORE
On the bustling streets of 1970s San Francisco, neon lights pierce through the fog-drenched skies, disco music explodes from crowded nightclubs, and a wide-eyed Midwestern girl finds a new home—and creates a new kind of family—with the characters at 28 Barbary Lane. Three decades after Armistead Maupin mesmerized millions with his daily column in the city’s newspapers, detailing the lives and (multiple) loves of Mary Ann, Mouse, Mona, Brian, and their beloved but mysterious landlady, Mrs. Madrigal, his iconic San Francisco saga comes home as a momentous new musical.

This adaptation of Molière’s Scapin was originally produced by Seattle Repertory Theatre, Seattle, Washington. Originally produced in New York City by Roundabout Theatre Company in the Laura Pels Theatre. Scapin is presented by special arrangement with Dramatists Play Service, Inc., New York.
All writers borrow. They use what’s around them: history and current events; novels, plays, and stories that they pick up in the course of their reading and then walk off with; their own and their families’ lives—alienating relatives by revealing secrets and bad behavior is a writer’s occupational hazard. Molière borrowed so much from the commedia dell’arte—the Italian comic troupes known for their virtuoso improvisations on stock characters and their emphasis on physical acting—in terms of people, situations, and point of view that it’s hard to pinpoint where commedia ends and Molière begins.

For 15 years until his death in 1673, Molière’s company and an Italian commedia troupe shared a Parisian theater: first the Petit-Bourbon and, beginning in 1660, the grand Palais-Royale. The Italian company was led by Tiberio Fiorelli, inventor of Scaramouche, the character described by commedia scholar Pierre Louis Duchartre as a valet who “loves all women and bottles.” Molière is said to have modeled one of his most famous characters, Sganarelle, closely on Scaramouche. Indeed, a jealous contemporary of Molière characterized his method of creating Sganarelle as not so much modeling as stealing. He described Molière as holding up a mirror to Fiorelli and imitating every “contortion, posture, and grimace of the great Scaramouche.” In any case, Molière and Fiorelli were close friends, and no doubt the learning went both ways. It was said of Fiorelli: “He was Molière’s master, and Nature was his own.”

Molière’s attraction to commedia predated his meeting with Fiorelli. His first notable success, L’étourdi (The Blunderer), was based on a commedia scenario, or plot outline, by the actor Niccolo Barbieri, who had written it out and published it as a complete play. Barbieri also happened to originate the servant character called Scapino, who—along with Scaramouche, the servant figure Brighella, and Arlecchino (Harlequin)—form Scapin’s complicated family tree.

Molière borrowed everything from commedia that wasn’t nailed down, including such situations and stock characters as the greedy old man called a pantalone, who is perpetually terrified of being cuckolded by his much younger wife or robbed of his daughter and wealth by an undeserving—meaning poor—young suitor; the wily servants who bring the lovers together; and others. Molière wasn’t alone, of course, in his assiduous mining of commedia ore. In The Taming of the Shrew, Gremio is referred to as a “pantaloon,” and there’s speculation that Shylock, who we’re told bemoans the loss of his daughter and his ducats in the same breath, first occurred to Shakespeare as a pantalone figure.

Equally important was the influence of the Italians’ acting style. French acting in the mid-17th century was static, grave, declamatory, and often so loud and intense that it was alleged to give actors apoplexy onstage. Whether that was literally true or not, the commedia-inspired comedies that Molière was writing required a style in which they could be effectively played. The Italians were known for their liveliness, spontaneity, and natural speech, and the style that Molière developed from observing them was swift, light, graceful, and physical.

The commedia players themselves were hardly amateurs when it came to the art of borrowing. They took their physical approach to acting from the ropedancing, miming, tumbling, and other acrobatics their ancestors had done in fairs and festivals in the classical era of Greece and Rome and that lived on in the street and fair entertainments that were ubiquitous in Renaissance Italy. The characters and situations that Molière took from them they had acquired from the ancient Atellan farces of southern Italy, which had among their recurring characters a comic old man, a braggart, and a gluttonous fool. These figures in turn have roots in the comedy of Hellenistic Greece, where the same characters are found alongside separated lovers and the usual wily servants. It’s easy to follow their footprints beyond commedia and Molière into music hall, vaudeville, and the great early film comedians such as Chaplin, Keaton, and Lloyd into television sitcoms.

The commedia actors were virtuosos not only in physical comedy and improvisation, but also in prodigious feats of memory. The best of them were voracious readers; those who played the lovers, for example, were expected to learn all the new romantic poetry so they could turn it into dialogue when they improvised a scene.
Molière didn’t limit himself to his commedia colleagues when searching out material for Scapin. He brazenly took a line from a 17-year-old play called Le pédant joué (The Pedant Imitated), by Cyrano de Bergerac. It was considered the great punch line of its day and was still associated with Cyrano, but Molière, who said forthrightly that his policy in these matters was “I take it where I find it,” didn’t hesitate (the line has something to do with a boat). Using the line may have inspired him next to borrow an event from Cyrano’s life involving a hammer and a scaffold.

Les fourberies de Scapin (The Tricks of Scapin), which premiered on May 24, 1671, was born of twin necessities: to fill an empty theater and to stay out of trouble. Molière’s most recent play, Psyché, written in collaboration with Corneille, had been a big success at court, and he hoped to transfer it to the Palais-Royale. Psyché, however, was an elaborate comedy-ballet, a spectacle featuring music by Lully, dozens of dancers and singers, and characters who floated across the stage borne aloft by a vast, custom-built machine. This contraption, originally constructed to fly the entire royal family and their attendants in an opera called Ercole amante (Hercules in Love), proved too heavy to sit on the Palais-Royale’s stage without alterations, which took six months to accomplish. Molière could ill afford to keep the theater dark for so long, so to fill the gap he dashed off Scapin.

His plays satirizing the mores of the aristocracy and emerging middle class had kept Molière in and out of hot water for years. Tartuffe, written and rewritten between 1664 and 1669, offended the Church and the powerful religious party that surrounded Louis XIV; on the order of the president of the Paris parliament the play was banned, and the archbishop of Paris forbade his parishioners from seeing it on pain of excommunication. It was only the fact that Molière was protected by his patron the king (his company was indeed known as la troupe du roi) that saved him from likely excommunication himself. In 1669, he presented a revised version of Tartuffe at the Palais-Royale. It was an instant hit and one of Molière’s few real financial successes. This must have been gratifying; still the play left him with powerful enemies and lingering bad feelings. An inoffensive domestic comedy was called for. Yet, while Scapin seems to fit that description, Molière couldn’t help giving a good nose-thumbing to authority in a play that celebrates freedom, joy, and the triumph of resourceful servants.

Scapin was a failure. If Tartuffe was too dangerous, many of Molière’s supporters thought the new play was too slight. One of them said that in Scapin’s knockabout comedy he didn’t recognize the author of The Misanthrope. If Molière gave offense, he found himself in trouble. If he didn’t, he was deemed insufficiently profound. It’s no wonder he died at 51.

The Fiorelli company would also experience a run-in with censorship following Molière’s death. It had resided in Paris since 1661, and for much of that time had the reputation of being bawdy and even scurrilous as well as brilliant, but since it performed much of its dialogue in Italian, audiences either didn’t notice or they looked the other way. Around the time that the commedia troupe moved into the Palais-Royale, however, they began mixing French with their Italian, and their offenses, if that’s what they were, were unmasked. In 1696, they were warned to tone down their performances or pay the consequences. The following year, they announced a play called La fausse prude (The False Prude), which apparently satirized the sexual attitudes and habits of the king’s wife, Madame de Maintenon. Before they could perform it, the chief of police received a letter from the palace: “The King has dismissed his Italian Players, and his Majesty commands me to write you that you shall tomorrow, May 13th, 1697, close their theater forever.” The king banned them from performing within 30 miles of Paris, their home for more than a century.

The troupe’s leaders returned to Italy. Other members stayed on to play at Paris’s two annual fairs. They sang, mimed, did acrobatics, danced on a wire suspended above a trestle stage, and found other ways of telling a story without dialogue. It would be 19 years before they were allowed to play again in a theater.

Meanwhile, the great tradition of taking it where one finds it continues in the 21st century. In translating and adapting this version of Scapin, Bill Irwin and Mark O’Donnell have borrowed one or two things very close to home—as you are about to see.
Next spring Armistead Maupin’s best-selling novels come to life as a momentous new musical from Jeff Whitty and Jason Moore, the creators of Avenue Q, and Jake Shears and John Garden, the musical minds behind the glam-rock phenomenon Scissor Sisters. On behalf of the artists creating this new work and the thousands of audience members who will experience this remarkable story, we invite you to support this world premiere production at A.C.T.

As a member of The TALES OF THE CITY Circle, you will have an exclusive opportunity to go behind the scenes and witness the creation of an epic theatrical event. You’ll receive invitations to attend workshops, readings, and rehearsals—all leading up to a thrilling walk down the red carpet on opening night as A.C.T.’s honored guest at our world premiere gala celebration, scheduled for June 1, 2011.

Performance program recognition and numerous other benefits will be provided with gifts of $1,200 or more.

JEAN-BAPTISTE POQUELIN

The comedy master known as Molière was baptized Jean-Baptiste Poquelin on January 15, 1622, in Paris. His father, Jean the elder, was a successful upholsterer who purchased the post of tapissier ordinaire du roi, or royal furnisher. Young Poquelin was educated at the rigorous Jesuit Collège de Clermont, which, as the Lycée Louis-le-Grand, trained many other brilliant Frenchmen, including Voltaire, Pierre Gassendi, and Cyrano de Bergerac.

An important part of Poquelin's upbringing was the regular visits he made with his maternal grandfather to the farces and tragedies performed at the Hôtel de Bourgogne, one of the two indoor theaters in Paris—where a trio of famous clowns would close any play—and the fair at Saint-Germain.

Poquelin studied law after finishing his secondary education and was admitted to the bar in 1641. He renounced this life in 1643 to join with nine others to establish the Illustre-Théâtre. He took his stage name, Molière, in 1644, presumably to shield his family from the embarrassment of association with the disreputable acting profession. Three of the founders of the new troupe were members of the established theatrical Béjart family, which included the successful tragedienne Madeleine. She and Molière began a long and fruitful association that ranged from romantic to eventually purely professional; in 1662 Molière married Madeleine's daughter, Armande Béjart, an event that generated scandalized uproar throughout Parisian society (for it was widely rumored that Molière was Armande's father).

The Illustre-Théâtre fought a losing battle for financial success in Paris, in large part because they were considered unsuccessful at playing tragedy, the dominant dramatic form of the time. When the company collapsed, Molière and his associates fled the city to tour the provinces. During their 13 years in provincial exile, comedy as a dramatic form grew in popularity; Molière wrote, directed, and performed several during this period, including his comedy Le docteur amoureux (The Amorous Doctor). King Louis XIV favored it over everything else on the program, and its success secured for Molière's company the patronage of both the king and his brother, Philippe, duc d'Orléans. The company became known as le troupe du roi and was installed in the Théâtre du Petit-Bourbon. (Molière's company would later form the foundation of the Comédie-Française, honored to this day as the national theater of France.) From then on Molière focused increasingly on his own work as a writer of comedy and on his responsibilities as actor/manager/producer.

Once established in Paris, Molière went on to write and act in a series of plays that satirized Parisian society and the royal court while winning the enduring admiration of the king: Les précieuses ridicules (The Affected Young Ladies, 1659), Sganarelle (1660), L'école des maris (The School for Husbands, 1661), L'école des femmes (The School for Wives, 1662), Tartuffe (1664), Dom Juan (1665), Le Misanthrope (1666), Le médecin malgré lui (The Doctor in Spite of Himself, 1666), L'Avarue (The Miser, 1668), George Dandin (1668), Le bourgeois gentilhomme (The Bourgeois Gentleman, 1670), Les fourberies de Scapin (The Tricks of Scapin, 1671), and Les femmes savantes (The Learned Ladies, 1672), among many others.

The king's favor earned Molière the envy of his theatrical and social rivals, and his unyielding and unerring mockery of the hypocrisy of Parisian social and religious life engendered the ire of the Catholic Church. These two groups would dog Molière for the rest of his life, causing him to struggle constantly to hold his company together.

A life spent traversing the extremes of success and adversity exhausted Molière. On February 17, 1673, at age 51, he collapsed backstage while playing the title role of The Imaginary Invalid. He was conveyed to his house in the rue de Richelieu, where he soon died. After two priests refused to hear Molière's deathbed renunciation of his profession—a common practice of dying actors, who were forbidden by Church law to be buried in consecrated ground—Armande requested special permission so her husband could be buried with appropriate sanctity. The king agreed, but the archbishop stipulated that the burial be held without ceremony, at night. Molière was buried after sunset on February 21 in the cemetery of Saint-Joseph.

Bill Irwin was an actor before he was a clown. After a few years of clowning with the Pickle Family Circus, he returned to acting. Now, in Scapin, he’s doing both.

Raised in Southern California and Oklahoma, Irwin attended Oberlin College in Ohio, where he majored in theater arts. There he sought refuge from the cerebral world of drama by studying the history of clowning. He was hooked. After graduating, he entered the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Clown College, where he learned to appreciate—and transcend—the differences among clown categories. “Auguste and carpet clowning styles interested me, but the look of the whiteface interested me too,” he says. “I took white makeup . . . added baggy clothes, and put on the red nose and wig. It didn’t conform to any historical categories, but I liked the feel.”

After Clown College, Irwin came back west to San Francisco. After a few months working as a bicycle messenger, he answered an ad in the paper: “Wanted: Jugglers, Tumblers, Equilibrists.” Larry Pisoni and Peggy Snider, members of the San Francisco Mime Troupe, were putting together a circus. Irwin auditioned for them in the Mime Troupe’s studio, navigating around the motorcycle parked in the middle of the room, and the chemistry was immediately obvious.

Performing without a tent or live animals, the unconventionally clown-centric Pickle Family Circus officially opened in May 1975 in the gym of John O’Connell High School in San Francisco’s Mission District. Later that year, Pisoni and Irwin were joined by Geoff Hoyle in the center of the ring, where they transformed into the beloved Pickle trio—Lorenzo Pickle (Pisoni), Willy the Clown (Irwin), and Mr. Sniff (Hoyle)—performing extended clown acts, complete with dialogue, in parks and schoolyards up and down the West Coast and beyond. San Francisco Chronicle columnist Jon Carroll contends that their collaboration constituted “the most amazing moment in the history of 20th-century American circus, three great clowns making each other greater.” Evolving into a beloved West Coast institution, the Pickle circus built upon and contributed significantly to the larger comedic tradition that extends from Aristophanes through Italian commedia, Shakespeare’s fools, and vaudeville into New Wave Circus and Cirque du Soleil.

Irwin left the circus in 1980 to create work outside the ring. Combining his unique blend of acting and clowning, he has created an impressive body of original works. Among them is the comic audience-participation escapade Fool Moon, which was seen at A.C.T. in 1998 and 2001 and won Irwin a special Tony Award. Inducted into the International Clown Hall of Fame in 1999, he has also earned acclaim for his “straight” dramatic roles, winning a Best Actor Tony for his performance as George in Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, one of many Broadway appearances. He is also known for his work on the screen, both small and large, beginning with the 1980 film Popeye, which he made with Robin Williams and numerous fellow Pickle performers. His most recent appearance at A.C.T. was in 2001’s Texts for Nothing, his powerful interpretation of Samuel Beckett’s prose meditations on human existence.

Since then, says Irwin, Scapin has sat in his drawer—and in the back of his mind. We sat down with him to ask why Molière’s late work continues to inspire him, and why it requires the sensibilities of both the actor and the clown to do it justice.
HOW IS A CLOWN DIFFERENT FROM AN ACTOR?
Like a Supreme Court justice, I know it when I see it. Some people operate at a magnitude of storytelling that is slightly different from that of a straight-ahead actor who is serving a text. There’s just something about when a really terrific clown does something. It has a different depth of meaning. I hope to be able to do both, acting and clowning. I hope I haven’t lost either set of muscles—that I can be a complete team-player actor one minute and something slightly different from that the next minute, depending on what’s called for.

How do you define who is an actor and who is a clown? I don’t know except to say that the demands of the crafts are different in this way: usually clowning involves somehow acknowledging a live audience (or camera audience), somehow directly relating to them.

DID YOU SEE AN OPPORTUNITY TO DO THAT WITH SCAPIN?
Well, I saw that you could do something interesting with this play, more than other Molière plays. The others don’t seem to lend themselves to adaptation, or ask for adaptation, the way Scapin does. . . . Molière wrote his plays, acted in them, directed them, and shaped them around himself. He knew where the laughs were. He wrote this play that feels, on the surface, like a commedia plot exercise, but I think it (and this is why it lends itself to continued life and reinvention) is really a reflection on the theater: a celebration and declaration of love for the theater.

At the same time, for him, and us, it is like poking fun at your family: in the original French there are lines like, “Here comes my son as if his cue had been called,” and you know that it probably made people laugh, both on- and offstage.

There was a movie that John Turturro did called Illuminata—I had a role in it, one I loved—and it is really about the theater. In the movie, the theater manager says to his actor, “Demetrio,” or whatever his name is, “why are you looking at the audience instead of playing your character?” And the actor says “Well, I know they’re there. And I see that they know that I’m here. And I know that they know that I know they’re there. And I just think, really, that I should look at them.” Either that’s the narcissistic actor, or it’s the brilliant clown. Or both. It’s where storyteller meets entertainer.

That reminds me of an old theater joke. A man goes to the doctor and says, “I’m miserable. I don’t have any will to live. I’m depressed.” And the doctor says, “Well, I can’t find anything physically wrong with you, but, you know, you should go see Grock the clown. He’s playing in town. He’ll make you feel better.” And the man sobs, “But doctor, I am Grock.” That’s told about every famous clown.

ARE YOU SAYING THAT MOST CLOWNS ARE DRIVEN TO PERFORM AND SEEK A RELATIONSHIP WITH THE AUDIENCE BECAUSE THEY’RE UNHAPPY?
It’s a pervasive cliché that every clown is masking despair. I don’t know about that, but I will say this: laughter is a powerful thing. And it is much desired. If you feel you can control it, or convince a producer that you can control it . . . people try to make people laugh as a defense and as a way to empower themselves. It’s like a drug. It’s like being attractive. [Jokingly] There’s also a great love of humanity and enlightenment, but it’s partly about the power. It’s like rock musicians who say, “You go into rock ’n’ roll to get girls. Don’t let anybody tell you differently.” That’s, of course, not the whole story, but there is an element of that that’s true.

Laughter is just too powerful a feeling. If a kid in third grade realizes he’s able to make the class laugh, god help him. God help the teacher. God help everybody. Like all power, it’s addictive.

MANY ADAPTATIONS TRY TO BE HIP AND MODERN, BUT YOU SEEM TO ACHIEVE A TIMELESSNESS WITH YOUR TEXT.
We could be accused of that too, but I really feel that Mark and I served Molière’s text and stayed true to his vision. I have shelves filled with straight-ahead adaptations at home. They tend to be by British translators, so they’re translating into an English that we don’t speak. And they’re trying to translate it line by line. That is one of the accomplishments I am proudest of: in the original, Scapin is “block of text, block of text, block of text, one-liner, block of text,” but we smashed that down to a kind of vaudeville patter.

Any play by a great playwright that is 300-and-something years old demands fidelity: you don’t want to just take it to an unintended place, or if you do, you need to acknowledge that. This one calls on a different kind of adaptation and translation than Molière’s other plays. It’s funnier in many ways. It still makes me laugh.

THE BROTHER/SISTER PLAYS: PART III
MARCUS OR THE SECRET OF SWEET
by Tarell Alvin McCraney
Directed by Mark Rucker

“[McCraney] writes with a passion and urgency that can’t be faked.”
The New York Times

“The arrival of a penetrating theatrical intelligence”
Time Out Chicago

Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet was originally produced at the McCarter Theatre Center with support from the NEA New Play Development Program hosted by Arena Stage.
THE BROTHER/SISTER PLAYS
A.C.T., MAGIC, AND MTC CONVERSE ACROSS THE BAY

In an unprecedented collaboration among three leading theater companies, A.C.T. has teamed up with Magic Theatre and Marin Theatre Company (MTC) to present the West Coast premiere of Tarell Alvin McCraney’s acclaimed trilogy, The Brother/Sister Plays. This is the first time the plays will be presented in tandem at three different theaters. McCraney responded to the announcement: “It’s incredible that these theaters have taken on doing all three plays, really allowing each play to live distinctively and have a conversation with each other across the Bay Area.”

A recent graduate of Yale University’s master of fine arts program, McCraney is currently the international writer in residence at the Royal Shakespeare Company in Stratford, England. His many accolades include the New York Times’s Outstanding Playwright Award. “McCraney is one of the most exciting writers to emerge in the American theater in the past decade,” says A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff. “His work is pungent, passionate, poetic, almost ‘Greek’ in its scope, but also hilarious and accessible.”

Having grown up in the projects of Miami, Florida, McCraney began writing The Brother/Sister Plays out of a need to see his community properly represented in drama. He explains, “I felt like there were a lot of people who weren’t being seen on the stage. I’ve been in the theater all my life, and I just kept thinking that there is a Chekhovian equivalent in the projects, and I don’t see why that voice isn’t being heard.” Out of this desire came three plays: In the Red and Brown Water, The Brothers Size, and Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet. All take place in the fictional Louisiana town of San Pere on the edge of the bayou. “I’ve had a long love affair with that murky water,” reveals McCraney. “Two portions of the earth meet in that gulf, and it’s such a rich and fecund place . . . [where] French and Spanish and African blood mixed to make this incredible hodgepodge. . . . For me it’s about a rich history that’s essentially American. You cannot find a place more American than Louisiana.”

Navigating a multitheater partnership is tricky, and “[the fact] that three theaters could agree to mount a trilogy together speaks to the sheer genius, relevance, and importance of Tarell’s voice and vision,” says MTC Artistic Director Jasson Minadakis. MTC Producing Director Ryan Rilette, who directs In the Red and Brown Water, agrees: “As much creative collaboration as we do in the theater, it is very rare for two theaters to collaborate institutionally. So for the three of us to work together on this and present this for the city—it’s a really special event.” A.C.T. Associate Artistic Director Mark Rucker, director of Marcus, adds, “Each of the three theaters is doing the play that they love the most.” “And,” continues Octavio Solis, director of The Brothers Size, “We each have the play that is best suited to our space.”

A nontraditional trilogy in many ways, The Brother/Sister Plays build on each other, much like the oral Yoruban myths that inspired them. “The plays do not line up in a chronological or perfect way,” the playwright clarifies. “They lie ‘about’ each other. As stories are told and retold, some things get lost in the telling and some things get made up.” Rilette suggests, “You don’t have to see all three, and you don’t have to see them all consecutively. But seeing all three, you start to see how the threads—both thematically and character-wise—start to weave through. There’s a cumulative weight to them that is really phenomenal.”

A.C.T.’s Marcus follows In the Red and Brown Water at MTC and The Brothers Size at Magic. “That’s what I feel most excited about,” confesses Rucker. “We get to finish [the cycle] with this very beautiful play that brings everything full circle. It brings all of the themes together and finds an understanding.”

The Brother/Sister Plays offer another cause for celebration: their casts feature several A.C.T. M.F.A. Program students: Lakisha Michelle May ’10 plays the lead of In the Red and Brown Water. Tobie L. Windham ’10 and Alex Ubokudom ’10 perform two of the three roles in The Brothers Size. Marcus features Windham and Omozé Idehenre ’10 and two current students, Richard Prioleau ’11 and Shinelle Azoroh ’11, working alongside core acting company member Gregory Wallace and Bay Area favorite Margo Hall. “In a way,” rejoices Rucker, “I have a group of actors who are already an ensemble—and that’s half the work.”
Inside A.C.T.

Dear Friends,

As we celebrate the opening of A.C.T.’s inspiring 2010–11 season, we are delighted to welcome to A.C.T.’s ranks our new executive director, Ellen Richard, who arrived in San Francisco just a few weeks ago.

An acclaimed theater administrator and producer, Ellen comes to us from New York City, where she most recently served as executive director of off Broadway’s nonprofit Second Stage Theatre. Before joining Second Stage, Ellen enjoyed an impressive 22-year career with Roundabout Theatre Company, which she transformed from a small nonprofit organization into one of the leading performing arts institutions in the country while earning six Tony Awards as a producer for Broadway productions of Cabaret, A View from the Bridge, Side Man, Nine, Assassins, and Glengarry Glen Ross.

We believe Ellen’s expertise in marketing, facilities development, financial planning, and organizational change will serve A.C.T. beautifully as we begin to implement our new long-range strategic plan. She is a champion of artists, artist training, and arts education and a passionate believer in the central role theater can play in a community.

We are deeply excited to be working with Ellen, and can’t wait for you to meet her. When you see her at the theater, stop and say hello!

Sincerely,

Nancy Livingston
Chair, A.C.T. Board of Trustees

Rusty Rueff
President, A.C.T. Board of Trustees

NEW TEAM AT THE TOP

Last June, the A.C.T. Board of Trustees adopted a strategic plan that sets ambitious goals for the theater’s next decade and beyond. To oversee the execution of that plan, the board elected a new chair—longtime A.C.T. supporter and chair of the recently completed $31 million Next Generation Campaign Nancy Livingston—and president—internet executive and philanthropist Rusty Rueff. They are joined by Executive Director Ellen Richard and acclaimed director Mark Rucker, who this season joins A.C.T. as associate artistic director. Here’s a brief introduction to the newest members of A.C.T.’s executive team.

NANCY LIVINGSTON: TURNING ASPIRATIONS INTO REALITY

New board chair Nancy Livingston, with her husband, Fred Levin, has subscribed to A.C.T. for 26 years. A graduate of Boston University with a distinguished career in advertising, she also serves on the National Alumni Council and the Dean’s Advisory Board of the College of Communications at BU. Dedicated, magnanimous philanthropists who serve as directors of The Shenson Foundation, Livingston and Levin have together served as producers of five A.C.T. productions.

Livingston is a passionate proponent of the arts and arts education, and attends performing arts events all over San Francisco. “Fred and I have always believed that the arts are integral to a healthy community,” she says. “Creativity is what inspires, nourishes, and enriches us. The impact of storytelling, whether it is in theater, dance, music, or the visual arts, is fundamental. It is a part of our history and, at the same time, extremely present. It allows us to push past obstacles and come together in powerful and unpredictable ways.”

After leading A.C.T.’s successful $31 million Next Generation Campaign, which established A.C.T.’s first-ever endowment, Livingston spearheaded the most recent phase of the theater’s long-range strategic planning process. As board chair, she will now be charged with implementing that plan. “It’s an honor to step into this new role with the company with which I have had the pleasure of working so closely in recent years,” she says. “I’m excited about the possibilities we have put forth in our new strategic plan and am looking forward to working with Rusty and the rest of the board to turn our aspirations into reality.”
RUSTY RUEFF: AN INTIMATE AFFAIR WITH THE THEATER

A lifelong theater lover, board president Rusty Rueff served with his wife, Patti, on the boards of theaters in Dallas and Taos before making San Francisco their permanent home in 1998. Former CEO of the digital music commerce company SNOCAP, executive vice president of Electronic Arts (EA), current vice chair of the GRAMMY Foundation, and a member of Purdue’s College of Liberal Arts Dean’s Advisory Board, Rueff joined the A.C.T. Board of Trustees in 2003.

Rueff’s intimate affair with the theater began at the age of seven, when his father took him to see Dracula at Actors Theatre of Louisville. At ten years old he played Winthrop in The Music Man, and he continued to act through his sophomore year at Hanover College. Those early experiences in the theatrical trenches gave Rueff an enduring appreciation for the art form and the immense effort required to bring a production to the stage. “An audience only gets to see the last 2 percent,” he says. “There’s 98 percent that happens before the show ever hits the stage. To me, the most fascinating and exciting part is that 98 percent.”

Rueff is thrilled to take up his new position at the helm of A.C.T. “If we can bring to life the strategic plan we’re working on, we can ensure the stature and sustainability of this organization for the next hundred years. We’re just at the beginning of what the next generation is for A.C.T., and I’m extremely excited about this next act in our history.”

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR ELLEN RICHARD: SHE SAVORS A CHALLENGE

While studying music in her Connecticut high school, Ellen Richard was drafted by the theater department of the local university. Since stepping behind the curtain, she has never looked back, working over the course of her career as a scenic artist, stitcher, sound designer, box office manager, front of house manager, business manager, and eventually senior executive at major theaters in Connecticut and New York.

A former competitive bicycle racer, avid sailor, and savvy theater producer with some 150 credits, Richard savors a challenge—a fundamental factor in her decision to move across the country to take up her new position at A.C.T. “This is not just another ‘Oh, let’s just sell six plays’ kind of job,” she says. “A.C.T. is a leader nationally, both as a producer of big, bold, and intelligent theater and as a center for exceptional actor training. I’m amazed at how committed the board is to the company and how each and every trustee feels like a champion of the institution and its future. I am very impressed by the level of strategic planning already in place, and I look forward to working with the board and Carey—who has to be one of the smartest, most energetic, and warmest people I’ve ever met—to turn those plans into reality. I’m excited by the opportunity to apply my skills in a new environment, new city, and different audience, and there isn’t another city I’d go to. I’m thrilled to become a part of San Francisco’s vibrant arts community.”

ASSOCIATE ARTISTIC DIRECTOR MARK RUCKER: BUILDING BRIDGES

Mark Rucker has been directing plays since the third grade, when he took over his school’s production of The Night before Christmas. He went on to direct in his high school’s drama program, in UCLA’s directing program, at his own theater in Los Angeles, in Yale’s graduate program, and as a freelance artist over the past 20 years at regional theaters across the country.

Rucker balances an abiding love of Shakespeare with an extraordinary facility for working with living writers on new plays. He first came to A.C.T. to direct Amy Freed’s The Beard of Avon in 2002, returning over the years to direct The Rainmaker and Luminescence Dating, as well as The Critic, or A Tragedy Rehearsed and Once in a Lifetime with the M.F.A. Program. Last fall he joined A.C.T. part time as a consulting producer on November and member of the artistic team, assisting with season programming.

As A.C.T.’s new associate artistic director, Rucker will be taking on administrative and producing duties in the artistic department, as well as directing mainstage shows (including the upcoming Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet) and directing and teaching in the conservatory. Serving as the primary liaison between the artistic department, the conservatory, and the rest of the organization, he sees himself as a bridge builder, as well as Artistic Director Carey Perloff’s right-hand man.

“I am happiest when I can unify people in a group, and that’s something I’m very interested in doing here,” says Rucker. “Since the students have begun to work ever more closely with the professional company and with each other, the conservatory is more connected to the artistic part of the organization than ever before. At the same time, I get to do projects that I find stimulating. I’m very fortunate in that the first play I’m directing as associate artistic director, Marcus, is one I feel deeply connected to and represents my goal of building bridges in the community.”

WHAT WE DID LAST SUMMER

Over the past couple of months, while the Young Conservatory, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. were in full swing, A.C.T. students and artists traveled far and wide in pursuit of theatrical adventure.

Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program students Marisa Duchowny and Max Rosenak (both class of 2011) journeyed to San Miniato, Italy, to study at the Teatro di Pisa European School for the Art of the Actor. “It was an incredible, communal experience,” says Rosenak (who performed in TheatreFIRST’s production of The Drawer Boy before departing for Europe), “creating beautiful art with beautiful people.” A.C.T. Head of Voice Jeffrey Crockett also participated in the program, as a member of the internationally assembled visiting faculty.

Back on this side of the Atlantic, Artistic Director Carey Perloff spoke at the national Theatre Communications Group conference in Chicago and the Aspen Ideas Festival in Colorado before working with Nilo Cruz on his new play The Color of Desire at the Cape Cod Theatre Project—run by A.C.T. alum and actor (Speed-the-Plow, November) Andrew Polk. She spent the rest of the summer directing Timberlake Wertenbaker’s new adaptation (commissioned by A.C.T.) of Sophocles’ Elektra for the Getty Villa in Malibu. Elektra features an original score by Bonfire Madigan Shive (‘Tis Pity She’s a Whore) and a stellar cast that includes A.C.T. Trustee Olympia Dukakis, Associate Artists Manolo Felciano and Jack Willis, and favorites Michele Shay (Gem of the Ocean) and Pamela Reed (The Goat, or Who is Sylvia?).

Here in the Bay Area, Shinelle Azoroh (M.F.A. Program class of 2011) presented her own solo show, Cinnamon, directed by recent grad Tobie Windham III and produced by their company, Renovation Theatre Company. Based on the experiences of her first two years in graduate school, Cinnamon brings Azoroh face to face with significant women from the past. “Producing my own work feeds me with the inspiration to do the work of other writers,” says Azoroh. “Your life is part of your process as an actor, so I felt I had to engulf myself in my own experiences, to find my own voice through the voices of these women, before beginning my third and final year of training.”

A.C.T. ALUMNI AT A GLANCE: WHAT THEY’RE DOING NOW

Around the Bay . . . Just before stepping into their roles in A.C.T.’s Scapin, Jud Wiliford ’04 (as Macbeth) and Omoze Idehenre ’10 (joined by Nicholas Pelczar ’09 and Nick Childress ’10) wreaked bloody havoc in the Scottish play at California Shakespeare Theater. Also in Scapin (backing up Geoff Hoyle) is Rod Gnapp ’87. The upcoming class of 2011 is also prominently featured on the A.C.T. mainstage, with Ashley Wickett, Patrick Lane, and Richardson Jones performing in Scapin. (For the scoop on students and alums in The Brother/Sister Plays, see page 23.) Earlier this summer, Alex Ubokudom ’10 appeared in The Wanderings of Odysseus at Stanford Summer Theater, while at Shakespeare Santa Cruz Richard Prieouleau ’11 was joined by J. Todd Adams ’96 in Love’s Labor’s Lost and Othello and Mairin Lee ’10 captured Marco Barricelli’s heart in The Lion in Winter. Patrick Russell ’09 and Jon Gentry ’10 finish up their run in Trouble in Mind at Aurora Theatre Company September 26. FAVORITE THEATER EXPERIENCE Performing a theatrical concert at Edward W. Powers Auditorium in Youngstown, Ohio, onstage with my friends in front of hundreds of fans, pumping out music from our new CD. The set was a full-size house that we, DaVision Records, built together from scratch!

IF I COULD PLAY ANY ROLE, I WOULD WANT TO PLAY Hamlet, the most challenging and brilliantly written role I can think of.

MY STORY The Love started with my inclinations toward film and comedy as a teenager. My parents gave me their Sony Handycam, and I immediately commenced shooting a remake of Monty Python and the Holy Grail. After traveling a bit and becoming engrossed in the music scene, I eventually landed in New York City as a music business student. In my down time I decided to take an acting workshop with a teacher who would eventually become my mentor, Bruce Ornstein. Once I started digging into the psychology of the characters, the text of the authors, and the performances created onstage, I was hooked. I felt the Love again, this time in a very personal way. Acting was it for me.

RANDOM FACT I lived with Lucifer, the president/founder of the national motorcycle club Legion of Doom (L.O.D.), in Brooklyn.

EDUCATION Film at the University of Colorado at Boulder; music production at Belmont University in Nashville, Tennessee.

SPECIAL SKILLS Watch out! I know kung fu.

HOBBIES Incessant movie-watching, tennis, and anything involving a beach, mountains, or a raging river.

José Rivera’s Boleros for the Disenchanted; the world premieres of Philip Kan Gotanda’s After the War (A.C.T. commission) and her own adaptation (with Paul Walsh) of A Christmas Carol; the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s The Invention of Love and Indian Ink and Harold Pinter’s Celebration; A.C.T.–commissioned translations/adaptations of Hecuba, The Misanthrope, Enrico IV, Mary Stuart, Uncle Vanya, and A Mother; The Voysey Inheritance (adapted by David Mamet); the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian’s Singer’s Boy; and major revivals of ‘Tis Pity She’s a Whore, The Government Inspector, Happy End (including a critically acclaimed cast album recording), A Doll’s House, Waiting for Godot, The Three Sisters, The Threepenny Opera, Old Times, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Creditor, The Room, Home, The Tempest, and Stoppard’s Rock ‘n’ Roll, Travesties, The Real Thing, Night and Day, and Arcadia. Perloff’s work for A.C.T. also includes Marie Ndiaye’s Hilda, the world premieres of Marc Blitzstein’s No for an Answer and David Lang/Mac Wellman’s The Difficulty of Crossing a Field, and the West Coast premiere of her own play The Colossus of Rhodes (Susan Smith Blackburn Award finalist). Her play Luminescence Dating premiered in New York at The Ensemble Studio Theatre, was coproduced by A.C.T. and Magic Theatre, and is published by Dramatists Play Service. Her play Waiting for the Flood has received workshops at A.C.T., New York Stage & Film, and Roundabout Theatre Company; her latest play, Higher, was developed at New York Stage and Film and will be presented at San Francisco’s Contemporary Jewish Museum in November. Her one-act The Morning After was a finalist for the Heideman Award at Actors Theatre of Louisville. Perloff has collaborated as a director on new plays by many notable writers, including Gotanda, Nilo Cruz, and Robert O’Hara. She most recently directed a new Elektra for the Getty Villa in Los Angeles.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language, and many classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won numerous OBIE Awards, including the 1988 OBIE for artistic excellence. In 1993, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A recipient of France’s Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres and the National Corporate Theatre Fund’s 2007 Artistic Achievement Award, Perloff received a B.A. Phi Beta Kappa in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. She is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

ELLEN RICHARD (Executive Director) joined A.C.T. as executive director in August 2010. She served previously as executive director of off-Broadway’s nonprofit Second Stage Theatre in New York City. During her tenure at Second Stage, she was responsible for the purchase contract of the Helen Hayes Theatre and substantial growth in subscription income and growth in individual giving. Under Richard’s leadership, Second Stage provided the initial home for the Broadway productions Everyday Rapture, Next to Normal, and The Little Dog Laughed.

From 1983 to 2005, Richard enjoyed a rich and varied career with Roundabout Theatre Company. By the time she departed as managing director, Roundabout had been transformed from a small nonprofit on the verge of bankruptcy into one of the country’s largest and most successful theater companies of its kind. Richard is the recipient of six Tony Awards as producer, for Roundabout productions of Cabaret (1998), A View from the Bridge (1998), Side Man (1999), Nine (2003), Assassins (2004), and Glengarry Glen Ross (2005). Producer of more than 125 shows at Roundabout, she had direct supervision of all general and production management, marketing, and financial aspects of the theater’s operations. She conceptualized and oversaw the redesign of the three permanent Roundabout stages—Studio 54, the American Airlines Theatre, and the Harold and Miriam Steinberg Center for Theatre. She directed the location search for Cabaret and supervised the creation of that production’s environmental Kit Kat Klub.

Prior to her tenure at Roundabout, Richard served as business manager of...
Westport Country Playhouse, theater manager for Stamford Center for the Arts, and business manager for Atlas Scenic Studio. She began her career working as a stagehand, sound designer, and scenic artist assistant.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director) oversees the administration of A.C.T.’s Master of Fine Arts Program, Young Conservatory, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T., in addition to serving as the master acting teacher of the M.F.A. Program. Before joining A.C.T. in 1995, Smith served as director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting for six years. She has worked with people of all ages in venues around the country, including teaching in Hawaii and in Florence, Italy. Also a professional actor, she has performed in numerous off-off Broadway plays and at regional theaters, including A.C.T. In 2004 she toured London and Birmingham (U.K.) in Berkeley Repertory Theatre’s production of Continental Divide. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIRE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne’s National Repertory Theater as an actor and stage manager. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and Georgy (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen’s Don’t Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Ibsen’s Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw’s Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International’s award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A MEMBER OF A.C.T.’S PROSPERO SOCIETY AND PRODUCERS CIRCLE

Bert Steinberg and Lucia Brandon (Lucie) credit A.C.T. with their decision to become a couple. When Bert and his late wife, Sophie, first moved to Walnut Creek in 1989, they became fast friends with Lucie through the Jewish Community Center. After Bert’s wife passed away in 1996, Bert invited Lucie to share his A.C.T. subscription seats with him, and they’ve been together ever since.

Bert serves on the steering committee of A.C.T.’s Prospero Society, and Lucie is one of the society’s newest members. Though they support numerous arts and community organizations, Bert and Lucie consider A.C.T. among their favorites and have both included bequests to A.C.T. in their wills.

Also Producers Circle members, Bert and Lucie are producing Marcus; or The Secret of Sweet this year. A trustee of Magic Theatre, Bert is excited to support the unique Brother/Sister Plays collaboration among Marin Theatre Company, the Magic, and A.C.T. As Producers and Prospero Society members, Bert and Lucie enjoy getting to meet the creative teams behind their productions and seeing the plays develop behind the scenes.

Bert and Lucie have been devoted theatergoers their entire lives. Bert attended numerous Broadway and off-Broadway productions throughout his New York University college years (he now counts more than a thousand playbills in his collection). He studied journalism at NYU, hoping to replace Brooks Atkinson as the New York Times theater critic. Lucie, who grew up in Berkeley, was 14 when she saw her first play, a touring production of Oklahoma! Encouraged by her parents, she developed a real love for the theater, and she has passed that appreciation on to her own children.

Bert is also no rookie as a producer. In 1964 he made his first investment, in Flora the Red Menace (Liza Minelli’s first show). Bert tells us:

I joined with a local producer who would take a block from a new show’s producers and break it up into small “retail pieces” of $500 and $1,000 and market them to smaller investors. I was licensed by the SEC and adopted this avocation as part of my financial planning business. In 1970 I produced Nobody Loves a Broken Drum, by Jason Miller. It flopped, but Jason’s next play, That Championship Season, produced by Joe Papp at The Public Theater, won the Pulitzer Prize! We could do a play then for about $35,000 off Broadway. I still get $10 a year from Cabaret, my most successful investment. Life in the “back room” was exciting. I didn’t make money, but my accountant advised me that I could afford it if I was having fun. Which I still do at A.C.T.!

A.C.T. extends our best wishes to Bert Steinberg as he celebrates his 90th birthday in October.

AT THE THEATER
The American Conservatory Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The auditorium opens 30 minutes before curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
A.C.T.–branded merchandise, as well as books, scripts, and Words on Plays, are on sale in the main lobby, at the box office, and online.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred's Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the auditorium.

Cell Phones!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Rest rooms are located in Fred's Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the theater. Please call 415.749.2228 in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

A.C.T. is pleased to announce that an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is now available on site.
