ABOUT A.C.T.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Managing Director Heather Kitchen, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.'s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past three decades, more than 300 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of seven million people; today, A.C.T.'s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 200,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. Last year, A.C.T.'s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Ju篆meyn Theaters Award.

Since Perloff's appointment in 1992, A.C.T. has enjoyed continued success with groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Guided by Perloff and Kitchen, A.C.T. has expanded its audience base and produced challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, now serving 1,400 students every year, was the first training program not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, and Winona Ryder are among the conservatory’s distinguished former students. With the 1995 appointment of Melissa Smith as conservatory director, A.C.T. renewed its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience. The A.C.T. Advanced Training Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large. ■

Sponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco, these lively one-hour presentations are conducted by each show’s director. Prologues are held before the Tuesday preview of every production, at 5:30 p.m., in the Geary Theater. Doors open at 5 p.m.

AUDIENCE EXCHANGES
These informal, anything-goes sessions are a great way to share your feelings and reactions with fellow theatergoers. Audience Exchanges take place in the Geary Theater for 30 minutes immediately after selected performances and are moderated by A.C.T. staff members.

A.C.T. PERSPECTIVES
This popular series of free public symposia is back in 1997-98 from 7 to 9 p.m. on selected Monday evenings in the Geary Theater. Each symposium features a panel of scholars, theater artists, and professionals exploring topics ranging from aspects of the season’s productions to the intersection of theater and the arts with American culture. Everyone is welcome—you need not have seen the play to attend.

WORDS ON PLAYS
Each entertaining and informative audience handbook contains advance program notes, a synopsis of the play, and additional background information about the playwright and the social and historical context of the work. A subscription for seven handbooks is available by mail to full-season subscribers for $42 ($21 for opening night subscribers); limited copies of handbooks for individual plays are also available for purchase at the Geary Theater Box Office, located at 405 Geary Street at Mason, and at the merchandise stand in the main lobby of the Geary Theater, for $8 each.

Couples Therapy

by Ben Yalom

In 1910, when The Guardsman was written, Freud’s theories of psychoanalysis—a term first coined by him in Vienna in 1895—had just begun to reshape the world in which Molnář explored the foibles of human relationships. We wondered how The Guardsman’s married lovers would fare on a contemporary therapist’s couch. A.C.T. Literary Intern Ben Yalom spoke with psychiatrist and author Irvin D. Yalom, M.D. and feminist literary scholar Marilyn Yalom, Ph.D. about the psychological implications of Nándor (The Actor) and Iłona (The Actress)’s dramatically complex relationship.

Ben Yalom (BY): The first thing that strikes me about the play is the fact that after just six months Nándor and Iłona believe the romance has gone out of their marriage. They both seem to accept that the initial thrill of love would inevitably wear off. Where does that notion come from, and why would it be so readily accepted?

Irvin Yalom (IY): The magicalized infatuation and idealization of a couple generally begins to dissipate after a year or two. They are each left with a more accurate image of the person to whom they are married and can begin to develop a more realistic relationship based on deeper affinities.

Marilyn Yalom (MY): Well, I would say that it takes longer for that to happen, more like the proverbial “seven-year itch.” So six months in my opinion is a very short time for the magic to go out of a relationship. But, whether it’s six months or six years, the notion that marriage is an institution that destroys romance and ends in boredom is certainly very common, not just in the theater, but in literature and probably in life, as well.

BY: A kind of love triangle soon develops in Nándor and Iłona’s relationship, although there are really only two sides to it, or three sides with two players. Nándor is so haunted by the inevitable arrival of Iłona’s next lover, the third person who will disrupt the marriage, that he takes the role on himself. I wonder what you think about that in terms of Freud’s notion that a relationship requires an external third point on which to displace romantic desire.

IY: I always like to ask how many people there are in a relation-
MY: But in this case we have two people who are duplicitous.

BY: That's right. There is no genuine ground between them. They might in fact be quite frightened by deeper levels of intimacy. They are certainly not truthful to each other about their own self-doubts, vulnerabilities, or fears. So they are isolated from each other and can only relate in a highly stylized fashion. And they are both actors, so they are very good at playing this game. He wants to know. How does she really feel about me? But he can't say that openly.

BY: It's rather sad.

MY: Yes, well, Molnar did say that this play was about his own tragedy. There is a sad undertone to it.

MY: It's that fin-de-siècle Weltenschmerz [world pain], a slightly ironic sorrow that's also common to the work of Molnar's contemporary, Arthur Schnitzler, particularly his La Ronde.

BY: Where does The Guardsman fit chronologically in Freud's world?

BY: In 1910 Central Europe was the crucible of psychoanalytic theory. Freud's Interpretation of Dreams had appeared in late 1899, his early ideas about infantile sexuality were being formalized, and the Freudian analytic meeting was beginning to meet in Vienna. There was a well-known Hungarian analyst, Sándor Ferenczi, in Budapest, and Molnar probably would have read some of Ferenczi and Freud's work. [Ferenczi became one of Freud's most enthusiastic disciples in 1907 and won several Hungarians to Freud's movement. Ferenczi expounded the theory of délibâb [magical thinking], a state of illusion in which the ego seeks to control reality.] But The Guardsman is not heavily psychological. To me, again, it is about people trying to find the truth but missing and missing.

BY: I'm interested in the potential eroticism of the role playing that occurs in this story. How does that fit into your comments on the institution of marriage and the psychological concept of the other?

MY: Well, the "other" in this case is a lover. And that lover is not a baker. He's a knight in shining armor, a guardsman. At the time this play was written, the soldier, the military figure in uniform, was still the erotic figure. As Ilona says, "That's a man." They are all taken with him. I can certainly see the attraction of the man who is outside bourgeois life and around whom one embroiders certain fantasies.

BY: So Ilona might continue to have an erotic relationship with her husband in years to follow, but she would have fantasies of sleeping with The Guardsman [laughing]. That is totally within the realm of possibility.

BY: Or she might have a romantic affair with her husband as The Guardsman.

A NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

by Albert Takazauckas

Several winters ago, I was imposing on a friend of a friend in London. As is often the case in these guest situations, I was invited to accompany my hostess on a visit to one of her friends.

"I'm off tomorrow to see D.," my hostess informed me. "She needs me to look over a house she and her friend are thinking of buying. They live in The Fens—you know, where Camelot was supposed to be."

The Elgin Marbles were my personal goal for the next day, so I declined. "Oh, come on," she insisted, "you'll adore D., and I'm sure you'll enjoy meeting her husband, Frank Marcus, the playwright."

The author of the extraordinary comedy The Killing of Sister George, which impressed me as a young man? Of course, I'll go. What had happened to him and his successful writing career since Sister George? I wondered.

The Fens were dank, swampy, and isolated, and the dense ice fog didn't help my impression of King Arthur's building location. The Marcuses lived in a snug, modest two-story house, haphazardly furnished from local jumble sales. My hostess explained the site was chosen for economic reasons; the Marcuses had children they were educating and concessions had to be made.

As arranged, we arrived in time for lunch. D. and her friend were waiting for us, but Marcus was not present. "He takes his own time," D. explained. "When he manages to get here we'll eat—just tin soup and toasted cheese, nothing special, but warming."

I inquired about Marcus, who my hostess had told me now suffered from a nerve disorder. "We keep on, making ends meet. Mind you, he can still be as sharp as ever, but he can't work anymore. The last thing he did was that Molnar translation [of The Guardsman for the Royal National Theatre in 1977]. Thank God, it was a success."

With theatrical instinct, Marcus slowly entered, helped by a much-needed walker. We were introduced; his speech was as halting as his steps, so he said little or uttered sounds of pleasure or displeasure. The women talked around him and above him in a routine way about the new property.

Lunch over, Marcus was placed in a spring chair. I sat near him on the sofa. "Now, why don't you two gents watch tellie 'til we return?" was D.'s suggested entertainment. Luckily, some Euro station was airing Pauline at the Beach by Eric Rohmer, a favorite film from a favorite director of mine. Marcus hadn't seen it, nor was he familiar with Rohmer's work.

FERENC MOLNAR: LIFE MEETS ART

by Jessica Werner and Elizabeth Brodersen

For a playwright whose theater emerged directly from the most intimate events of his own life, Ferenc Molnar was singularly reticent when asked to provide personal details. When finally pressed to write an autobiography, he responded with this thumbnail sketch:

1878, I was born in Budapest; 1896, I became a law student at Geneva; 1896, I became a journalist in Budapest; 1897, I wrote a short story; 1900, I wrote a novel; 1902, I became a playwright at home; 1908, I became a playwright abroad; 1914, I became a war correspondent; 1916, I became a playwright once more; 1918, my hair turned snow white; 1925, I should like to be a law student at Geneva once more.

The author of 42 plays (18 produced on Broadway, and 26 made into movies), Molnar honed his theatrical craft in the cafes of fin-de-siecle Budapest, where French, German, and Austrian writers were well known. The coffeehouses of the city that had celebrated its 1000th anniversary in 1896 overflowed with the creative energy of writers, painters, sculptors, and composers. Yet Hungarian playwriting was virtually unknown outside the country’s borders—until Molnar’s first international success, The Devil (1907), made Hungarian drama a hot commodity and Molnar’s plays its foremost export.

Like their American counterparts at New York’s Algonquin Hotel, “Molnar’s Gang” (a celebrated clique of writers, painters, and actors in Budapest) became self-appointed arbiters of Hungarian artistic excellence; an invitation to Molnar’s table was considered the highest acknowledgment of talent. Molnar became one of Broadway’s most produced playwrights from 1908 to 1930, spurring the “Hungarian Invasion” that brought 29 new Hungarian plays to Broadway between 1921 and 1933.

In a city in which gossip was the most valuable asset and marital fidelity a rare phenomenon (“among Budapestians,” wrote playwright S. N. Behrman, “entering your wife’s room without knocking was the highest possible tribute”), Molnar’s plays were avidly consumed. His wicked drawing-room comedies challenged bourgeois complacency, and watching one of his plays became a titillating exercise for Budapest society as it strove to discover which members of that night’s audience were expertly roasting on stage.

Molnar parodied his own romantic dramas more than anyone else’s, and the latest details of his complicated and much-publicized love life (he was married three times, twice to prominent actresses, continued on page 42
PINTER PLAYS IN JUNE

In conjunction with the mainstage production of Harold Pinter's Old Times, third-year students in the A.C.T. Advanced Training Program (ATP) will in June perform two one-act plays by Pinter, The Collection and a yet-to-be-determined companion piece, as the third public production in A.C.T.'s expanded M.F.A. program. A.C.T. Associate Artist Marco Barbielli (who appeared most recently as the Earl of Leicester in Mary Stuart and taught "Acting Shakespeare" to second-year ATP students in February) directs the cast of M.F.A. candidates.

Formerly a two-year certificate program (with the option of earning an M.F.A.), the ATP was expanded in 1996 to include a mandatory third year of study emphasizing rehearsal and public performance culminating in the award of the advanced degree. A.C.T. inaugurated the expanded program in 1996 with a production of Lynne Alvarez's Reincarnation of Jamie Brown, followed in October 1997 by Caryl Churchill's Mouthful of Birds. The ATP expansion has been made possible by a generous grant from The James Irvine Foundation.

The Pinter plays will be performed together at New Langton Arts, located at 1246 Folsom Street, June 4-7, 11-14, and 18-21. All performances are open to the public, and tickets are available for $10 ($8 for students, full-time teachers, and seniors with valid ID).

For tickets and more information, please call the A.C.T. Box Office at (415) 749-2ACT.

The workshops can be scheduled on site in the client's workplace or at A.C.T.'s studios in downtown San Francisco. For information on these and other Studio A.C.T. courses, call (415) 439-2486.

The Young Conservatory summer session begins June 15, 1998 (orientation takes place Saturday, June 13; Session I runs June 15–July 17, and Session II runs July 20–August 23), offering theater training for young people eight to eighteen years old, including classes in acting, directing, voice and speech, musical theater, renowned performance workshops (see next page), audition, and improvisation. As the Young Conservatory continues to experience record enrollment, the summer schedule has been expanded to offer new courses and performance projects. Recently added to the curriculum are classes in dialect, mask, clowning, Shakespeare, created projects, stage combat, and dance for the theater, as well as a studio production of a Shakespeare play. THE CRITICS AGREE ON A.C.T.
A.C.T. is proud to announce that the company received a total of 30 nominations for the Bay Area Theatre Critics' Circle Awards—more than any other local theater organization. High Society alone garnered ten nominations in the musical category; A Streetcar Named Desire (which also received ten nominations), Travels with My Aunt, and The Royal Family were the most popular productions in the drama division. Among the highlights were nominations for best... male principal performance given to Marco Barricelli (Streetcar) and Ken Ruta (Travels), and for best female principal performance to Michelle Elise Duffy and Sheila Kelley (Streetcar) and Michelle Morain (Machinal). The awards ceremony was held April 6 (after this program went to press) at San Francisco’s Palace of Fine Arts.

A.C.T. Hits Broadway

Two of this season’s most successful A.C.T. productions, High Society and Golden Child, recently traveled to New York, with back-to-back Broadway openings last month. The Golden Child cast and crew packed up immediately after closing at the Geary Theater to open at the Longacre Theatre April 2; High Society opened in New York April 23 at the St. James Theatre. We wish the artists of both shows all the best and are confident they will dazzle audiences in the East, just as they did during their sold-out runs at A.C.T.

A Golden Opening Night

A.C.T. celebrated the stellar opening night of Golden Child with cast, crew, and friends at the Geary Theater on February 18:

MY: He could have an erotic relationship with his wife because he identifies with the role of The Guardsman. Nandor may be excited about having an affair with this woman who is deceiving her husband.

BY: She certainly takes on a different look from that perspective.

MY: Well, you said earlier that there are always more than two people in a relationship.

Marcus's wife, her friend, and my hostess finally left, and I was free to tell him how much I admired Sister George. He nodded and pointed to his Evening Standard Award. He said he was sorry that Bette Davis hadn't made the movie. I agreed, she had been wonderful as the washed-up radio star. He asked about Rohmer and I talked too much of my adulation of his genius—how much he'd influenced my own work. Marcus let me go until the film began. Then, silently, we sat in the chilly cluttered room watching summer unfold on the French coast of the Atlantic.

When the film ended, the image of the garden gate closing like the grand drape in a play, Marcus looked over at me and smiled, his eyes twinkling. "Like Beaumarchais or Mozart, more like Mozart," I agreed, happy to have my own discernment confirmed by this gifted man. "The Candy Girl is like Despina—so delightful, so delightful!"

"Exactly," I said, "like the maid in Costes Tutte, yet Rohmer dresses his actors in contemporary fashion to play out the sexual rendezvous."

"It's only a disguise," he added, "Dress up the old story with a touch of powder or a bright pin on an old dress."

The women returned full of news about the house and its projected income. D. patted Marcus's hair and kissed his forehead. "Do you need anything, Frank? How was the movie? Well, good, I'll put the kettle on for tea—so cold today, the dampness goes through your bones."

But Marcus and I hadn't noticed. We were still warm from the French sun and the air was thick with summer. and had many affairs) were easy to follow through their renderings onstage: When his first wife, the writer and artist Margit Vész, left him in 1908, Molnar transmuted his guilt and grief into the celebrated Liliom (1909; transformed by Rodgers and Hammerstein into the musical Carousel in 1945), in which he immortalized his lost wife in the lead role. Molnar fell in love during rehearsals of Liliom with Irén Varsányi, the married stage star who played his wife. Their scandalous affair provided the plot for The Guardsman (1910) and The Wolf (1913)—and cost Molnar two weeks in jail after a duel with Varsányi’s jealous husband.

SUFFERING FOR ENTERTAINMENT’S SAKE

The Guardsman, which embodies the union of Molnar’s two most treasured themes—theater and marriage—was an instant success; there were 25 curtain calls at its Budapest premiere. Yet Molnar expressed mixed emotions at exhuming his own past suffering for entertainment’s sake. In his 1950 autobiography, Companion in Exile, he wrote of The Guardsman: “The audience everywhere in the world laughed at a perfectly agonizing play of mine in which a lovesick suffering actor in disguise seduces his own loose-living wife. Although, when writing it, in a hospital, I wanted to work off the most searing pain of my young life.”

Although its original Broadway run, under the title Where Ignorance Is Bliss, was less than stellar, a new adaptation bearing the play’s original title, The Guardsman, became a smash Broadway hit in 1924 with the legendary husband-and-wife actors Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne (who also starred in the 1931 film version) in the lead roles. The show ran for 248 performances and prompted George Bernard Shaw to predict that Molnar’s play would endure among the finest works of modern playwriting.

After spending the First World War as a newspaper correspondent, Molnar returned to Budapest and—with The Swan (1919)—to playwriting with a wicked vengeance. Molnar was most influenced in his early work by the French comedies of Scribe, Sardou, Caillavet, de Flers, and Marivaux (Molnar translated and adapted more than 30 of their plays into Hungarian). He also felt a special affinity for Shaw, from whom he learned the art of the well-timed riposte. Thematically, the eroticism of the Austrian playwright Arthur Schnitzler left the deepest impression on Molnar, who adopted Schnitzler’s motto, “Words lie,” as the guiding principle for his own dramatic explorations of the grey area between illusion and reality.

During the mid 1920s, as his popularity abroad and income soared, and his café entourage at home began to dwindle, Molnar left Budapest more and more frequently, eventually establishing what he called his “five-room apartment”: accommodations with staff in the finest hotels of Budapest, Vienna, Karlsbad, Venice, and Nice. Living a life of itinerant luxury, he stayed one step ahead of the scandals and legal problems wrought by his continuing romantic entanglements with actresses: in 1924, he divorced second wife Sári Fedák and the following year married Lili Darvas (with whom he had already been involved when he married Fedák), who inspired him to write The Play’s the Thing (1926, produced at A.C.T. in 1995).

The popularity of The Play’s the Thing and The Swan pitched Molnar into heady realms of success: in 1927, he was decorated with the French cross of the Legion of Honor, received by President Coolidge at the White House, besieged by theater directors and publishers, and appointed to the contributors’ staff of Vanity Fair. During the 1930s, however, Molnar sensed impending disaster, as his mood and international tensions worsened; he left Budapest for the last time in 1937. In 1940, he took up permanent residence in New York’s Plaza Hotel, reclaiming his role as patriarch of literate Hungarian society (albeit in exile), this time reigning from a table at the 58th Street Delicatessen, where he continued to hold court until his death in 1952.

ENDLESS SELF-EXPLORATION

Molnar’s repertoire of theater about theater—which, in addition to The Guardsman and The Play’s the Thing, includes a 1920 trio of one-act plays aptly titled Theater—contains some of his most entertaining work and displays his fascination with illusion, especially those illusions that become truth only when people believe in them.

In a 1946 New Yorker article, Behrman wrote:

Molnar’s theater is unique in our time, because it is an endless self-exploration.... His theme is himself and he has taken his society right along with him over the footlights and confided to it expansively in stage whispers.... Living in a zone in which reality and illusion overlap, he finally developed a category of plays in which he gave up all attempt to divide the two worlds and used as his theme their very indivisibility.

WHY ORGANIC GARDENING ISN’T JUST A BUNCH OF MANURE.

Organic gardening is a lot more than natural fertilizer. And organic gardens do a lot more than make your yard look pretty. They help make the environment healthier. So let’s dig in and see how you can help.

Organic Gardening: The First Step to Creating an Environmentally Friendly Garden is to Compost.

Composting not only helps produce the bacteria, nutrients, and mulch plants need, it also reduces the amount of solid waste your home creates.

TAKE STOCK IN A.C.T.
There are many creative ways to give to A.C.T. All are tax deductible, but recent increases in stock and mutual fund prices also offer A.C.T. donors a tremendous opportunity to:

Avoid capital gains taxes on the sale of appreciated stock;
Create an income-tax deduction equal to the fair-market value of the stock at the time of transfer; and Generate a more significant gift than if you were just writing a check.

Additional ways to contribute to A.C.T.'s success include:
Cash—one of the most familiar ways to give;
Property—most real estate and personal property qualify as tax-deductible charitable gifts; and Life insurance—the cash value of your current paid-up life insurance policy can benefit A.C.T.

PLANNED GIVING
Many people who could not otherwise contribute to A.C.T. as generously as they would like find they are able to do so with a carefully planned gift. You can make a valuable long-term contribution to great theater by:

Making a bequest to A.C.T.—please let us know if you have included A.C.T. in your will or estate plans; or

Creating a life-income charitable trust with A.C.T.—you can gain an immediate and substantial tax deduction, increased annual income paid to you for life, freedom from investment worries, and avoidance of capital gains taxes when you transfer appreciated property to a charitable remainder trust.
