A FINE MADNESS

by Jeffrey Hirsch

To be in Paris at the turn of the century was to live in the best of all possible worlds. La belle époque had arrived bringing with it a promise of prosperity and many new inventions to be enjoyed at one's leisure: electricity, the cinema, radio, photography, the motor car and the airplane. The painfully fought Franco-Prussian war was quietly fading from memory and it seemed that peace would remain forever fixed. The Universal Exposition of 1900 attracted the curious of every nation to Paris, nearly doubling the city's population and affirming its position as the cultural and intellectual center of the world.

On Paris' right bank, from his table amidst the Art Nouveau splendor of Maxim's, Georges Feydeau viewed the poets, princes and merry-makers of the demi-monde. "Through his cigar smoke he observed mankind," wrote a contemporary, "with a kind of attentive distraction. He was haunted by life and that is why he hardly ever smiled. He enjoyed being a living, charming, paradox. He was infinitely cordial but with a bit of detachment, extremely sensitive beneath apparent indifference, ambitious but modest, nonchalantly hard-working, at once good humored and sad."

Don't take things too seriously!

—Franz Kafka

Georges Feydeau was born in Paris on December 8, 1862 and is reported to have been a good mannered child. His only shortcoming seems to have been a lack of industry to which he admits in his description of how he came, at a tender age, to be a playwright: "How did I become a writer of comedies? Purely by laziness. I was a child of six or seven when I was first taken, one evening, to the theatre. I have forgotten what was being given, but I remember my enthusiasm. The fever had gripped me. I did not sleep all night, but the next day I set to work. My father found me, hair tousled, scribbling furiously in my notebook. When he asked me what I was doing, I replied that I was writing a play. Some hours later, my governess (a nice girl, but how boring!) arrived to collect me: 'Come along, Master Georges, time for lessons!' My father told her to leave me alone. 'He has worked quite hard enough this morning,' he said. 'He has written a play.' Instantly, I beheld the road to salvation. From that blessed day on, whenever I had not done my homework (which, believe me, happened often) I rushed to my notebook and my petrified governess left me in peace. She did not understand the wiliness of the dramatist."

Playwright, Georges Feydeau

Indolence remained a weakness and charm of Feydeau's throughout his life. One day while seated in a cafe he was pressed by a friend to "Look at that magnificent woman!" "Where is she?" asked the playwright. "Behind you," was the reply. "Oh, then describe her to me," said Feydeau languidly reaching for the glass of wine before him.

Young Georges' early efforts at playwriting were confined to short scenes and monologues. His first vaudeville, a form of light comedy popular in 19th century France and unrelated to the later American variety entertainment, was produced in 1883. Despite the popularity of Amour et Piano (Love and Piano), Feydeau might have thrown over his future as a playwright for the life of an actor had it not been for a well-fated coincidence. A director, having seen Feydeau perform in amateur theatricals, arranged a meeting for the purpose of contracting him as a player. On the appointed day Feydeau grew impatient of waiting for the tardy director and departed the meeting place, leaving behind all ambition to act. "That day," he later said, "I learned the advantages of not being punctual. I swore then to be late all the rest of my life. To this day, I have kept my word." continued

Le Chateau Salignac. Cognac, France.

Most cognacs are blended—or, as we French say, “married”—just before they are bottled. But at Salignac, we marry our young cognacs before they sleep... a long, maturing sleep in oaken casks. There, slowly, an intimate liaison develops. Flavors intermingle. Time and the wood perform their smoothing miracle. Only then is our cognac ready for the bottle. The difference? A mellowness of taste and bouquet, unique to Salignac. After all, since 1809 we have known: the longer the marriage, the finer the cognac.

Feydeau's first important success, in a career that was eventually to comprise a 39-play oeuvre, was Tailleur Pour Dames (A Gown for His Mistress; 1886). He was unable to repeat his initial triumph until six years and seven plays later, when Monsieur Chasse (The Happy Hunter) and Champignol Malgré Lui (Champignol in Spite of Himself) opened within weeks of one another for runs that exceeded one thousand performances.

The appearance of each new play thereafter added to Feydeau's reputation as France's leading farceur. Every year came another play, often with two or three being given in Paris simultaneously. Knowledge of the playwright's talent to amuse spread throughout the countryside, across the Continent and even to America through extensive provincial tours and foreign productions of such plays as L'Hôtel du Libreéchange (Hotel Paradiso; 1894), La Dame de Chez Maxim (The Lady from Maxim's; 1899), and La Puce à L'Oreille (A Flea in Her Ear; 1907). Francisque Sarcey, the leading theatre critic of the day, wrote in a review typical of those that announced the arrival of a new Feydeau play: "I shall not attempt to describe the audience. It was exhausted, dead from laughter—it could laugh no more. Toward the end of the play, the wild laughter which seized and shook the whole theatre was so thunderous that the actors could no longer be heard. The play had to be finished in pantomime."

Long after the laughter subsided, Georges Feydeau could be found dining at Maxim's or sipping wine at the Napolitain cafe just up the block from Café Weber where Marcel Proust took his midnightly repast. Passing by Feydeau's table an actor asked if the playwright had seen his performance that evening. "But of course I did my friend," came the reply, "and I hope you'll forgive me!"

Along with the frequent bon mots came an occasional poignant remark—"Life is short, but we get bored all the same"—revealing the grimace beneath Feydeau's mask of gaiety and sophistication. Unhappy in marriage, he divorced in 1916. "So many husbands and wives are separated by nothing but marriage," he wrote in one of the cycle of short plays bitterly depicting domestic life that he was woking on at the time. No degree of financial success seemed able to satisfy the debts he incurred in failed stock market speculation, and he was forced, finally, to sell his large collection of Impressionist paintings. "They tell me that I have earned millions," the playwright said near the end of his life. "I have never seen even fifty thousand francs."

Georges Feydeau's death in 1921 claimed one of the belle époque's central figures—the quintessential boulevardier and littérateur, who gave style to a period of unreigned optimism now far past. With wit and cunning Feydeau catalogued Paris society in its blush of fin de siècle ripeness. His plays show a world on the verge of madness where the mechanized pace is accelerating out of control like the conveyor belt in Chaplin's Modern Times. His portraits of the era's pleasure seekers were so accurate that the line between art and life eventually became blurred: in 1899 France's President Felix Faure died in flagrante delicto, a victim of the passion that inspires so many wayward heroes in Feydeau's comedies of hedonism, would-be adultery and deception.

Following a brief period in eclipse, Feydeau's oeuvre reemerged after World War II shining more brightly than ever, with France's famed Renaud-Barrault company's production of Occupe-Toi D'Amélie (Take Care of Amélie; 1908) in 1948 signaling the start of a large scale revival of the playwright's work. Beginning with Le Dindon (The Dupe; 1896) in 1951, fifteen of the plays entered the repertory of the Comédie-Française making the National Theatre the most popular in Paris and sanctioning Feydeau as a writer of modern classics, the greatest French comic dramatist since Molière.

The English speaking world has been slow to receive the good news of Feydeau's post-war popularity because only a few of the plays have been satisfactorily translated. Princess Margaret and the Queen Mother had a look at a French touring production of Le Dindon in 1959 and "rolled with laughter at what one critic called the sauciest show ever staged before British royalty." England's National Theatre has subsequently led the way in assimilating Feydeau into the English tradition of modern farce that begins with Charley's Aunt and The Magistrate and develops through The Importance of Being Earnest to the comedies of Ben Travers and Joe Orton. No less an Englishman than Noel Coward himself adapted Occupe-Toi D'Amélie as Look After Lulu, and the English playwright and adapter of television's Brideshead Revisited, John Mortimer, has translated La Puce à L'Oreille and Un Fil à la Patte (Cat Among the Pigeons; 1894) for National Theatre productions.

The title of Feydeau's masterpiece, Un Fil à la Patte, cannot be literally translated into English. The French trope refers to the manner in which the play's hero is tied to his mistress—like a dog with a rope attached to one of its paws.

The play was first presented in the United States as The Lady from Lobster Square in 1910. In 1966 the Comédie-Française presented its attendance-record-breaking revival during a New York engagement. The production featured Alain Feydeau, the playwright's grandson, in the role of Fontanet, and demonstrated the ease with which comedy can break through the language barrier. John Mortimer's translation received its American premiere in a 1971 staging by Nagle Jackson at the Milwaukee Repertory Theatre Company. The play has also been translated as Not By Bed Alone by Norman Shapiro.

Un Fil à la Patte provides a perfect door through which to enter the naughty world of Georges Feydeau. Its structure conforms to Feydeau's basic tenet of playwriting: "When two characters must not meet, I bring them together as soon as I can." The play's plot incorporates the classic comic device of quid pro quo or mistaken identity, through which the innocent clerk Bouzin becomes a victim of circumstances beyond his control, and the technique of repeating an incident to the point of absurdity, as with the ubiquitous issue of Le Figaro in Act I. What's more, Un Fil à la Patte features three chases and a man literally caught with his pants down not once, but twice.

Adding further to Un Fil à la Patte's exemplary quality are characters representative of types that appear throughout Feydeau's plays. There is Lucette, the cocotte of relaxed virtue; Bois D'Enghien, the deceitful hero who finds himself caught in a web of his own lies; and General Irrigua, the foreigner out at sea in a country that does not speak his language. Fraulein Fitzenspiegel is also a foreigner, but of shifting national allegiance: in the French text her name is Miss Betting and she is a proper Englishwoman. It is through the ingenuity of the translator that she becomes a German Fraulein, thereby sustaining the author's intended comic relationship between governess and pupil.

Long after the work of Sardou, Becque, Courteline and other belle époque dramatists has gone flat, Georges Feydeau's plays retain their effervescence. Like fine champagnes, Feydeau farces range in flavor from doux and sentimental to brut and sharp-edged. Un Fil à la Patte falls neatly into the middle ground and is a play of vintage quality, the supreme achievement of a man who professed to hate working. "No, I am not one of those who enjoy giving birth," he wrote. "While I am arranging all the madness that unleashes the spectators' glee, I am not amused by it. When the work is done, what a relief!" ★

ELECTRA REDUX

By Jeffrey Hirsch

“The drama must seek to make us recognize the things that, since Greek days, we have forgotten—the eternal identity of you and me with the vast and unmanageable forces which have played through every atom of life since the beginning.”

—Kenneth Macgowan,
THEATRE OF TOMORROW (1921)

Only a couple of generations ago prevailing critical opinion held Eugene O’Neill’s Mourning Becomes Electra to be the finest English language tragedy written to date in the 20th century.

To be sure, O’Neill’s play has glorious ancestry. The Greek legend of Electra is older than the hills, or at least as old as Mount Olympus, in whose shadow stood the cursed House of Atreus, progenitor of O’Neill’s House of Mannon. Electra’s story has been told by Sophocles, Euripides, Aeschylus and in modern times by Hugo von Hofmannstahl, Robinson Jeffers and Jean Giraudoux. O’Neill’s fascination with “the most interesting of all women in drama” resulted in a play based on the Orestia trilogy by Aeschylus, but set in America and informed by everything that has been learned about the life of the mind since antiquity. “Is it possible,” O’Neill asked in his diary of 1926 as he embarked on the project, “to get modern psychological approximation of Greek sense of fate into such a play, which an intelligent audience of today, possessed of no belief in gods or supernatural retribution, could accept and be moved by?”

The fascinating record of O’Neill’s attempt at reinventing the Electra myth in modern terms is contained in the notebook he kept while writing Mourning Becomes Electra. There can be found, in the playwright’s nearly indecipherable hand, an explication of many of the choices he made in writing his tripartite story of domestic crime and punishment. On the updating of Aeschylus’ Trojan War setting to Civil War times O’Neill wrote: “No matter in what period of American history the play is laid, there must remain a modern psychological drama—nothing to do with period except to use it as a mask—What war?—Revolution too far off and too clogged in people’s minds with romantic grammar-school-history associations. World War too near and recognizable . . . needs distance and perspective—period not too distant for audience to associate itself with, yet possessing sufficient mask of time and space so that audiences will unconsciously grasp at once, it is primarily drama of hidden forces—fate—behind lives of characters. Civil War is only possibility—fits into picture—Civil War as background for drama of murderous family love and hate.”

Mourning Becomes Electra’s “small New England town,” like the “large-small town in Connecticut” in which Ab, Wilderness, O’Neill’s only full-length comedy takes place, is a reconstitution of the playwright’s boyhood summer home in New London, Connecticut. “New England background best possible dramatically for Greek plot of crime and retribution, chain of fate—Puritan conviction of man born to sin and punishment. . .”

The decision to “use characteristic names with some similarity to Greek ones” resulted in the selection of Ezra Mannon for Agamemnon; Christine for Clytemnestra; Orin for Orestes and Adam for Aegisthus. After considering Eleanor, Ellen and Elsa as possible substitutions for Electra, the playwright opted to call his heroine Lavinia, after Laodicea, Electra’s Homeric equivalent. The play’s title was fashioned, O’Neill later explained, to “convey that mourning befits Electra; it becomes Electra to mourn; it is her fate; black is becoming to her and it is the color that becomes her destiny.”

O’Neill further extended his development of classical motifs with the introduction of a “chorus” of townspeople who appear at the beginning of each play in the trilogy “representing the town as a human background for the drama of the Mannons.” The family homestead, “a large building of the Greek temple style that was the vogue in the first half of the nineteenth century,” provides a visual neoclassical reference and serves, the playwright said, as “a grotesque perversion of everything Greek temple expressed of meaning of life.”

Enlarging on the “undramatic married banality” in which he felt the Orestia left Electra, O’Neill departed from the Aeschylean plot in the last play of his trilogy. Instead of sustaining the traditional moral and religious finale revolving around Orestes, The Haunted is given over to Electra/Lavinia, the last of the Mannons. “Electra adores father, devoted to brother (who resembles father), hates mother—” O’Neill noted in his schematic plan. “Orestes adores mother, devoted to sister (whose face resembles mother’s), so hates his father—Agamemnon, frustrated in love for Clytemnestra, hates and is jealous of his son Orestes.” Describing what he sought to achieve in The Haunted, O’Neill wrote: “I have tried to give my Yankee Electra an end tragically worthy of herself. The end to me is the most inevitable thing in the trilogy. She is broken and not broken. By her way of yielding to the Mannon fate she overcomes it.”

By far O’Neill’s greatest innovation in updating the Orestia is the substitution of psychological imperatives for the belief in the gods, divine intervention and retribution that informed his Aeschylean source. The characters in Mourning Becomes Electra are not victims of fate like their Greek counterparts, but of their own psyches. The ancient avenging Furies are transfigured, through O’Neill’s modernist sensibilities, into torturing consciences and debilitating feelings of guilt. The playwright reminded himself in his work diary to develop the passions of his characters “always remembering fate from within the family is modern psychological approximation of the Greek conception of fate from without, from the supernatural.” The Mannons are trapped by their pasts and haunted by internal demons, not terrible gods: “A hell of a problem, a modern tragic interpretation of classic fate without the benefit of gods—” the playwright admitted.

O’Neill’s brilliant solution to the problem of making the Orestia anew was to create his own myth, firmly but pessimistically placing control of his character’s destiny in their own mortal hands.

Notes on THE BROWNING VERSION

The Browning Version, Terence Rattigan's study of faded idealism and frustrated ambition, was written in 1946 when the playwright was at the zenith of his success. Set in an English boys' school like the one in James Hilton's Goodbye, Mr Chips, the play was drawn from its author's own Harrow School experience. Rattigan has said that as a school-boy his favorite play was the Agamemnon and that his desire to become a playwright owes a good deal to having read the play at the urging of his Greek master, Coke Norris.

Norris had spent a lifetime in his profession only to suffer, through his own shortcomings and life's misdealings, humiliation and defeat. Upon his retirement young Rattigan presented the pedagogue with a gift to which he responded with the incredulity of one who has never before been treated with decency. When it came time to write The Browning Version, Rattigan modeled Crocker-Harris on Norris, Taplow on himself and used the gift giving episode as the central incident of the play.

The character of Crocker-Harris was written for John Gielgud, who had long been a hero of Rattigan's. Following their 1935 collaboration on an adaptation of Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities, the playwright longed to have the actor appear in one of his plays. Eleven years later Gielgud turned down the leading role in The Winslow Boy but encouraged Rattigan to go ahead with plans to write a bill of one-acts in which he might appear. Gielgud's response to the completed The Browning Version wounded Rattigan to the heart. "They've seen me in so much first-rate stuff," the actor remarked, "do you think they will like me in second class stuff?" It was not until 1959 in a CBS television broadcast directed by John Frankenheimer that Gielgud at last played Andrew Crocker-Harris.

On September 8, 1948 The Browning Version opened in London's West End. Presented on a double bill with Rattigan's Harlequinade, a backstage farce, the evening was entitled Playbill. It was a runaway success and earned the playwright the Ellen Terry Award for best new play for the second year running. When the show opened in New York the following year it was less enthusiastically received, prompting Rattigan to write an article for the New York Times on the difficulties of transferring English plays to the American stage.

The 1951 film adaptation of The Browning Version, directed by Anthony Asquith and featuring Michael Redgrave, is a classic of the British cinema. Rattigan adapted his play for the screen, lengthening it and opening it out by adding new scenes, characters and locales. As is often the case with adaptations, the film is overly literal and explicit and loses the play's poignancy. This is particularly apparent in the film's final moments where a contrived denouement has been substituted for the play's inconclusive ending.

Terence Rattigan always regarded The Browning Version as his most accomplished work and held it as especially dear among his plays. One day while he was writing the play his valet entered his study to find tears running down his cheeks. Many years later Rattigan said, "If today I had to justify my choice of career before a heavenly jury, The Browning Version is the play I would want to represent me." ★ —J.H.

Notes on BLACK COMEDY

Black Comedy, Peter Shaffer's one-act farce, was commissioned by Britain's National Theatre for its 1965 summer season at Chichester. When it played there and in subsequent productions in London the next fall and New York two years later, the playbill carried this note from the author: "In one of the most celebrated scenes in the repertoire of the Chinese Classical Theatre, two swordsmen fight a duel in a completely darkened room. The scene is performed with the stage fully lit."

By wedding Chinese classical theatre to traditional European farce, Peter Shaffer created his own tour de force in Black Comedy. The happy result of the union is an ingenious play that allows the audience to know everything that is going on while keeping the actors in the dark.

Peter Levin Shaffer and his twin brother, Anthony, were born into an orthodox Jewish family in Liverpool, England on May 15, 1926. Peter and Anthony's formal education was interrupted at age 18 when they were conscripted for duty in the coal mines of Kent and Yorkshire. All of England's miners had been recruited into the army leaving the nation with only a three day supply of coal, so cabinet minister Ernest Bevan enacted a law under which the Empire's young men could be drafted into service to replace the coal miners. Of his days as a "Bevan Boy" Shaffer has said: "Any illusions I had held about the nobility of manual work vanished during the three years I spent in the mines. It's wicked work."

Following his unorthodox service, Shaffer attended Cambridge and was graduated in 1950. The next year he journeyed across the Atlantic to New York where he stayed for two years and wrote his first play, The Salt Land, a classically structured tragedy set in modern Israel, that was telecast by the BBC in 1955.

Black Comedy appeared in 1967 first coupled with Strindberg's Miss Julie and later with a Shaffer curtain raiser, The White Liars.

Shaffer's only unsuccessful work, The Battle of Shrivings, a neo-Shavian play of ideas, opened and closed in 1970, within weeks of his brother Anthony's hit Sleuth. Four years later Equus took Broadway by storm earning a Tony Award for Best Play and creating an appetite for Shaffer's work that was fed this past season by Amadeus, his latest play and second Tony Award winner.

Peter Shaffer believes a play should be so eloquently written "you ought to be able to quote six lines when you leave the theatre." Of his work he has said: "All art is autobiographical inasmuch as it refers to personal experience. The torment of adolescence is in my plays, as is the essential pessimism in the face of certain death. These tensions and obsessions are autobiographical. But of course they are dressed up as stories, myths. That is theatre." ★

KISSES AND LAUGHTER

An Interview with William Hamilton

William Hamilton is a very tall man. He is also a successful cartoonist whose work frequently appears in The New Yorker, and is syndicated in newspapers across the country.

In recent years Hamilton has increasingly turned his attention to writing. His first two plays, Save Grand Central and Plymouth Rock Isn't Pink, received their world premieres at the California Actors Theatre in 1978 and went on to be produced in New York and Chicago, respectively. His first novel, The Love Of Rich Women, was published by Houghton Mifflin in September.

"Kisses and laughter, life is a matter of not making dreary mistakes," Hamilton writes in his novel. Interviewed by phone at his New York apartment, he gave the impression of being generous and awfully smart; the kind of person who decidedly does not make dreary mistakes.

A.C.T.: The news may not have reached The New York Times, but your hometown of St. Helena in the Napa Valley was recently named the safest town in Northern California.

HAMILTON: When I was a kid there the man in the Post Office, Mr.—I won't mention his name—stole all the money for Father Feeney's Boys Home. He was our only criminal and we all knew him. The poor guy was thrown out of the postal service, but the town got together a little fund to keep him alive. We used to watch him walking the streets and think: That's crime!

A.C.T.: Your first New Yorker cartoon appeared in 1956. Ten years later in his book, Here At the New Yorker, Brendan Gill included you in a list of New Yorker artists he is most often asked about. He also says that the tradition at The New Yorker has been to call cartoonists artists. Have you a preference?

HAMILTON: What I do I will call art, but I certainly don't mind being a cartoonist. That's what I put on my passport. "Playwright" with G-H-T in it is the most heavy thing I've ever heard anyone called. And "writer" sounds like you're living off somebody else. "Cartoonist" sounds like a specific form of earning money without working. I've always liked it better than "artist" or "writer" or "humanoid" or whatever.

A.C.T.: With the opening of Happy Landings at A.C.T. in January, all three of your produced plays will have had their World Premieres in California. Is that a coincidence?

HAMILTON: Isn't that strange? It's pure coincidence and it is amazing. And my newest play, Isn't It Beautiful, may open next year in Los Angeles. There we are again. California, my dear old state.

A.C.T.: Your first play, Save Grand Central, was read at the Squaw Valley Writer's Conference. Is that where you met Ed Hastings who went on to direct the show at the California Actors Theatre?

HAMILTON: Yes. Ed, more than anyone else in the theatre, has taken me seriously and paid attention to me. He's been a huge help and enormously encouraging. He has been my mentor. I feel indebted to him and there is no one else in the theatre that I could say that about.

A.C.T.: Happy Landings was produced last year in the A.C.T.'s Plays-In-Progress series. Did you see that production?

HAMILTON: Yes, I did. I thought it was terrific and I thought I was in business with the play. I guess Bill Ball liked it when he saw it, too.

A.C.T.: In Happy Landings the character of Topping Treadwell says, "If you're not rich, you have to be an artist." Is that your philosophy?

HAMILTON: Yes. I'll tell you something about that play that I think is funny. I hated that damned Topping and tried to wipe him out every time he walked in. But he just takes the whole play away. And he did to me, too. When you write or draw stuff it's hard for people to believe — because you did it — that it's just as removed from you as it is anybody else. You do it, but you don't really have any control over it. It just happens. And Topping — I guess I knew I was in business because I just couldn't get rid of him. I hated him and every time I tried to insult him, he just stole the scene!

A.C.T.: Do you enjoy the process of play-making?

HAMILTON: I love it. It beats cartooning and writing novels because it is collaborative and you don't have to be alone. That's nice. Other people's talent surprises you; it's terribly exciting. I really don't think that anybody who has written plays will ever be quite as happy with anything else because everything else is so damned passive. You write it, you mail it out; they like it or they don't; they buy it or they don't, but you don't participate in people's apprehension of the work in the way you do with a play. It's just incredible. It's the best.

A.C.T.: Do you get tired of critics saying that your plays are like your cartoons sprung to life?

HAMILTON: I sure do. I don't think it's true. I don't think they have anything to do with each other.

A.C.T.: You do a good deal of traveling both inside and outside of the country. What is it about traveling that appeals to you?

HAMILTON: I was once seeing a woman to whom I was attached under some guise. I was absolutely destroyed when the affair ended and I said, "I'm going to Rome." These people I was with said, "You can't run away from things like that. You have to stay and face it." So I stayed and to this day I know that if I had gone to Rome I would have been better off. Running away from your problems and escaping are both not only possible, but very very good solutions. This business of facing things is ridiculous. It makes everybody miserable. —J.H.

FUNDRAISING DEADLINE: MARCH 15TH

“We are leaving no stone unturned,” says A.C.T. General Director William Ball. “Every effort is being made for everyone in the Bay Area to hear of our need for funds. The programming of our coming season will be determined by the degree of success we have in meeting our March 15th deadline.

“The Fundraising Team has raised $300,000 of the $800,000 needed from Bay Area individuals, corporations and foundations.”

An additional amount of $900,000 has already been received from donors outside of Northern California.

The Fundraising Team has pulled out all the stops in an effort to reach its $800,000 Bay Area goal by March 15th. The campaign year was changed to conclude in mid-March, rather than May 31, to avoid an annual springtime fundraising crisis.

On February 10th, 40 members of the Northern California Young President's Organization and their spouses spent the entire day at A.C.T., visiting Conservatory classes, attending a matinee performance of The Admirable Crichton, and touring the Geary Theatre backstage and workshops.

The Y.P.O. Day at A.C.T. concluded with an especially-staged “A.C.T. Wrap-up.” All 50 members of the resident acting company, including those still in costume from their Crichton performance, and the Company's full staff, gave the Bay Area leaders a rapid-fire summary of the Company: its history, productions, Conservatory, awards and financial status. The mini-performance concluded with a chorale of “Love Wrought These Wonders” from Taming of the Shrew. By the end of the day, most of the Young Presidents expressed an interest in helping A.C.T. and several have already joined the Fundraising Team.

A telephone blitz takes place on March 2, 3 and 4, with Team members calling all past individual, corporate and foundation contributors that have not been heard from to-date.

A.C.T. has created a new approach to fundraising by establishing the Fundraising Team, consisting of current Association Board Members, community leaders and A.C.T. top management. New fundraising volunteers are being recruited for the Team, headed by Mr. Ball. Anyone interested in joining the Team, or making a donation to the American Conservatory Theatre, should contact A.C.T.'s Development Office, 450 Geary Street, San Francisco, California 94102, (415) 771-3880. ★

For ten weeks these students receive an intensive introduction to professional theatre study in acting, voice and speech, yoga, dance, fencing, tap, ballet as well as non-verbal communications and special seminars and workshops.

The Summer Training Congress runs from June 14 through August 20, and is modeled on the comprehensive training that is offered to the Advanced Training Program students during the nine-month school year. In addition to the Conservatory faculty, distinguished guest instructors are invited to augment the summer staff.

Minimum age requirement is 17 and both high school graduates and those entering their senior year of high school are invited to apply. Auditions are required for all California residents and those students seeking tuition scholarship funds from the limited amount of financial aid available.

Tuition is $1,250. In addition to the Congress application form, students should submit a current theatrical resume, a full-face photograph, two letters of recommendation and an official college transcript, if applicable. HAPPY LANDINGS

by William Hamilton

A chic young divorcee seeking the good life in San Francisco learns a whole new bag of tricks from her charming con-man father. Set in a sleek Clay Street flat and a Tenderloin bar called the Pastime Lounge, the free-wheeling hilarious comedy spoofs some sacred cows of both generations. World Premiere.

MOURNING BECOMES ELECTRA

by Eugene O'Neill

A rare opportunity to experience O'Neill's magnificent trilogy of the House of Mannon. Set against a brooding New England background at the close of the Civil War, Homecoming, The Hunted and The Haunted probe the dark nightmare regions of the soul. A great American classic by the first great American playwright.

CAT AMONG THE PIGEONS

by Georges Feydeau

When lascivious Lucette lands her lover back on the eve of his engagement to another, it's a spicy mixture of mounting madness, delicious dementia and riotous rigma-role in the extravagant high style of Hotel Paradiso, as the characters cavort through Feydeau's most outrageously funny bedroom farce in the naughty Paris of the 1890's. A classic masterpiece of the French comic theatre tradition.

ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST

by Lillian Hellman

In her second play about the ruthless Hubbard clan, Hellman takes the characters of The Little Foxes back in time twenty years to 1880 when their parents are still alive, revealing the roots of their greed and fascinating nastiness in a compelling drama laced with sardonic laughter. A.C.T. encore presentation.

THE ADMIRABLE CRICHTON

by James M. Barrie

Both downstairs and upstairs, Crichton is a perfect servant, the impeccable butler to a pompous English peer. When a shipwreck deposits the peer and his pretty daughters on a desert island far from their Mayfair drawing room, the butler rises to his noblest stature as the natural master in a captivating and whimsical turnabout by the author of Peter Pan.

Ray Birk, The Browning Version

BLACK COMEDY

by Peter Shaffer

When the lights blow out at a social-climbing, British sculptor's cocktail party, they come up on stage, revealing mixed-up drinks, lovers, electricians and millionaires. Fast, brilliant and uproarious.

THE BROWNING VERSION

by Terence Rattigan

This one-act play about a schoolmaster's forced and ignominious departure from an institution he loves, uncovers the humiliation he has suffered at the hands of his peers, students, headmaster and wife.

AND REMEMBER . . . IT DOESN'T TAKE A GREAT GIFT TO MAKE A GREAT CONTRIBUTION!

WILLIAM BALL (General Director)

founded the American Conservatory Theatre in 1965. Beginning in the theatre as a designer, he soon turned to acting and appeared with regional companies and Shakespearean festivals across the country. Mr. Ball made his New York directorial debut with Chekhov's little-known Ivanov in an off-Broadway production that won the Obie and Vernon Rice Drama Desk Awards for 1958. The next few years found him directing at Houston's Alley Theatre, San Francisco's Actor's Workshop, Washington D.C.'s Arena Stage, San Diego's American Shakespeare Theatre, as well as staging several operas for the New York City Opera. His 1959 off-Broadway production of Under Milkwood won the Lola D'Annunzio and Outer Circle Critics' Awards. After directing at Canada's Stratford Festival, Mr. Ball returned to New York to write the libretto for an opera, Natalia Petrovna, with composer Lee Hoiby, based on A Month in the Country. In 1964, he directed Tartuffe and Homage to Shakespeare at Lincoln Center, then travelled to London to recreate his staging of Six Characters. "Lots of us United folks grew up in the Islands. We can tell you about all the special spots away from the 'big city.'"

There is another Hawaii waiting for you on the Islands beyond familiar Oahu: The islands of Kauai, Maui, Molokai, and The Big Island.

What is this "Other Hawaii"? It's a walk along Maui's forty-two miles of white sandy beaches. It's boating down the Wailua River on a sun-drenched Kauai afternoon. Or fishing for the "big one" off The Big Island's Kona Coast.

"The Other Hawaii" is a land of tropical rain forests, lush gardens of blossoming trees and flowers, verdant cloud-draped valleys and uninhabited beaches.

To ride horseback below the emerald NaPali Cliffs or roam the orchid fields and black sand beaches of The Big Island is to experience an unforgettable world that's worlds away from the bustle and glitter of Honolulu.

No one should miss this "Other Hawaii." And no one can show it to you like United. So this year, why not visit the far corners of our little corner of the world.

Our little corner of the world.

Fly the friendly skies of United.

OUR BACKYARD HAS SOME HOLES IN IT.

Nine of them to be exact.

A nine-hole par-three course right on our premises. And an eighteen-hole championship course a stone's throw away.

If you tire of golf, you can go on around to our front yard. And play a set or two at the John Wayne Tennis Club.

And you can always take a dip in our swimming hole. Or stroll among the trees and flowers of our sprawling, 26 acres by the bay.

When you can have all that, why putt around with any other Orange County hotel?

NATIONAL CORPORATE THEATRE FUND

The National Corporate Theatre Fund is a not-for-profit agency which brings together the American resident theatre and the business sector: a united effort dedicated to developing financial support on a national basis for seven of the country's most established and long-standing professional companies. The Fund receives support from over 75 corporations and foundations and distributes the gifts among the member theatres. The American Conservatory Theatre, as a constituent of the Fund, gratefully acknowledges the support of the corporations and foundations which have contributed to the National Corporate Theatre Fund.

The American Conservatory Theatre extends a warm thank you to the very special friends who have helped to make An Elegant Celebration of Christmas and other Special Events possible:

IN MEMORIAM LEE STRASBERG

Lee Strasberg, father of "Method acting" in America, artistic director of the Actors Studio, stage director, film actor, and a major figure in world theatre, died of a heart attack in February. He was 80.

As a master teacher, Strasberg guided several generations of actors including Marlon Brando, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe, Al Pacino and Robert De Niro. He revolutionized acting and had a profound influence on American theatre and movies.

His presence and vision will be missed but his philosophy will remain forever.
