

THE LUXURY EXPRESS.

The 1984 Nissan Maxima is true luxury in motion. No longer do you have to make the choice between luxury and performance, because Nissan technology now brings you both. In one magnificent automobile.

When you slip into a Maxima, the luxury is obvious. Choose optional, sumptuous leather or rich velour, a power driven sunroof, a digital dash with graphic read-outs. Enjoy conveniences like the vocal warning system, power windows, door locks and antenna.

Listen to the eight speaker stereo that includes a cassette deck with Dolby. Available in either sedan or wagon models.

And when you drive it, the performance is striking. A fuel-injected six cylinder engine whisks you away on fully independent suspension. Everything about the new Maxima tells you. This is more than a luxury car. This is Major Motion.

A FAIRY TALE WRIT FOR A QUEEN

by Jeffrey Hirsch

“On 1 January 1953,” writes Terence Rattigan in a reminiscence of that once upon a time, “I woke up with the customary blinding hangover, and later in the day, to the equally blinding thought that this was Coronation Year and I ought to do something about it.” So begins—wryly and a bit reticently—the story of The Sleeping Prince, Rattigan’s Ruritanian fairy tale. With just six months to go before the crown would be set upon the head of England’s second Queen Elizabeth, one of the Empire’s most popular playwrights had no contribution to make to the festivities surrounding his monarch’s ascension to the throne. Not very sporting of me, Rattigan must have thought, but this bloody headache!

Rapidly overcoming his indisposition, Rattigan got down to work. He seized upon a suggestion made by his mother and decided to write a play set at the 1911 Coronation of King George V and Queen Mary. Rattigan’s birth in the month of George’s Coronation had prevented mama from attending the ceremony. Ever the dutiful son, he now sought, some forty years later, to make up for having caused his mother’s absence by writing and dedicating to her a play that would recall the bygone celebration.

King George’s Coronation was indeed an auspicious event, providing European royalty and high society the world round with an opportunity for a last waltz before the outbreak of World War I silenced the music for four tragic years. In Edwardian England there was not yet an income tax to cramp the style of the upper-class and such novel inventions as the automobile, telephone and electric light held out promise for lives of even greater elegance and ease than had been enjoyed under Queen Victoria’s reign. Recently affected military alliances seemed to unify European nations, offering the prospect of lasting international peace. As it happened, of course, such treaties as the Triple Alliance between Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy and the Entente Cordiale that allied Great Britain with France and later Russia actually contributed to the causes of World War I by effectively dividing Europe into two armed camps. But in 1911, before the Balkan Wars fanned the flames of nationalism and strained the alliances between smaller nations and the major powers, the monarchs of such Eastern European countries as Serbia, Bosnia and the much less consequential (and entirely mythical) Carpathia were free to join the royalty of other nations in celebrating the British Empire’s glory and great good fortune.

Tom O’Brien (l) portrays The King and William Paterson appears as Peter Northbrook in Rattigan’s delightful comedy The Sleeping Prince.

A quarter of a million visitors came to London from as far away as America and Japan for George’s Coronation and the Festival of Empire that accompanied it. The city was lit up as never before by gaslights and hundreds of bonfires as distinguished guests made their way from one effervescent function to the next. It was the grandest social season anyone could recall, with brilliant entertainments, fancy dress balls, garden parties, gala performances and elaborate fetes of every kind filling the hectic summer days and nights. Among the festivities was a Shakespeare ball held in Albert Hall at which four thousand splendidly clad Shakespearean characters cavorted to the strains of period gavottes and galliards. At a smaller, more private party—2,500 guests at the most—the Australian coloratura Nellie Melba sang, accompanied by the celebrated Polish pianist and composer, Ignace Jan Paderewski.

The highlight of the fortnight-long celebration, the Coronation ceremony itself notwithstanding, was a command performance arranged by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree and given at His Majesty’s Theatre on the second night after George took the throne. Over one thousand of England’s finest actors delighted the King and Queen and their guests with selected scenes from Shakespeare and others. A petit scandale arose when all of the royal party departed the theatre without giving any thanks or congratulations to the actors who had entertained them so earnestly. Certainly King Edward would have invited the players to the royal box after the performance: he understood the artistic temperament. Perhaps, it was suggested at the time, fault lay in the programming. King George and his guests might have responded more generously to a rousing melodrama than excerpts from Sheridan’s The Critic. But where in plays like Fifteen Years of A Drunkard’s Life or Lady Audley’s Secret would there have been found parts for a thousand actors?

One of the minor participants in the Coronation and its attendant celebration was Frank Rattigan, father of the newly born Terence. A career diplomat who at the peak of his success was Britain’s Acting High Commissioner in Turkey, Frank was colorfully decorated by his government and given the title Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. It was naturally Frank’s hope that his son should one day follow him in the foreign service. To this end, Terence was educated at Harrow and Oxford. Summer vacations in France and Germany provided the boy opportunities to improve his languages and were intended to further prepare him for the privileged life of a diplomat. But while still at Harrow, young Terence came under the spell of Chekhov, Galsworthy and Shaw, and at the age of ten he wrote his first play, a one-act about Cesare Borgia.

By the time he reached Oxford, Rattigan was determined to become a man of the theatre. “I’d have been a terrible ambassador,” he admitted many years later, “I can’t resist careless talk and I would have been an utter disgrace to my father, who’d had an immensely distinguished time there.” Through his early years as an aspiring playwright, though, and even after he had firmly established himself with such plays as French Without Tears (1936): Flare Path (1942); The Winslow Boy (1946); The Browning Version (1948) and The Deep Blue Sea (1952), Rattigan never forgot the stories his father had told of the glamor and glory of the 1911 Coronation.

The senior Rattigan's enchanting tales combined neatly with anecdotes Terence found in several memoirs of the period as he began writing The Sleeping Prince. In researching the play, the writer also came across a number of pamphlets marked "Strictly Confidential" that had been issued to foreign royalty and other officials in 1911. These little books contained certain useful telephone numbers and private addresses at which a visitor with epicurean tastes might find and discreetly indulge in the hidden pleasures of London.

Rattigan knew from the start that The Sleeping Prince would be a light comedy—the sort with which he had made his early reputation and was supposed to have outgrown. It was his intention to concoct a buoyant soufflé, an "occasional fairy tale" as he subtitled the play, that would add brilliant sparkle to Queen Elizabeth's Coronation celebration. "I meant it as a little nonsense for a great occasion," he said, expecting that the play would be cast with unknown actors and be given a modest production for a limited run.

The play is fashioned as a simple variation on a familiar theme. Rattigan explains that his idea was based on "the comedic formula of standing a well-worn dramatic (in this case, romantic) cliché on its head." The Cinderella story, undoubtedly the best-known fairy tale in the world, provided Rattigan with his basic plot line. As old as it is well-loved, the story dates back at least as far as the 9th century, where it turns up in Chinese literature. The form of the story most familiar to us today derives from Charles Perrault's masterful retelling in his Histoires ou Contes du Temps Passé (Histories, or Tales of Passed Times), published in 1667. It is Rattigan's invention to place a willful American chorus girl at the center of the action and to make her Prince Charming something of a regal nerd. Although Mary Morgan, the chorus girl, is certainly taken in hand and handsomely adorned by her fairy godmother (here the Grand Duchess, quite unconcerned by her husband's philandering) before being sent off to the Coronation ball, it is the Prince Regent who undergoes the usual transformation of the story, his emotions awakened for the first time "from the long gray sleep of Prudence to the magnificent scarlet dawn of Folly." In place of the expected happy ending, Rattigan substitutes a strikingly modern denouement in which Mary gently but pragmatically suggests that even the most lovely of romances must come to an end and asserts that her career as a chorine is, at least for the moment, more important to her than the love of a prince.

Work on The Sleeping Prince went along quickly even for Rattigan, an expert craftsman who typically required no more than eight weeks to complete a play, including final polishing. By mid-February 1953 he was almost halfway through his hastily begun new work. Late one night as he was relaxing in the study of his Sunningdale country house, the telephone rang. Answering the call, Rattigan was surprised to hear on the other end of the line, the voice of Laurence Olivier. Rattigan was acquainted with the great actor but not so well as to expect calls from him after midnight. "After only the minimal exchange of 'darling old boys' and 'lovelys,'" the playwright recalls, Olivier stated his purpose for phoning. He had heard that Rattigan was working on a play for the Coronation and wondered if it might contain parts for him and his wife, Vivien Leigh. Rattigan briefly held out in his belief that the play he was writing was too fragile a vehicle to carry the considerable weight of two such renowned acting talents, but before ringing off, consented to let Olivier see the script.

Olivier and Leigh had last appeared in the theatre together two years earlier when they played opposite one another in both Shakespeare's Anthony and Cleopatra and Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra. Now they had in mind to return to the stage in Rattigan's trifling comedy. The writer was understandably reluctant to consent, wondering "How Larry could persuade an audience that he was 'Prince Uncharming' when he had made even Richard III into one of the most sexually attractive characters ever to disgrace a stage." Moreover, Rattigan asked himself, "How on earth could darling Vivien, one of nature's grand-duchesses if ever I saw one, walk on to a stage as a chorus girl thrilled-to-her-Brooklynese-death at the prospect of meeting a real grand duke in the flesh?"

Olivier wanted The Sleeping Prince and Rattigan discovered that if there were playwrights alive who could turn down

Sir Larry's request to appear in one of their plays, he was surely not among those temeritous fellows. Plans went ahead for an all-star, lavishly-mounted West End production while Rattigan completed the play and the world press trumpeted the news of a Rattigan-Olivier-Leigh collaboration in honor of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth.

Rattigan's pièce d'occasion did not even go into production until several months after the occasion it was intended to commemorate, Queen Elizabeth's June coronation. In April, Vivien Leigh suffered a relapse of the mental illness that plagued her throughout her life, and the start of rehearsals was pushed back to September while she recovered from a nervous collapse. When, at last, work on the play began, it looked like there would be clear sailing ahead. Rattigan attended rehearsals more often than he usually cared to, just for the pleasure of watching Olivier go through his paces. The actor often had his wife and Rattigan in tears, both of them laughing helplessly at some tiny detail of character he was trying out. "Is it as funny as all that?" Olivier would ask anxiously. "Oh, yes, it's marvelous," Rattigan would respond, attempting to regain control of himself. "No, I think it's too much," Olivier would say after a moment's thought and then frequently, to Rattigan's amazement, he would discard forever a bit of comic business because he judged it too funny.

After a sold out five week tryout on the road, The Sleeping Prince opened at London's Phoenix Theatre on November 5, 1953, the date of Vivien Leigh's fortieth birthday. The critics received the play coolly as Rattigan had predicted they would, but English audiences were thrilled to see their darlings, the Oliviers, back on stage together and affectionately welcomed Vivien Leigh after her illness. The play became a great hit with audiences eager to see its stars, and could easily have continued beyond its eight month run had not Leigh's fragile nerves once again begun to falter and Olivier been previously committed to begin filming Richard III.

For Rattigan, Olivier's performance as the Prince Regent was a revelation, but Leigh's as Mary Morgan was a disappointment he blamed on miscasting. The playwright's fear that his "flimsy little confection" would be torn asunder by the vastness of Olivier's talent was laid to rest at a dress rehearsal before the play's Manchester opening. Rattigan went into Olivier's dressing room just before curtain time and found before him "a rather dull-looking man, with an anemic complexion, a thin, prissy, humorless mouth, hair parted in the middle and plastered repulsively downwards over his ears, and a sad-looking monocle glued over his right eye." Only when he saw that the man was wearing an Edwardian dress uniform adorned by a costume jewelry Order did Rattigan recognize Olivier as his own "true, living, breathing, Sleeping Prince."

Like several other of Rattigan's twenty-four stage plays, The Sleeping Prince made an unsuccessful Atlantic crossing and was short-lived in its New York production. Noël Coward, who later, in 1963, wrote lyrics for The Girl Who Came to Supper, a musical version of The Sleeping Prince, was among the Broadway first-nighters in 1956. He reported to his diary that the play was monumentally miscast with Michael Redgrave as the Regent and Barbara Bel Geddes as Mary Morgan, and that the opening went disastrously. After only fifty-two performances, the show closed.

A film version of the play was made in 1956. Retitled The Prince and the Showgirl, the movie starred Laurence Olivier opposite Marilyn Monroe in what Josh Logan predicted would be "the most exciting combination since black and white." Filming took four hard months and left Olivier, also the picture's director, unhappy with its quality. The film's world premiere nonetheless had all the magic of a fairy tale about it. Huge crowds gathered outside the London movie theatre on opening night and cheered as Rattigan, escorted by his mother, entered the theatre along with Olivier and Vivien Leigh, followed by Marilyn Monroe and her husband, Arthur Miller.

The most recent incarnation of The Sleeping Prince was seen just this past season in a revival at the Chichester Festival Theatre in England. The play, with Omar Sharif in the leading role, was received much more sympathetically this time around than when it first appeared, reviewers joining audiences in accepting the play as the bon-bon Rattigan always intended it to be. There is no good reason, the critics now allow, why adult theatre-goers ought not to take the same delight in the drawing room romance of The Sleeping Prince as children find in Cinderella, a rather less urbane fairy tale.

MAKING MUSIC OUT OF THE AMERICAN VOICE

An Interview with Lanford Wilson

Twenty years ago, Lanford Wilson's play, Home Free, was performed at the legendary Caffe Cino in New York's Greenwich Village. Five years later, in 1969, Wilson founded the off-Broadway Circle Repertory Company with Marshall Mason and began a collaboration that is now one of the longest and most successful between a playwright and director in the history of the American theatre.

Wilson's most recent play, Angels Fall, was written on a commission from the New World Festival in Miami and given its world premiere there on June 19, 1982.

In the following conversation, Lanford Wilson displays his delightful form and speaks enthusiastically about Angels Fall and his other plays.

A.C.T.: How did the idea for the play come to you?

L.W.: When I came back from Los Angeles where I worked on a production of A Tale Told, I had very little time to write the play before it was due to the New World Festival in Miami. I didn't really have an idea for it, or at least I didn't know I had one. One night I was checking out the local bars in the neighborhood around my New York apartment and I went into one that was practically deserted. Over the bar were tacked two postcards. They were from an area in New Mexico where I've been quite a bit, the low mountain ranges up in the north. Perhaps the bartender had gone home to New Mexico and sent the cards back. Seeing the postcards I imagined the missions that I used to go into the desert to paint when I was an art student at San Diego State College.

For many years, I had been studying about New Mexico and the Indians who live there and the nuclear production that goes on there, but not until that moment did the ideas come together in my mind. The professor and his wife came into one of those missions in my head, and the priest was there and he was unlike any of the stage priests that we see now who drink and smoke and swear and don't believe in God. He was not one of those. And there was an art dealer there and her boyfriend and her husband was an artist who had just died. Everyone was there in my mind instantly the moment I saw that postcard image of a barren New Mexico mountainside. I didn't know what had happened to me so I paid no attention to it until the next day. Then it all came crashing back. But it was mostly the characters, you see. I had the art dealer and her tennis player five years ago. For six years, I've been going to write that professor and his wife who writes children's stories but has no children, since I had taught and met professors like that. The priest I was going to write ever since the time I saw the tenth nonbelieving priest in the theatre and said, "That doesn't conform to the priests I know." The Indian I've been going to write ever since I got sick of all those sweet-hearted, soft Indians that have been in American literature since the 60s. I wanted to write an Indian that was as belligerent and militant as the ones I had met.

All of those people had been occupying space in my mind for many years. But then they all came together in the one metaphor: We are living under crisis and we don't know what to do about it. I wrote the play for Miami in five months, having never before written a play in less than a year and a half.

A.C.T.: How did you come to take the play's title from a Gerard Manley Hopkins poem?

L.W.: I live out in Sag Harbor which is a tiny little town. Since we've been talking I've walked out onto my deck five times—it's night here, of course—and looked across at the house of a friend that is oh, forty feet away but on another block. I can see the garage at the back of the house that used to be the studio of my artist friend Lou Fink. About three years ago he died out here on the highway. He was sixty-five years old and a wonderful artist. And he was very important to me. We wound up our work days at about the same time and I would go over and say, "How are things going with you because I'm not getting anything done." And he would say, "I'm doing great." Or he would come over to my house and say "I'm doing badly today, tell me something good. Tell me that you've had a breakthrough." He was an older man and a little taciturn but he was a kind of mentor. I saw him every single day. Either I would take a bottle of wine over to him or he brought one over to me and we would sit and wait for his wife to come home from work and join us.

He was so much a part of my life that when he died it was an enormous loss. It was so profound that I didn't know if I could live in this town anymore. And I hadn't known that at all. I hadn't known that we were that close and that he was that important to me. Angels Fall is dedicated to Lou. The loss of him permeates the entire play. The speech that the priest has about Ernest Branch, the dead artist—"I don't go out to that arbor anymore. He'd drink wine and I'd drink tea, and we both got drunk"—it was like that. He was very important to me.

Hopkins was Lou's favorite poet. When I started writing the play I didn't know what the name of it was but I knew it had to come from a Hopkins poem. The poem says, "Angels fall, they are towers from heaven." But people have nowhere to fall from. I was writing simultaneously about people who have nowhere to fall from and giants. These people are all giants who fall enormously and fail, but at the same time they are just people who have nowhere to fall from. I'm thinking particularly about Don Tabaha who goes off, as far as I'm concerned, to make a name for himself instead of staying and helping his people. He's destined to do that from the beginning because angels fall but it's profoundly sad to see it happen.

A.C.T.: What appeals to you about New Mexico?

L.W.: The light, the space, the people. Once you go there you are back every couple or three years because it draws you. The people—Indians, Spanish and Anglos, they call them—really make the place, yet you can't touch it. It belongs to the Indian gods. Of course the Indian is getting ripped-off like crazy, but many of the places where there are huge uranium deposits can't be mined because they are holy grounds of the Indians and they just won't let anyone go there. Those places are very mysterious. No one has ever been to them but the Indians.

A.C.T.: How important is the anti-nuclear statement of the play?

L.W.: I think it is where we are living today. It's not anti-nuclear, it just says that we are living under the threat of imminent danger. "Will it happen now?" the characters in the play ask. "No, it didn't. What do you know? Can we do anything about it? No. Are we doing anything about it? No, we are saying, 'Oh my God, that was close.' When can we leave this church and go on about our lives? Maybe never, maybe in fifteen minutes. Do we care? Well, what can we do? It is not the action of the play. It is a metaphor saying this is where we are living. Please recognize that you are living completely under a threat of imminent immolation. I'm not just talking about somebody pushing a button, about war. I'm saying that the danger is everywhere.

WHO'S WHO AT A.C.T.

WILLIAM BALL (General Director)

founded the American Conservatory Theatre in 1965. Beginning in the theatre as a designer, he soon turned to acting and appeared with regional companies and Shakespearean festivals across the country. Mr. Ball made his New York directorial debut with Chekhov's little-known Ivanov in an off-Broadway production that won the Obie and Vernon Rice Drama Desk Awards for 1958. The next few years found him directing at Houston's Alley Theatre, San Francisco's Actor's Workshop, Washington, D.C.'s Arena Stage, San Diego's American Shakespeare Theatre, as well as staging several operas for the New York City Opera. His 1959 off-Broadway production of Under Milkwood won the Lola D'Annunzio and Outer Circle Critics' Awards. In 1962, his production of Six Characters in Search of an Author proved another multiple award-winner and enjoyed an extended run in New York. After directing at Canada's Stratford Festival, Mr. Ball returned to New York to write the libretto for an opera, Natalia Petrovna, with composer Lee Hoiby, based on A Month in the Country. In 1964, he directed Tartuffe and Homage to Shakespeare at Lincoln Center, then travelled to London to recreate his staging of Six Characters. A graduate of Carnegie Mellon University, he has been the recipient of a Fulbright Scholarship, a Ford Foundation directorial grant and an NBC-RCA Director's Fellowship. Among the first plays he directed for A.C.T. were Tartuffe, Six Characters in Search of an Author, Under Milkwood, Tiny Alice and King Lear. They were followed by Twelfth Night, The American Dream, Hamlet, Oedipus Rex, The Three Sisters, The Tempest, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, Caesar and Cleopatra, The Contractor, Cyrano de Bergerac, The Crucible, The Taming of the Shrew, The Cherry Orchard, King Richard III, Jumpers, Equus, The Bourgeois Gentleman and The Winter's Tale. Mr. Ball has directed three of his productions for PBS television, including The Taming of the Shrew, for which he received a "best director" nomination by the Television Critics' Circle. He also works as a teacher in A.C.T.'s Conservatory programs. He accepted an Antoinette Perry (Tony) Award for the company from the American Theatre Wing in June of 1979. In May of 1979, Carnegie Mellon University presented him with an honorary doctorate degree.

ALLEN FLETCHER (Conservatory Director, C.A.A.)

spent four years at the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Connecticut, two of these as Resident Director and Director of the training program and two as Artistic Director.

He is former Artistic Director of the Seattle Repertory Theatre. BENJAMIN MOORE (Managing Director) has played an integral role in A.C.T.'s development since his arrival thirteen years ago. With a B.A. in English and Drama from Dartmouth and an M.F.A. in Theatre Administration from the Yale School of Drama, he served as General Manager of the Westport Country Playhouse before joining A.C.T. as Production Manager in the fall of 1970. In that capacity, he supervised all departments involved in the physical presentation of A.C.T. plays, producing over 70 productions in nine years. These include The Merchant of Venice; The Contractor; A Doll's House; The Matchmaker; Pillars of the Community; Peer Gynt; Desire Under the Elms; 5th of July; Ah, Wilderness!; All the Way Home; Knock, Knock; Cyrano de Bergerac; The Taming of the Shrew; Street Scene and The Master Builder. In addition, Mr. Moore coordinated the televised adaptations of Cyrano de Bergerac and A Christmas Carol for PBS television. He was largely responsible for developing the system of scheduling A.C.T.'s complex repertory system and has taught theatre administration through our Evening Extension Program. In 1979, he became General Manager for the company, overseeing all operations on a daily basis with special attention to budget and financial management. He has been fundamental in developing the company's touring programs to the western states, Hawaii, Japan, the U.S.S.R. and, currently, mainland China. He became Managing Director last fall.

There are only 10 people in the world who know how to make the Rolls-Royce grille.

You don't know Dennis Jones. Pity. Because Dennis is one of the few men still walking on this earth who can, with good conscience, call themselves master craftsmen of the old school.

Dennis Jones is a man who uses his extraordinary skill to magically sculpt by hand a fair amount of cold steel into the sparkling silver grille of the finest motor car in the world.

The Rolls-Royce.

Dennis will slowly and carefully work on a Rolls-Royce grille for days. And in the end, in an unobtrusive corner inside the grille, where it may never be seen by another human being, he will put his initials. A sign of pride in his work.

A celebration of a job well-done.

Dennis Jones typifies the small band of rare craftsmen who practically hand build the Rolls-Royce.

This is why we can say without hesitation: While ordinary cars may come in and out of vogue, the Rolls-Royce lives forever.

It lives forever because there are craftsmen with the skills and dedication of a Dennis Jones working on every inch of every Rolls-Royce. Craftsmen who lovingly assemble the Rolls-Royce engine by hand.

The Rolls-Royce you acquire today combines the skill of these master craftsmen along with the most recent technological advances of this day.

In the end, the work of all these craftsmen will produce a motor car that Charles Stewart Rolls or Frederick Henry Royce would be proud to have bear their names.

A motor car to be driven into the next century by someone of great accomplishment who believes, "I give the world my best, I desire its best in return. I drive the Rolls-Royce."

Rolls-Royce. Simply the best motor car in the world.

Good news!

David's is pleased to inaugurate a new service that is bound to please you. Complimentary valet parking.

During the day have our bonded parking valet take care of your car while you enjoy lunch at David's and then do your shopping or take in a theatre or movie matinee. When you are ready to go home pick up your car where you left it—in front of David's.

At night our bonded parking valet will take care of your car while you dine at David's before attending one of the City's many theatrical events. Or you may wish to go first to the theatre and then have a late supper at David's. Either way your car will be ready when you are.

Merely entrust your car to our parking valet, enjoy yourself and when leaving David's have our valet parking ticket validated by the cashier. So daytime or an evening in town can be doubly enjoyable. Dining at David's plus complimentary valet parking is good news. You have to agree.
