EVOLUTION OF "THE PASSION CYCLE"

Imagine a large and wealthy city that has emerged as the commercial center of a particular region. The residents of the city have an inferiority complex, however. Now this particular city would like a culture as vigorous as its economy.

"The Mystery Cycle" at A.C.T.: R. Aaron Brown and Deborah May.

At the peak of their vitality, the city fathers decide they want an annual pageant like the one staged by their prosperous neighbors. They decide, following the lead of the neighboring town, to perform the pageant during their Easter Festival. Music, a procession and a bold new interpretation of the classic dramatic works of the day are all planned.

Call the festival Corpus Christi, the neighboring town York and the city Wakefield and you have a viable explanation of how the Wakefield Cycle of Mystery Plays came about.

The Wakefield Cycle of Mystery Plays is comprised of thirty-two vignettes that each take approximately twenty minutes to perform. Like all religious drama of the era, the Wakefield cycle follows a familiar four-part pattern and tells the story of man's creation, fall, redemption and judgement.

Medieval scholar Martial Rose, in his introduction to The Wakefield Plays, argues that, because they follow the same pattern, all mystery plays came from one source. That source dates back to the midtwelfth century, making the mystery plays one of the oldest forms of English literature, older than Chaucer's Canterbury Tales by a hundred years.

As originally conceived for the York Corpus Christi festival, an entire cycle of mystery plays was presented sequentially at twelve to sixteen different locations around the town over the course of an entire day. When play number one was finished, it moved on to site number two and was replaced by play number two. Stages were nothing more than converted horse-drawn wagons and the players were representatives of guilds such as those of websters (weavers), barkers (tanners) and ostlers (hotel-keepers).

Actors of the time were under a considerable strain, playing their parts with as few as two rehearsals. Their "call" could be as early as 4:30 a.m. and their final performance often lasted until well after nightfall. And there were usually a great many actors involved in the performance of a cycle: because each of the fifty-odd plays (York had more plays of shorter length than Wakefield) was assigned to a particular guild, a complete cycle could feature as many as twenty-seven different Jesuses and fourteen Pontius Pilates.

The practical difficulties of mounting a sixteen-hour traveling production utilizing hundreds of actors became prohibitive as medieval towns grew into cities. There simply weren't enough hours in the day to handle the growing number of sites and plays. Records show that curfews and a ban against arms had to be employed to curtail rowdiness.

It is doubtful that Wakefield ever staged a traveling cycle. At the time, cities like York were changing their festivals to a single, fixed performance with a procession separate from the cycle. The procession, comprised of tableaus rather than plays, still made its rounds in a day, but the plays were performed on one or more days following.

Wakefield could not mount traveling productions for another reason: there simply wasn't enough manpower available for multiple casting. Tax records from 1377 show that Wakefield's largest guild, the smiths, had only four members. The city itself shows a population of only 567 over the age of sixteen. Thus, in addition to being given in a single performance on a stationary stage, Wakefield's cycle further resembled modern theatrical performances by allowing a single actor to reappear throughout the cycle whenever his character did.

The mystery cycle began truly to resemble today's drama when producing the entire Wakefield pageant became the responsibility of a single group, probably one of the religious guilds. A dramatist was then hired whose job it was to recreate a cycle that would in every way rival York's yet bear the indelible stamp of Wakefield.

Just such a man was employed sometime around 1450. He is referred to today as the Wakefield Master. In addition to retaining in their pristine forms some of the original twelfth century plays, he contributed five new plays and interpolated others. In all, thirteen of the thirty-two plays in the Wakefield Cycle bear the stylistic imprint of the same master. Unfortunately, his identity is unknown.

A.C.T.'s The Passion Cycle corresponds roughly to the "redemption of man" segment of the Wakefield Cycle and tells the story of the public life of Jesus of Nazareth. The ten plays which comprise The Passion Cycle are entitled John The Baptist; Lazarus; The Conspiracy; The Buffeting; The Scourging; The Hanging of Judas; The Crucifixion; The Talents; The Deliverance of Souls and The Resurrection.

The Buffeting is the only play attributed to the Wakefield Master that appears in A.C.T.'s The Passion Cycle, but the anonymous author's influence is strongly felt throughout. The plays of the Passion sequence flow into one another, a decision dictated by the requirements of a fixed stage. Originally each of the mystery plays was designed to stand on its own.

We have Medieval drama to enjoy today because Wakefield's civic leaders wisely saw to it that their mystery cycle was recorded for posterity. After the cycle had been established, a scribe was hired to copy all thirty-two plays into a single manuscript. The 400 year-old manuscript, which now rests in The Huntington Library in San Marino, California, has provided the basis for the text used in A.C.T.'s The Passion Cycle.

The inspiration for each hotel is its original art. At L'Ermitage, our Five Star, Five Diamond flagship hotel, warm dark woods and old master canvases give an air of gentility. Mondrian's extraordinary exterior painted by Agam sets the tone for exquisite contemporary suites with spectacular city views.

At Le Dufy, the dreamlike softness pays homage to the artist for whom it was named. The Bel Age's period furniture and old master paintings give the L'Ermitage Hotels, a collection of originals.

At a time when most hotel chains are taking their design concepts down the path of the "golden arches," L'Ermitage has opened five intimate, absolutely unique all-suite luxury hotels in the most prestigious ten block area of Los Angeles.

The movie, television and recording studios are our neighbors. Beverly Hills and Wilshire Boulevard are around the corner.

Downtown and LAX are twenty minutes. We've chosen prime, quiet, residential settings in the heart of one of the busiest cities in the world.

A ta L'Ermitage hotel, the finest European-styled service and attention to detail are coupled with ahead-of-the-art American enveniences. The concept of value has en redefined to mean getting something valuable for your money. You stay in an outstandingly appointed suite for the tariff of a good hotel room.

Multi-lined telephone systems with conference capabilities, in-suite meeting and dining facilities, limousine service and an excellent concierge are just part of your stay at a L'Ermitage hotel.

ambiance of a French country manor. Casual is the feeling at Le Parc, a hotel designed as a business person's retreat.

L'Ermitage Hotels has taken a fresh look at American business through the collector's eye. Come stay with us. Call your travel agent or call us directly.
