While the Glenlivet Scotch whisky goes for around $200.00, what's wrong with a small piece to pay for a Scotch which has been made in the same unique way since 1877. A 12-year-old single malt Scotch with a smoothness and unique character that is unsurpassed to this day: all of which could explain why people are so strangely possessive about The Glenlivet. Which is a pity. You might just have to buy a bottle of your own.

The Glenlivet: Just Slightly Out Of Reach.
We've got the Keys to the City

San Francisco has an enviable heritage of fine, larger homes. The City also has a realities that provide service worthy of these dwellings. McGuire Real Estate.

And what's available about McGuire is that the personal care, attention to detail and the dedication that accompanies these transactions is extended to every home we sell.

You see, at McGuire Real Estate, we've been selling homes in San Francisco since 1959. We know the business, we know the territory, and we'd like to get to know you.

Because we've got the keys to the city.
929-1500 / 921-5555

AN INVESTMENT YOU CAN LIVE WITH

Why THE GLENLIVET Scotch whisky goes for around $30.00. While some say it's just nice to pay for a Scotch which has been made in the same unique way since 1877. A 12-year-old single malt Scotch with a smoothness and unicum character that is unmatched to this day. All of which could explain why people are so genuinely passionate about The Glenlivet. Which is a pity. You might just have to buy a bottle of your own.

The Glenlivet; Just Slightly Out Of Reach.
VERY, VERY SAN FRANCISCO

PERFORMING ARTS
The Theatre & Music Magazine for California & Texas

NOVEMBER 1986

A QUESTION OF COMMITMENT
by Jim O'Quinn

LETTERS TO THE LITERARY MANAGER
by Susan Laffin

COMING OF AGE —
THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT
by Grace Clark

DOWNTOWN
NEAR ALL THE THEATERS

WELL... MERIDIEN!

NEW 1987 MAXIMA GXE
THE SMART SIDE OF LUXURY.

Hotel MERIDIEN
SAN FRANCISCO
50 THIRD STREET, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA 94105
PHONE: (415) 776-6400
FREE VALET PARKING ON PREMISES

8

27

34

42

42

64

Hotel Meridien invites you to enter our world of luxury. The elegant world of Maxima. It begins with crisp, classic design, re-styled for '87. Beautiful.

In addition to Maxima's outer beauty you'll discover power can be beautiful, as well. Under the hood waits a fuel injected, 3.0-liter V6 engine, the same engine that propels the awesome 300 ZX.

Inside Maxima, Nissan's advanced technology continues to shine. The most wanted luxury features like cruise control, reclining bucket seats, lumbar support, power windows, air conditioning, 6-speaker AM/FM stereo system with cassette and 7-band equalizer and much more. And all at an unbelievable cost.

Maxima for '87. One luxury car that's truly a smart choice.

You'll be glad to know, that when a car's this good you can back it with a plan that's good. Nissan's Security Plus Extended Service Agreement offers you term options up to 5 years, 100,000 miles. Ask your participating Nissan Dealer about it today.

THE LUXURY AND PERFORMANCE IS MAXIMA.
THE NAME IS NISSAN.
PERFORMING ARTS
The Theatre & Music Magazine for California & Texas
NOVEMBER 1986

A QUESTION OF COMMITMENT
by Jim O'Quinn

LETTERS TO THE LITERARY MANAGER
by Susan LaFlamme

COMING OF AGE — THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT
by Grace Glueck

ACT-1
THE PROGRAM

BASILICANA SCENE
by Catherine Spipp

THE COMPULSION TO ACT
by Dennis Powers

DINING SCENE
by Stanley Eichelbaum

Hotel Meridien
San Francisco
50 Third Street, San Francisco, California 94103
Phone: (415) 792-4600
Free Valet Parking on premises

NEW 1987 MAXIMA GXE
THE SMART SIDE OF LUXURY.

Nissan proudly invites you to enter our world of luxury. The elegant world of Maxima, it begins with crisp, classic design, re-defined for '87. Beautiful.

In addition to Maxima's outer beauty you’ll discover power can be handled as well. Under the hood waits a fuel injected 3.0 L V6 engine. The same engine that propels the awesome 300 ZX.

Inside Maxima, Nissan's advanced technology continues to shine. The most wanted luxury features like cruise control, rearview bucket seat, lumbar support, power windows, air conditioning, 6-speaker AM/FM radio, dual system with CD player, and a digital equalizer and much more.

Maxima for '87. One luxury car that’s truly a smart choice.

You’ll be glad to know that when a car’s this good you can back it with a plan that’s the good. Nissan’s Security Plus Extended Service Agreement offers you term options of up to 5 years, 100,000 miles. Ask your participating Nissan dealer about it today.

THE LUXURY AND PERFORMANCE IS MAXIMA.
THE NAME IS NISSAN.
PERFORMING ARTS
MAGAZINE
SAN FRANCISCO EDITION

Hilbert Glass, Senior Editor
Jeffrey Rieher
Managing Editor
Kate Leslie
Art Director
Colleen Curtis
Art Assistant
Edward Seid
Production Manager
Susan Beth Cohen
Computer

Karen Gannon
Kathy Jett
Kenneth Emanuel
Laurie Taylor
Administrative Assistants

Opera Plaza ... 101 Van Ness Ave. #2100
San Francisco, CA 94102
(415) 775-5750

Performing Arts Network, Inc.
3601 Overland Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90066
(800) 800-0000
Fierce Opera

201 Van Ness Ave., San Francisco, CA 94102
(415) 775-5750

4848 Fith Avenue, San Diego, CA 92105

3012 Scottsdale, Suite 260, Houston, TX 77019

2628 Cedar, Suite 410, Dallas, TX 75201

201 W. Lamp, Suite 101, San Antonio, TX 78205

1555 Market Street, San Francisco, CA 94102

Singer Instruments

Bonnie, Sonya P. C., Inc., 1201 W. National Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90015
(213) 381-2707

Derek K. Sally Associates

175 S. Main Street, Brighton, VT 05033
(715) 442-1000

Southern Pacific Advertising, Inc.

300 N. 2nd Street, Multnomah, OR 97035
(503) 622-4000

Cultural Tastes

Our exuberant necklace and bracelet of cultured pearls.

14-karat white gold pistons with a cluster of eighteen-karat gold. Necklace, $17,000. Bracelet, $3,800.

Available only at Tiffany.

Tiffany & Co.

S F AN FRANCISCO • 252 ORANGE AVENUE • 94108
TO ORDER CALL 415-775-5750 • 415 & CO. 1991

Allyn Beth Landau, M.D.
PHYSICIAN/DERMATOLOGIST
SCIENTIFIC BEAUTY EXPERT
Allyn Beth Landau, M.D., helps her patients to achieve and maintain healthy, natural-looking skin.

ZYDERMA® COLLAGEN
You can improve your appearance through Dr. Landau's skillful administration of collagen and achieve what makeup cannot, safely and without surgery. Dr. Landau administers the most Zyderma® Collagen in Northern California.

SKIN CARE FORMULATIONS
Maintaining exquisite standards in dermatological care; advanced cleansers and advanced moisturizers to give you the tools for healthy, beautiful skin. Call us at telephone (415) 775-SKIN.

ACNE TREATMENT
Achieve clear skin and control break-outs. Hyperacne. Regenerate.

PIGMENTATION PROBLEMS/ REFINEMENT
Firms and skin tones, removes youthful glow, improves fine texture of your skin.

CAPILLARY TREATMENTS
Red spots of face and legs may be safely eliminated. Prevention advised.

SKIN GROWTHS
Cosmetic Dermatologists can remove noncancerous growths such as moles, warts, shaving of the face and body. Retractacles - rejuvenate the skin. Uneven texture, nas dreg. Early diagnosis recommended.

Allyn Beth Landau, M.D.
(415) 775-2122 • (415) 775-SKIN

2500 Broadway • Lower Level
San Francisco, CA 94115

Service for Men & Women/Men-3rd
An Evening, April 10TH, HEALTH INSURANCE

6
PHYSICIAN/DERMATOLOGIST
SCIENTIFIC BEAUTY EXPERT
Allyn Beth Landau, M.D. helps you to achieve and maintain healthy, radiant good looks.

ZYDERMA® COLLAGEN
You can expect your agelessness through Dr. Landau's skillful administration of collagen and where what make-up can't control, safely and without surgery. Dr. Landau administers the most Zyderma® Collagen in Northern California

SKIN CARE FORMULATIONS
Maintaining Criteria: Brightened 50% & 75% special cleansers and advanced moisturizer to give you the tools for healthy beautiful skin. Mail or telephone (415) 781-6838

ACNE TREATMENT
Achieve clear skin and control break-outs. Systematic Regimes

PIGMENTATION PROBLEMS/ REJUVENATION
Even out skin tones, remove youthful glow, improve the texture of your skin.

CAPILLARY TREATMENTS
The spots of flare and grey may be safely eliminated. Treatment advisable.

SKIN GROWTHS
Cosmetic Dermatologists can remove moles or remove acoustic or skin cancer growths so you can enjoy a smooth, skin-brightening the face and body. Rebright® treatment for skin growths is now available. Early diagnosis recommended.

Allyn Beth Landau, M.D.
(415) 781-3212
2004 Nob Hill Blvd at Union Square
San Francisco, CA 94108

Service for Men & Women/Manicure & Pedicure

Performing Arts Network, Inc.
Stockton, California

Exquisite diamond necklace and bracelet of cultured pearls.

Cultured Tastes
Our exquisite necklace and bracelet of cultured pearls, eleven cultured pearls scooped from 4 to 6 mm. diamonds and pearls joined with chains of eighteen-knot gold. Necklaces: $7,000. Bracelet: $3,700. Available only at Tiffany's.

Tiffany & Co.
San Francisco - 270 Grant Avenue - 94110
To order call 415-981-3000 - 800 & Co. 1981
A Question of Commitment

A report on the healthy signs at a recent conference hosted by Theatre Communications Group on the occasion of its 25th anniversary—a conference which brought together administrators, directors, playwrights, actors and others prominently identified with the American nonprofit theatre movement.

by Jim O’Quinn

The American nonprofit theatre movement is 25 years old this year, roughly speaking, and its leaders have been taking stock. At Theatre Communications Group’s recent National Conference in Northampton, Mass., nearly 400 theatre professionals from across the United States marked the quarter-century by taking a hard look at their uniform and its institutions. Some saw an adolescent movement only now on the threshold of maturity; others suggested that the years had brought with them certain afflictions—political anemia, artistic timidity, social and ethnic insensitivity—that need to be set right before the nation’s theatre can be said to have genuinely come of age.

The anniversary dates back to 1961, when the Ford Foundation appropriated an initial $9 million to begin “strengthening the position of resident theatre in the U.S.” and concurrently provided seed money to establish a national profes
A Question of Commitment

A report on the healthy state of a recent conference hosted by Theatre Communications Group on the occasion of its 25th anniversary—a conference which brought together administrators, directors, playwrights, actors and others prominently identified with the American nonprofit theatre movement.

by Jim O’Quinn

The American nonprofit theatre movement is 25 years old this year, roughly speaking, and its leaders have been taking stock. At Theatre Communications Group’s recent National Conference in Northampton, Mass., nearly 400 theatre professionals from across the United States marked the quarter-century by taking a hard look at their uniform and its institutions. Some saw an adolescent movement only now on the threshold of maturity; others suggested that the years had brought with them certain afflictions—political amnesia, artistic timidity, social and ethnic insensitivity—that need to be set right before the nation’s theatre can be said to have genuinely come of age.

The anniversary dates back to 1961, when the Ford Foundation appropriated an initial $9 million to begin “strengthening the position of resident theatre in the U.S.,” and concurrently provided seed money to establish a national professional organization, TCG. Already there were major resident theatres in Cleveland, Chicago, Houston, Dallas, Washington and San Francisco, a lively Off-Off Broadway scene in New York, and a number of Shakespeare festivals dotting the American landscape. From these beginnings, the non-commercial theatre proliferated through the 60s and 70s, boycotted by the creation in 1965 of the National Endowment for the Arts. TCG convened the first of its biennial National Conferences at Yale in 1956. By then resident theatres numbered in the hundreds.

Five conferences and a decade later, there are some new faces among the theatrical leadership, some old and per-

John Hicks: "The great plays from the past can help us make sense of what is going on now.

lags unanswerable questions still being asked, and an urgent sense that the theatre must find strategies to deal with the bewildering complexities of contemporary life. "New Challenges and Visions for the American Theatre" was the theme of the Northampton meeting. Roaming across the ivy-draped, century-old campus of Smith College, artistic directors, managers and trustees from U.S. theatre mixture with international guests, traded ideas and opinions, applauded a slate of extraordinary performances, and kept pace with a rigorous, four-day conference agenda. In session after session, sional organization, TCG. Already there were major resident theatres in Cleveland, Chicago, Houston, Dallas, Washington and San Francisco, a lively Off-Off Broadway scene in New York, and a number of Shakespeare festivals dotting the American landscape. From those beginnings, the non-commercial theatre proliferated throughout the '60s and '70s, buoyed by the creation in 1965 of the National Endowment for the Arts. TCG convened the first of its biennial National Conferences at Yale in 1976. By then resident theatres numbered in the hundreds.

Five conferences and a decade later, there are some new faces among the theatrical leadership, some old and perhaps unanswerable questions still being asked, and an urgent sense that the theatre must find strategies to deal with the bewildering complexities of contemporary life. "New Challenges and Visions for the American Theatre" was the theme of the Northampton meeting. Meandering across the ivy-draped, century-old campus of Smith College, artistic directors, managers and trustees from U.S. theatre mixed with international guests, traded ideas and opinions, applauded a slate of extraordinary performances, and kept pace with a rigorous, four-day conference agenda. In session after session, covering topics as varied as Latin American writing, the effects of television on drama and the development of new theatrical forms, the theatre’s ability to confront and transform today’s social and political realities was called for—and called into question.

John Hitch: "The great plays from the past can help us make sense of what is going on now."

Canadian director John Hirsch blamed “political amnesia” for the theatre’s inability to adequately reflect the modern world on stage. “We forget history. We’re not interested in the past,” Hirsch admonished, settling his thicket of beard sternly against his breast and waving his big, expressive hands in a gesture of dismay and loss. “And, even more horrendous, we’re not interested in what’s happening now. That means we’re not going to be prepared for what’s going to happen in the future.”

His up-to-the-minute rhetoric notwithstanding, Hirsch’s subject was the classic theatre. The conference listeners were well aware of the eminent director’s long-standing love affair with classic plays—conducted most recently (until his replacement last year by John Neville) as artistic director of Ontario’s Stratford Festival—and with his passionately held conviction that the centuries need not erode their persistence or their power. “The specific, the immediate—that’s what we should be pursuing,” he emphasized. “These things are present in a very clear way in the classics. These great plays from the past can help us make sense of what’s going on now.

“I look around and see millions of people rushing headlong without questioning, without considering, into answers which come from fundamentalist religion,” Hirsch observed from the lectern he shared with Hartford Stage Company artistic director Mark Lamos in the college’s 460-seat Theatre 14. “They do it because the other side—people like us—are not providing them with some of the ingredients which they absolutely need to survive.” Hirsch asserted. Those ingredi-
A Change in Image — Modern Crisp and Young Designer Collectibles and Accessories

Maison Mendessolle
New York, Palm Beach, Palm Springs, Palm Desert

THEATER CRITIQUES
"CORINTIA & PARKING"

Stepping out to a show?
Before curtain time,
dress in the elegant Corinna, and have your parking validated for the entire evening!
Just blocks from all
San Francisco major theaters.
Serving northern Italian fare from 5:30.
Reservations please.

CORINTIA
RAMADA REnaissance HOTEL
305-800-1871
55 Cyril Magnin Building

covering topics as varied as Latin American coloring, the effects of television on drama and the development of new theatrical forms, the theatre's ability to confront and transform today's social and political realities was called for — and called into question.

Canadian director John Hirsch blamed "political amnesia" for the theatre's inability to adequately reflect the modern world on stage. "We forget history. We're not interested in the past," Hirsch al-mented, settling his thicket of beard against his chest and waving his big, expressive hands in a gesture of dis-mised and low. "And, even more horrendous, we're not interested in what's happening now. That means we're not going to be prepared for what's going to happen in the future."

His up-to-the-minute rhetoric notwithstanding, Hirsch's subject was the classic theatre. The conference listeners were well aware of the eminent director's long-standing love affair with classic plays — conducted most recently (until his replacement last year by John Neville) as artistic director of Ontario's Stratford Festival — and with his passionately held conviction that the centuries need not explain their presence or their power.
"The specific, the immediate — that's what we should be pursuing," he emphasized. "These things are present in a very clear way in the classics. These great plays from the past can help us make sense of what's going on now.

"I look around and see millions of people rushing headlong without questioning, without considering, into ansswers which come from fundamentalist religions," Hirsch observed from the lectern he shared with Hartford Stage Company artistic director Mark Lamos in the college's 460-seat Theatre 14. "They do it because the other side — people like us — are not providing them with some of the ingredients which they absolutely need to survive," Hirsch asserted. Those ingredi-

MITSUBISHI

Soothe your nervous system.

There are those who measure distance in miles.
While others choose to measure distance in terms of time.

At Mitsubishi Motors, we take an altogether different view. We believe that the practice of measuring the best measure of distance in a luxury sedan is the distance you never notice.

And to prove it, we created the Mitsubishi Galant.

Galant's engineers designed a unique driving experience. Patiently crafted to be an island of calm amid the storm of demands on the driver.

The electronic power steering for smooth, confident handling. An available six-speaker AM/FM cassetto stereo system with graphic equalizer and remove controls mounted on the steering wheel.

And to ensure that guests are relaxed with adjustable headrests.
The Mitsubishi Galant.
Road car performance in a luxury sedan. Patiently equipped to soothe your nervous system and to keep an impatient world at a comfortable distance.

GALANT
and to my people was silence—the complexity of silence," she said.

The experience of such repression gives Latin American writing "a sense of advancing in the marshlands," according to Valenzuela, "of trying to deal in a metaphoric way—an open-minded but at the same time blindfolded fashion—with what we know." The power of the tradition of theatre in Argentine life was confirmed, she said, when the military regime fell in 1983 and "the last thing that appeared again in Buenos Aires was theatre—improvunto, free theatre of the streets."

Playwright Keith Reddin, during a vivid and controversial session on theatre as a social forum, joined Hirsch and Valenzuela in calling for a theatre of political immediacy. Reddin's Rim and Coke, which was given its world premiere production by South Coast Repertory during the 1984-85 season and was recently staged by the New York Shakespeare Festival, takes a satiric look at the 1961 CIA-backed Bay of pigs invasion (an event often confused, he wryly pointed out, with the subsequent Cuban missile crisis), and was an attempt to open aud-

Colombian novelist shot from the woods of Eugene O'Neill during one of several evening of performances at憑's Nebula conference.
Lloyd Richards, of Theatre Communications Group and the Eugene O'Neill Theatre Center, opened the conference by noting that "the institutions of family, religion, gender, social position, social relations and national survival" are issues to be confronted by the arts.

"Not only has the political context of our time--such things as spiritual nourishment and metaphysical reflections--are more likely to be found in popular films, he suggested, than in most contemporary plays.

If political amnesia makes theatre art less potent, political repression can silence its voice altogether, testified expatriate Argentine novelist Luisa Valenzuela in a session on Latin American writing chaired by playwright Arthur Giron and also featuring playwright/critic Alberto Minero. Valenzuela, subject to censorship by her government since her first novel appeared when she was 21, and Minero, now director of the theatre department of New York's Center for Inter-American Relations, described Argentinia's harrowing roller-coaster course from artistic and personal freedom to brutal repression and back again in a single generation.

A lively and creative theatre and arts scene in Buenos Aires in the 1950s and 60s gave way to "all-pervading terror" when the military dictatorship assumed power in 1966, Valenzuela recalled. "The worst thing that happened to my country and to my people was silence--the complexity of silence," she said.

The experience of such repression gives Latin American writers a "sense of advancing in the marshlands," according to Valenzuela, of "truly trying to deal in a metaphoric way--an open-minded but at the same time blindfolded fashion--with what we know." The power of the tradition of theatre in Argentine life was confirmed, she said, when the military regime fell in 1983 and "the last thing that appeared again in Buenos Aires was theatre--improptu, free theatre of the streets."

Playwright Keith Reddin, during a vivid and controversial session on theatre as a social forum, joined Hirsch and Valenzuela in calling for a theatre of political immediacy. Reddin's Rats and Coke, which was given its world premiere production by South Coast Repertory during the 1984-85 season and was recently staged by the New York Shakespeare Festival, takes a satirical look at the 1961 CIA-backed Bay of Pigs invasion (an event often confused, he wryly pointed out, with the subsequent Cuban missile crisis), and was an attempt to open audi-

Cotton Denham read from the works of Eugene O'Neill during one of several evening of performances at TCG's sixth biennial conference.
Master of Possibilities: David L. Wolper.

The MasterCard Weekend at the Olympic Centennial Theatre invoked a sense of wonder and excitement. By combining溢出的从不同的文化背景中汲取灵感的创作，Wolper's works offer a unique blend of cultural perspectives, as evident in his play "Substance is the difference between an extravaganza and a historical event."

The MasterCard Weekend included more than just entertainment. It was a celebration of human values, expressed in a way that invited audience participation and engagement. The event showcased works that highlighted the importance of theatre in society.

From a personal perspective, I believe that theatre has the power to make a significant difference in addressing issues that affect our lives. MasterCard's support of the arts is a testament to the value placed on cultural expressions and contributions.

Mark Taper Forum artistic director Gordon Davidson took on the challenge of directing "Substance is the difference between an extravaganza and a historical event.", a play that explores the boundaries between entertainment and serious issues.

Master The Possibilities.
Master of Possibilities: David L. Wolper.

“Substance is the difference between an extravaganza and a historical event.”

The San Francisco Chronicle and the Chronicle Report were more than a year away from the opening of the San Francisco Opera, but they were already celebrating what they called "an extravaganza" which they predicted would be a "historical event." The Chronicle Report predicted that the opera would be "an extravaganza," while the Chronicle called it a "historical event." The Chronicle Report also predicted that the opera would be "an extravaganza," while the Chronicle called it a "historical event."
Sample ravishing Raffinée fragrance. Just open panel above.

THE MANDARIN LACQUER CHEST
ONLY $10
with any purchase from the Raffinée fragrance collection at Macy's.

Raffinée
THE INSTINCT FOR THE EXQUISITE
HOUDEGANT-PARIS

In a recent study of audience-theatre relations, prompting Bruslin to observe: "It concerns with theatre not doing plays out of commitment and conviction. Shaping the theatre to audience expectations will kill it faster than anything else."

Pott Bruslin's exposition that we will look back on this period in American theatre as a "golden age" of playwriting, directing and design met with resistance from some in the industry who saw instead a lack of sufficient job opportunities for artists, particularly minority artists. The dichotomy between what Bruslin termed theatre as a "talent-based meritocracy" and theatre as a social institution is responsibility to society, nostalgia and ultimately hate that at times made theatre a backlash against social dimensions, of theatre as an artform to be cultivated.

Meyrowitz explored the challenges that television theatre, and the master...
"Every writer writes out of his political feeling, how he sees the world and the society around him," Shaw observed. "But too many aspects of our society are so laden, so mysterious, that we, at least those of us who could be called the upper classes—we really a group of killers and guerilleros, but we aren't aware of it. I've always written out of the desire to increase my self-awareness as a member of this powerful class, and to focus the awareness of the audience."

In the discussion that followed, some happens to those who were part of Shaw's killer line, and Jennifer Nelson, a black woman and associate director of the Living Stage in Washington, D.C., asked why a union on social concerns was made up solely of white males. The question galvanized the conference and turned attention to the concerns of women and minorities.

This underground of dissent surfaced most strongly at an evening session featuring two of the resident theatre movement's pioneers: Zelda Fichandler, long-time producer-director of Washington's Arena Stage, and Robert Brustein, artistic director of American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge. Their conversation began with some not altogether ungracious remarks about critics and the State of criticism, then turned to audience-theatre relationships, prompting Brustein to observe: "I'm concerned with theatre not doing plays out of commitment and conviction. Shaping the theatre to audience-expectations will kill it faster than anything else."

But Brustein's assertion that we will look back on this period in American theatre as a "golden age" of playwriting, directing and design met with resistance from some in the assembly who saw instead a lack of sufficient job opportunities for artists, particularly minority artists. The dichotomy between what Brustein termed theatre as a talent-based "meritocracy" and theatre as a social institution with a responsibility to society struck off a "bating," and ultimately time-bound, debate that at times made the room quindle with dimension.

The potency of theatre as an artform was attuned to from very different quarters. In two sessions devoted to other media—author and communications scholar Joshua Meyrowitz explored the many-sided challenges that television presents to the theatre, and the master contended, to a disbeliefing audience who had sat riveted by the hard-hitting speccial implications of the extract they had seen, that none were made to prove a preconceived thesis. "Each in an adventure, a report on what I've learned," he said, adding that the same open-ended approach will be applied to his first venture into live theatre, a production to be co-directed with Robert Bungen of Piran-dello's Tonight We Improvise! scheduled this season at American Repertory Thestre.

An adventurous approach to the creation of new work was also advocated by experimental director Anne Bogart:
"Using whatever's available leads you to your obsessions, which leads you to new experiences, which leads you to better theatre." In a dialogue with multidisciplinary artist Ping Chong, moderated by critic Ross Wetzsteon, Bogart described the evolution of such pieces as her recent 1991, an investigation of the effect of McCarthy era blacklisting on socially concerned artists. Bogart said part of her working method is to zero in on her own
most "abrasive and contradictory" response to events and issues - "the trust that one needs to work on, the unfortunately the least clean, the least comfortable," she ventured. Chong held an anecdote about a Bar resort-Jewish restaurant menu to evoke his own multicultural background and the eclectic mix of art forms and influences, Eastern and Western, that comes into play in his imag-istic, mixed-media theatre pieces.

East and West converged again in a lecture demonstration by director/designer Julie Taymor, who traced the course of her theatrical education through several influential years in Bali, Indonesia, and wept to share the stage with at least dozen other beings as she donned her magically expressive masks to offer snippets of performances. Taymor disclosed the mechanics of a guanto double-pinched, four-foot-high rod puppet (with a wise beak
from The Transposed Heads, her rendering of a Thomas Mann story which opened the 1986 American Music Theatre Festival in Philadelphia in September and runs through Nov. 2 at Lincoln Center), and the cold-smooth pruning of the titular puppet in Gozzi's The King Stag (to be revived this fall at American Repertory Theatre).

Diversification was John Faier's subtect, as the associate producer of Britain's National Theatre enigmatically described the process of creating and juggling five separate companies -- all, he said "designed by artists for audiences, rather than by managers for profit" -- under the giant institution's umbrella on London's South Bank.

In the tradition of TCG National Conferences of previous years, lunchtime workshops served as daily forums for participants to talk with colleagues in smaller groups about special interests they share. This year's 14-box lunch gatherings, some planned by TCG in advance and others suggested by participants as the conference progressed, ranged over such subjects as bringing youth into the theatrie, training director, the role of trustees, and contended, to a disbelieving audience who had sat riveted by the head-biting special implications of the extracts they had seen, that none were made to prove a preconceived thesis. "Each in an adventure, a report on what I've learned," he said, adding that the same open-ended approach will be applied to his first venture into live theatre, a production to be co-directed with Robert Brustein of Piran-dello's Twinkle We Impress," scheduled this season at American Repertory Theatre.

An adventurous approach to the creation of new work was also advocated by

experimental director Anne Bogart:

"Using whatever's available leads you to
your obsessions, which leads you to new experiences, which leads you to better
theatre." In a dialogue with multidisciplinary artist Ping Chong, moderated by critic Ross Wetssten, Bogart described
the evolution of such pieces as her recent 1991, an investigation of the effect of McCarty era blacklisting on socially concerned artists. Bogart said part of her working method is to zero in on her own
most "abrasive and contradictory" responses to events and issues—"the truth that one needs to work on are unfortunately the least clean, the least comfortable," she ventured. Chong held an anecdote about a Barnum-Jewish restaurant menu to evoke his own multicultural background and the eclectic mix
of artforms and influences, Eastern and Western, that comes into play in his invigорistic, mixed-media theatre pieces.

East and West converged again in a
lecture demonstration by director
designer Julie Taymor, who traced the course of her theatrical education through
several influential years in Bali, Indonesia, and dreamed of sharing the stage with at least dozens other beings as she donned her magically expressive masks to offer snippets of performances. Taymor disclosed the mechanics of a gauze double-jointed, four-foot-high rod puppet (a wise hermit
from The Transposed Heads, her rendering of a Thomas Mann story which opened the 1986 American Music Theatre Festival in Philadelphia in September and runs through Nov 2 at Lincoln Center), and the dead-smooth prancing of the titular puppet in Gogol's The King Stag (to be revived
this fall at American Repertory Theatre).

Diversification was John Faifler's subject, as the associate producer of Britain's National Theatre enchantingly described the process of creating and juggling five separate companies—all, he said "designed by artists for audiences, rather than by managers for profit"—under the giant institution's umbrella on London's South
Bank.

In the tradition of TCG National Conferences of previous years, lunchtime roundtables served as daily forums for participants to talk with colleagues in closer groups about special interests they share. This year's 14 boxed lunches, some planned by TCG in advance and others suggested by participants as the conference progressed, ranged over such subjects as bringing youth into the theatre, training directors, the role of trustees, and

A GLORIOUS BEGINNING

Extraordinary... 12 year old Scotch.

Pinch.
Sometimes our scenery gets upstaged.

Get into the act

Vancouver Opera Association
Jan. 24, 27, 31, The Marriage of Figaro
Nov. 1–22, Kaido in the Dash
Nov. 26–Jan. 3, A Shinning Sun

Victoria
Victoria Operatic Society
Nov. 26 – Dec. 6, Jolintile
Baden Theatre Presents
Nov. 7 – 23, Passion
Dec. 12 – 28, Gypsy at the Colosseum
Refly Theatre
Nov. 22 – Nov. 8, Glimmer of Faith and Religion
Nov. 26 – Dec. 10, The Meryl Boys

Four Seasons Musical Theatre Group
Nov. 8, 15, 22, 29, Sleeping Beauty
Royal Theatre
Dec. 23 – 26, Cinderella

Super Natural
Explore the other side

for your complimentary copy of British Columbia's Arts & Entertainment List, please contact Tourism British Columbia, PO Box: 3240, Seattle, WA 98124-1971
Then, get into the act.

- - -

the special problems of smaller theatres.

In one of two spirited one-hour roundtables devoted to TCGB's landmark Hispanic Translations Project, (aimed at creating stageworthy English versions of old and new plays from the theatrically rich Hispanic cultures of the Americas and Europe), Milwaukee Repertory Theatre artistic director John Ruben reviewed the process of discovering, translating, casting, and presenting the works of Mexican playwright Felipe Santiago; Dennis Fergusson Avila of New York's INTAR, compared his theatre's version of Mario Vazquez Llorente's La Chica to a class-sensitive production of the play staged simultaneously in Peru; playwright Eduardo Machado suggested that "we're a kind of racists" as we try to cast Hispanic actors in Hispanic plays; and Los Angeles Theatre Center artistic producing director Bill Bushnell, conceding that the questions of casting is more complex in areas like his with large Hispanic populations, said he believed in finding "the best actors to fill the roles," regardless of ethnic background.

In a moving report-back session on the roundtables, the conference heard summaries from Lee Richardson, artistic director of Crossroads Theatre Company of New Brunswick, New Jersey, on the special qualities of smaller theatres; Edward Seagon III, board president of Houston's Chocolate Bayou Theatre Company, on the role of trustees; designer Ming Cho Lee on designing directors: Julie Taymor on music theatre; actor Kathleen Chalfant on actor's issues; Milwaukee Rep resident director Keneth Ahrn on the emergence of associate artistic directors; and, representing a roundtable entitled "Women, Myth, and Theatre," a panel of speakers led by director Glenda Dickerson. "I would love it if the white men in the audience would relax," Dickerson began, referring to the issue of minority representation that had emerged earlier. "I just want you to listen to what may be Sometimes our scenery gets upstaged.

Get into the act
Vancouver

Vancouver Opera Association
Jan. 24, 27, 31), The Marriage of Figaro
Arts Club Theatre
Nov. 1–22, Rattle in the Dash
Nov. 26–Jan. 3, It's Snowing on Suburban
Vancouver Playhouse
Nov. 1–20, The Diary of Anne Frank
Dec. 5–Jan. 3, Private Lives
Firehall Theatre
Nov. 9–20 Medea

Victoria
Victoria Opera Society
Nov. 25–Dec. 8, Salome
Baclon Theatre Presents
Nov. 7–23, Passion
Dec. 12–28, Gypsy
Gala Theatre
Ex 12–Nov. 1
Glenn's That Prime Time Religion
Nov. 26–Dec. 13, The Melville Boys

Four Seasons Musical Theatre Group
Nov. 8, 15, 22, 29, Sleeping Beauty
Royal Theatre
Dec. 23–26, Cinderella

Super Natural
Explore the other side.
Brush Columbia

For your complimentary copy of British Columbia's Arts & Entertainment Kit, write:
Tourism British Columbia,
P.O. Box 340, Seattle, WA 98114-3400.

The special problems of smaller theatres.

In one of two spirited year-round roundtables devoted to TCG's landmark Hispanic Translations Project (aimed at creating stageworthy English versions of old and new plays from the theatrically rich Hispanic cultures of the Americas and Europe), Milwaukee Repertory Theatre artistic director John Gallaway recounted the process of discovering, translating, casting and presenting the works of Mexican playwright Felipe Santiago; Dennis Fergusson's version of New York's INTART's, Tyler Hayes' version of Mario Vargas Llosa's La Chunga to a class-conscious production of the play staged simultaneously in Peru; playwright Eduardo Machado suggested that "it's a kind of racism" to train on casting Hispanic actors in Hispanic plays and Los Angeles Theatre Center artistic producing director Bill Bullwill; conceding that the question of casting is more complex in areas like his with large Hispanic populations, and he believed in finding "the best actors to fill the roles," regardless of ethnic background.

In a panel presentation session on the roundtables, the conference heard summaries from Art Richardson, artistic director of Crossroads Theatre Company of New Brunswick, New Jersey, on the special qualities of smaller theatres; Edward Seeman III, board president of Houston's Chocolate Bayou Theatre Company, on the role of trustees; designer Ming Cho Lee on training directors; Julie Taymore on music theatre; actor Kathleen Chalfant on actor's issues; Milwaukee Rep president director Kenneth Albers on the emergence of associate artistic directors; and, representing a roundtable entitled "Women, Myth and Theatre," a panel of speakers led by director Glenda Dickerson.

"I would love it if the white men in the audience would relax," Dickerson began, referring to the issue of minority representation that had emerged earlier. "I just want to ask you to listen to what may be another side of the visionary coin. Joining her in behalf of minorities, women and smaller, more isolated theatres were playwright Romulus Linney, INTAR’s Ferguson Acosta and Caron Atlas, development director for Roadside Theatre of Whitesburg, Kentucky. Linney outlined three major concerns— the disenfranchisement of smaller theatres and the “lurking monsters” of sexism and racism. “The role of minorities in the American theatre today,” he said, “is not something that can be pushed back in our consciousness, but must be continually addressed, continually thought about, never out of our minds for very long.”

“We’re here to reflect on our theatre’s artistic life and find new areas to explore,” TCG director and conference host Peter Zinsser had said at the meeting’s outset, and whatever the topic under scrutiny, it was the theatre’s grasp of contemporary reality—John Hirsch’s need to "make sense of what’s going on now"—that flowed beneath the surface.

Even the conference performances seemed to reiterate the theme, from Czech clown Bolek Polívka’s patchwork meditation on the power of art, The Jester and the Queen, performed with French actress Chantal Poullain, to solo actor Fred Curutchet’s startling stream-of-consciousness adaptation of The Empress, to the incomparable comic gusto of Italian satirist Dario Fo’s Mefistofele. Other performers included Swiss mime Andres Bossard, who evolved in word and gesture the work of Mummenschanz, the three-member troupe he co-founded in 1972 and which is now appearing on Broadway; actress Colleen Dewhurst, who spoke eloquently about her life as an actress and performed scenes from the work of Eugene O’Neill; and the distinguished poet/translator Richard Wilbur, who read stridently from his own work.

Jim O’Neill is the editor of American Theatre. This article is an expanded version of a report which appeared in the magazine’s September 1986 issue.
FAUST

Begun in 1833. In French.

DIE MEISTERSINGER VON NÜRNBERG

Begun in 1834. In German.

LA BOHÈME

Begun in 1874. In Italian.

EUGENIE ONEGIN

Begun in 1874. In Russian.

MANON

Begun in 1874. In French.

MACBETH

Begun in 1874. In English.

One more available by Melrose Photo.
You've come a long way, baby.

VIRGINIA SLIMS

Also available in 20s

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING. Quitting Smoking Now Greatly Reduces Serious Risks to Your Health.

Letters to the Literary Manager

by Susan LaTempa

ILLUSTRATIONS BY JESUS PEREZ

Dear Mr. Dexter,

Enclosed please find my one-act play, "Hard Time in Middle Age," about a tal-ented actor who finds himself at a "crisis" point when he discovers he can no longer audition for young leading man roles due to his new "maturity." I must confess that I had a "particular" actor in mind for the leading role--myself (picture and resume enclosed)!--and I hope I will be allowed to "audition" for the part if you should decide to "produce" the play.

Respectfully yours,

James "Jim" Black

Mr. Roland Dexter

Literary Manager

The California Theatre

Cultural Center Bldg.

Los Angeles, CA 90099

Dear Mr. Dexter:

It was a privilege to hear you speak on the panel at the Dramatists Guild Symposium, "Getting Your Play Produced: The Whys and The Hows," and I was struck by your forthrightness and honesty. In fact, if I may say so, something about the way you express yourself makes me think that you and I are kindred souls. Your use of the words "ubiquous" and "turquoise," for example, reminded me of myself.

Needless to say, this makes me hope you'll find my enclosed play, "Agrippa," to be as astonishing, dramatic, and timely as I know it to be. Please call me as soon as you've read it. I'll be home all week.

Yours in kinship,

Adam Drake
Letters to the Literary Manager

by Susan LaTempa

ILLUSTRATIONS BY JESUS PÉREZ

Dear Mr. Dexter,

Enclosed please find my one-act play, “Hard Time in Middle Age,” about a tal-ent ed actor who finds himself at a “crisis” point when he discovers he can no longer audition for young leading man roles due to his new “maturity.” I must confess that I had a “particular” actor in mind for the leading role—myself (picture and resume enclosed) and I hope I will be allowed to “audition” for the part if you should decide to “produce” the play.

Respectfully yours,

James “Jim” Black

Mr. Roland Dexter
Literary Manager
The California Theatre
Cultural Center Bldg.
Los Angeles, CA 90099

Dear Mr. Dexter,

It was a privilege to hear you speak on the panel at the Dramatists Guild Sym-posium, “Getting Your Play Produced: The Why and The How,” and I was struck by your forthrightness and hon-esty. In fact, if I may say so, something about the way you express yourself makes me think that you and I are kindred souls. Your use of the words “ubiquitous” and “turpulent,” for example, reminded me of myself.

Needless to say, this makes me hope you’ll find my enclosed play, “Agrippa,” to be as astonishing, dramatic, and timely as I know it to be. Please call me as soon as you’ve read it. I’ll be home all week.

Yours in kinship,

Adam Drake
Dear Mr. Dexter:

I'm a young playwright, with, if I may say so, more than a modicum of talent. Not to toot my own horn, but when my verse epic about Susan B. Anthony, Joan of Arc, and Aimee Semple McPherson was read at the New Plows for Tomorrow series, Jane Alden called it "powerful." And, though I hate to sound immodest, the late Heinrich Holmes, who was my mentor, read the first draft of my study of the psychological hell endured by a secretary whose marriage is breaking up, and he commented that it was "gripping... sheer drama."

All this by way of introduction. What I'm really writing to tell you about is my new play: "In Heaven—Or Are We?," a parable in which the emanences (eminences?) of James Dean, Janis Joplin, and Jimi Hendrix meet in the netherworld. They are introduced to the customs of this new space by the spirits of Socrates, Virgil and Hestera of Gansersheim. Sound intriguing? I'd love to have you read it. I think it would be just right for your theatre. You did such a serviceable production of Cherry's June that I know this is something your company would enjoy sinking their teeth into.

Please return the self-addressed, stamped postcard to me indicating your interest or (though I prefer being optimistic) lack of same.

Sincerely,
Susan C. Taylor

---

Hi Roland:

Ed suggested I send you this script. It's a four character comedy about sex and religion. Not necessarily in that order. Ed knows me, of course, as head writer for the "Nights Alarmed" TV series. They pay me $50,000 per episode for writing that drivel, but theatre is my true love (I started out in New York back when you were in grade school) and this play is really close to my heart. I think you could make big bucks on it, too—if that means anything to a literary idealist like yourself.

Best,
Chuck Rose

---

...The 2 Hawaiian dancers can be represented by cutout cut-out figures on stage (except the men with tires, of course!)
Dear Mr. Dexter:
I'm a young playwright, with, if I may say so, more than a modicum of talent. Not to toot my own horn, but when my verse epic about Susan B. Anthony, Joan of Arc, and Aimee Semple McPherson was read at the New Plays for Tomorrow series, Jane Alden called it "powerful." And, though I hate to sound immodest, the late Heinrich Holmes, who was my mentor, read the first draft of my study of the psychological hell endured by a secretary whose marriage is breaking up, and he commented that it was "gripping... sheer drama."

All this by way of introduction. What I'm really writing to tell you about is my new play: "In Heaven—Or Are We?", a parable in which the emancers (eminesents?) of James Dean, Janis Joplin, and Jimi Hendrix meet in the netherworld. They are introduced to the customs of this new space by the spirits of Socrates, Virgil and Hesiod of Gan- dersheim. Sound intriguing? I'd love to have you read it. I think it would be just right for your theatre. You did such a serviceable production of Chaboty's June that I know this is something your company would enjoy sinking their teeth into.

Please return the self-addressed, stamped postcard to me indicating your interest or (though I prefer being optimistic) lack of same.

Sincerely,
Susan C. Taylor

---

THE PAWS THAT REFRESH.

Fresh Step is the only cat litter that actually releases tiny odor neutralizers every time your cat scratches or even steps. So now you can let your cat help keep the litter fresh.

Because Fresh Step® Refreshes with every step.
What do you want for ten bucks, the Great American Novel?

Don't write it off. An educated mind gives the imagination expression.

And thanks to a generous grant from Wells Fargo Bank, the San Francisco Education Fund was able to improve the quality of education at Visitation Valley Middle School by helping young people learn to express themselves.

Out of Wells Fargo's $10,000 grant, $1,000 was put towards the development of the Visitation Valley Middle School Writing Workshop. This literary magazine enabled more than a hundred kids to assume the roles of editors, illustrators, writers, proofreaders, and paste-up artists. That comes down to as little as $10 a student.

Now, there's no guarantee your money will educate the child who grows up to write the great American novel. Then again, there's no guarantee it won't. So please, send whatever you can. And keep the program, and hundreds of others, successful.

If you'd like more information on how you can help make San Francisco public schools even better, call us at 415-621-8878. Or write: 1095 Market Street, Suite 711, San Francisco, CA 94103.

San Francisco Education Fund
A little money shouldn't stand between a kid and a dream.

Dear Roland:

I bet you never thought when we were in Miss Williams' class together at Red Hill Elementary School that someday I'd be submitting a play to you. I never did. I thought I'd be a fireman or something... ha, ha. But, as things turned out, I'm pursuing this crazy, glorified business of writing plays (while supporting myself as a waiter on the side) and you're busy as a big-shot literary manager (though I hear you don't earn as much as I do). I just about choked when I saw your name in the Playwright's Guide; but then I said to myself—boy—what are old friends for?

So here's the script. It's called "A Dream of Love." I haven't enclosed a return envelope— you can keep the script, whatever you decide about producing it.

Bye now,
Stan Hope

Dear Mr. Dexter,

Enclosed please find my play, "Friendship." It has a cast of 33, but several of the parts can be played by the same people, and the 17 Hawaiian dancers can be represented by cardboard cut-out figures or dolls (except the ones with lines, of course). There are 15 scenes, each taking place at a different location, but sets can be minimal and many things (like the volcano and the ocean liner) can be merely suggested with judicious use of lights and the actors miming such environmental considerations as heat, sea breezes, etc.

I am really not sure about the facilities at your theatre, but if you have a revolving stage and an orchestra pit, I'm sure you'll find that "Friendship" will be a snap to produce.

Sincerely yours,
John Brentley, M.D.

Dear Mr. /Ms. Literary Manager:

Please excuse this use of a form letter, but since so many of you respond to so many of us with form letters, I figured you couldn't object.

I have the following plays available for production. Simply check the one(s) that interest you, fold this pre-gummed form so that my address is on the outside, and drop it into your outgoing mail. I'll dispatch the appropriate script immediately.

- A DREAM OF LOVE (2m, 2f. 1 set) a small play about small people and their big troubles.
- RED WINE OR WHAT? (7m, 1 set) Set in the kitchen of a posh French restaurant, this poignant piece examines men's relationships.
- DON'T CALL US GIRLS (7w, 7m) Set in the dressing room of a strip club, this poignant play examines women's relationships, with a contemporary twist—some of the women are men!

Thank you for your kind attention. I hope to hear from you soon. Please help me keep my costs down by letting me know if you receive more than one copy of this mailer.

And Larkin, Playwright

Dear Mr. Dexter,

I sent you my script—a very good script—three weeks ago. Since then... silence.
What do you want for ten bucks, the Great American Novel?

Don't waste it off. An educated mind gives the imagination expression. And thanks to a generous grant from Wells Fargo Bank, the San Francisco Education Fund was able to improve the quality of education at Visitation Valley Middle School by helping young people learn to express themselves.

Out of Wells Fargo's $10,000 grant, $1,000 was put towards the development of the Writing Review: This literary magazine enabled more than a hundred kids to assume the roles of editor, illustrator, writer, proofreader and paste-up artist. That comes down to as little as $10 a student.

Now there's no guarantee your money will educate the child who grows up to write the great American novel. Then again, there's no guarantee it won't. So please, send whatever you can. And keep this program, and hundreds of others, successful.

If you'd like more information on how you can help make San Francisco public schools even better, call us at 415 621-4878. Or write: 1095 Market Street, Suite 718, San Francisco, CA 94103.

San Francisco Education Fund
A little money should't stand between a kid and a dream.

Dear Roland—
I bet you never thought when we were in Miss Williams' class together at Redhill Elementary School that someday I'd be submitting a play to you. I never did. I thought I'd be a fireman or something... ha, ha. But, as things turned out, I'm pursuing this crazy, glorious business of writing plays (while supporting myself as a waiter on the side) and you're busy as a big-shot literary manager (though I hear you don't earn as much as I do). I just about choked when I saw your name in the Playwright's Guide, but then I said to myself--boy--what are old friends for?

So here's the script. It's called "A Dream of Love." I haven't enclosed a return envelope--you can keep the script, whatever you decide about producing it.

Bye now,
Stan Hope

Dear Mr. Dexter,
Enclosed please find my play, "Friendship." It has cast of 33, but several of the parts can be played by the same people, and the 12 Hawaiian dancers can be represented by cardboard cut-out figures or dolls (except the ones with lines, of course). There are 15 scenes, each taking place at a different location, but sets can be minimal and many things (like the volcano and the ocean liner) can be ignored as suggested with judicious use of lights and the actors miming such environmental considerations as heat, sea breezes, etc.

I am really not sure about the facilities at your theatre, but if you have a revolving stage and an orchestra pit, I'm sure you'll find that "Friendship" will be a snap to produce.

Sincerely yours,
John Breitenley, M.D.

Dear Mr. / Mrs. Literary Manager:
Please excuse the use of a form letter, but since so many of you respond to so many of us with form letters, I figured you couldn't object.

I have the following plays available for production. Simply check the one(s) that interest you, fold this pre-addressed envelope so that my address is on the outside, and drop it into your outgoing mail. I'll dispatch the appropriate scripts immediately.

- A DREAM OF LOVE (2m, 2l; 1 set) a small play about small people and their big troubles.
- RED WINE OR WHAT? (7m, 1 set) Set in the kitchen of a posh French restaurant, this poignant piece examines men's relationships.
- DON'T CALL US GIRLS (7w, 7l) Set in the dressing room of a strip club, this poignant play examines women's relationships, with a contemporary twist--some of the women are men!

Thank you for your kind attention. I hope to hear from you soon. Please help me keep my costs down by letting me know if you receive more than one copy of this mailer.

Andy Larkin
Playwright

Dear Mr. Dexter:
I sent you my script—a very good script—three weeks ago. Since then...silence.
What's up? I don't mind if you take your time, but three weeks?

Adam Drake

Dear Mr. Dexter:
I sent you my play, "Lost in the Forest" three months ago and I haven't heard a word. Have you (a) read it? (b) lost it? (c) fed it to your dog? (d) all of the above?

An irate playwright

Dear Mr. Dexter:
I sent you my play, "A Dream of Love," three years ago. Three years is too long for even the most patient, humble playwright to have to wait. Please send it back.

Norman Lisbon Cook

P.S. If you are passing on "A Dream of Love," I have recently completed a play called "Sing, Canary, Sing" which may be more to your liking. I am submitting it under separate cover.

Dear Roly,
I guess you thought you'd never hear from me again. I'm sorry, but when things started to go so badly between us, I couldn't think of anything to do but cut and run. I couldn't see us being "just friends" after such a stormy, tumultuous romance. I hope you understand.

Anyway, I'm living in Berkeley now, and I've made some friends and have a great job and I've even met a guy I think I'm in love with (but it's too soon to tell).

This has given me the distance to have some perspective on us and the strength to write about those crazy, glorious months we spent together. They were special. We were special. And my play, based on our story, is special. I know you have the professionalism to know how a writer metamorphoses the raw material of life into the universal truth of the stage, and I hope you aren't going to be hung up or defensive about a version of what happened that is, after all, from my point of view.

Let me know what you think about "He Done Her Wrong." You know you can be honest with me. That's one thing we always were with each other—honest.

Love (I can say that now),

Theresa

Let me know what you think about "He Done Her Wrong." You know you can be honest with me.

THIS HOLIDAY SEASON
SAY IT WITH ROSES.

AMARETTO DI SARONNO - ORIGINALE
What's up? I don't mind if you take your time, but three weeks?

Adam Drake

Dear Mr. Dexter:
I sent you my play, "Lost in the Forest" three months ago and I haven't heard a word. Have you (a) read it? (b) lost it? (c) fed it to your dog? (d) all of the above?

An irate playwright

Dear Mr. Dexter:
I sent you my play, "A Dream of Love," three years ago. Three years is too long for even the most patient, humble playwright to have to wait. Please send it back.

Norman Lisbon Cook

P.S. If you are passing on "A Dream of Love," I have recently completed a play called "Sing, Canary, Sing" which may be more to your liking. I am submitting it under separate cover.

Dear Roly,
I guess you thought you'd never hear from me again. I'm sorry, but when things started to go so badly between us, I couldn't think of anything to do but cut and run. I couldn't see us being "just friends" after such a stormy, tumultuous romance. I hope you understand.

Anyway, I'm living in Berkeley now, and I've made some friends and have a great job and I've even met a guy I think I'm in love with (but it's too soon to tell).

This has given me the distance to have some perspective on us and the strength to write about those crazy, glorious months we spent together. They were special. We were special. And my play, based on our story, is special. I know you have the professionalism to know how a writer metamorphoses the raw material of life into the universal truth of the stage, and I hope you aren't going to be hung up or defensive about a version of what happened that is, after all, from my point of view.

Let me know what you think about "He Done Her Wrong." You know you can be honest with me. That's one thing we always were with each other—honest.

Love (I can say that now),

Theresa

[Cartoon image of a man writing a letter]
Coming of Age—
The National Endowment for the Arts

I t’s been assailed by critics, threatened with dismantling by Presidential advisors, and warned by Cassandras that it would never survive. But this year the National Endowment for the Arts — a Federal agency that has achieved a national presence out of all proportion to its size and budget — is celebrating its 20th birthday in fairly robust health.

Lasting through 10 Congresses and more than four Administrations, the endowment has grown from a handful of employees and six programs to 16 programs administered by a staff of 260. Its budget has increased from a mere $2.5 million in 1965, the year of its founding, to $163 million for fiscal year 1986. Where its first grants went to 259 organizations and individuals, mainly in urban centers, so far this year it has handed out $465.5 million to 4,668 recipients, covering every part of the country and an enormous variety of art forms.

by Grace Glueck

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATRE
1986-87 Repertory Season

SUNDAY IN THE PARK WITH GEORGE
by Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine
September 28 through November 1

THE DOCTOR’S DILEMMA
by George Bernard Shaw
November 8 through December 3

A CHRISTMAS CAROL
by Charles Dickens
December 5 through December 27

THE FLOATING LIGHT BULB
by Woody Allen
December 30 through January 31

THE REAL THING
by Tom Stoppard
January 28 through March 6

THE SEAGULL
by Anton Chekhov
February 10 through April 4

MA RAINEE’S BLACK BOTTOM
by August Wilson
March 11 through April 25

FAUSTUS IN HELL
by Nagle Jackson
April 15 through May 18
Coming of Age –
The National Endowment for the Arts

by Grace Glueck

The National Endowment for the Arts chairman since its inception, lr. to r., Livington Baliff, the late Nancy Hawks, current chairman Fred Halvatz, Roger Stevens.

It’s been assailed by critics, threatened with dismantling by Presidential aides, and warned by Cassandras that it would never survive. But this year the National Endowment for the Arts — a Federal agency that has achieved a national presence out of all proportion to its size and budget — is celebrating its 20th birthday in fairly robust health.

Lasting through 30 Congresses and more than four Administrations, the endowment has grown from a handful of employees and six programs to 16 programs administered by a staff of 260. Its budget has leavened from a mere $2.5 million in 1965, the year of its founding, to $163 million for fiscal year 1985. Where its first grants went to 299 organizations and individuals, mainly in urban centers, so far this year it has handed out $45.5 million to 4,688 recipients, covering every part of the country and an enormous vari

---

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATRE
1986-87 Repertory Season

SUNDAY IN THE PARK WITH GEORGE
by Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine
September 29 through November 1

THE DOCTOR’S DILEMMA
by George Bernard Shaw
November 6 through December 3

A CHRISTMAS CAROL
by Charles Dickens
December 3 through December 27

THE FLOATING LIGHT BULB
by Woody Allen
December 30 through January 31

THE REAL THING
by Tom Stoppard
January 28 through March 6

THE SEAGULL
by Anton Chekhov
February 26 through April 4

MA RAINEY’S BLACK BOTTOM
by August Wilson
March 11 through April 23

FAUSTUS IN HELL
by Nagle Jackson
April 19 through May 16
A MESSAGE TO OUR PATRONS

A warm welcome to the second production of our 1986-87 season. As you may know, this year marks the most significant turning point in A.C.T.'s history since the company founded a home in San Francisco over twenty years ago and opened its first production, Tragedy, at the Geary on January 21, 1965, under William Ball's direction.

Now A.C.T. is moving forward into its third decade under the new leadership of Edward Hastings as Artistic Director. So far, the current season shows every promise of being among the most exciting in many years. In addition to outstanding productions on the Geary stage, the company is in the process of remodeling our program for the development of new theatre making, Plays-in-Progress, which produced so many fine plays during the nineteen-seventies, including outstanding works by Mark Medoff, Paul Clay, Frank Chir, Anne Cernowitz, Mary Gallagher, Robert Gordon and Patrick Meyers.

Concurrently, the Board of Trustees is undergoing a re-examination of its scope and function and an expansion to membership to make it more truly representative of the Bay Area community. Recent additions include Anthony M. Frank of Belvedere, Phillip Larso and Albert Mooney of Atherton, and Howard Notowerdi and Philip Schlein of San Francisco. One of our top priorities is to continue the strengthening of A.C.T. ties to the community.

In the meantime, the other members of the Board join me in expressing our gratitude to you for being with us at this performance and for your support of the American Conservatory Theatre. I look forward to seeing you at the Geary throughout the season.

Best Wishes,

Frank Ottwell
President, A.C.T. Board of Trustees

IN THE A.C.T.

News of the American Conservatory Theatre

NEW S.F. ARTS FUND

The City's Voluntary Arts Contribution Fund is tapping a new source of potential donors to A.C.T. and other non-profit arts groups. San Francisco property owners will find a notice in their property tax bills for this December advising them to simply check off a box on their tax bill and adding a few dollars to their tax total. They can help the City's artists and arts organizations in a convenient, relatively painless way.

During a recent twelve-month period, the fund distributed some $460,000 to arts groups, with the money helping one improve its lighting, another to purchase a new sound system, others to bring their facilities up to code.

"Working together," says Chief Administrative Officer Roger Boa, "we can keep San Francisco a haven for creative experiment, diverse ethnic expression and neighborhood dynamism."

MONDAYS AT A.C.T.

Continuing the series of post-performance "conversations" that began with Sunday in the Park with George, Artistic Director Edward Hastings announces three more Monday night talks during the engagement of The Doctor's Dilemma.

On November 17, Alan Jones, Dean of Grace Cathedral, will talk informally about the play in the Lower Lounge right after the performance.

On November 24, Dr. William Dement, Professor of Psychiatry at Stanford, will be the speaker.

On December 1, Diane Johnson, the novelist and screenwriter, will lead the conversation and answer questions from the audience. All A.C.T. playgoers are invited to join the sessions.

The Lower Lounge is at the bottom of the stairs off the Geary lobby. Refreshments are available during the talks.

Anthony M. Frank

BOARD EXPANSION

Joining the A.C.T. Board of Trustees this fall is Anthony M. Frank, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of First Nationwide Savings and its parent company, First Nationwide Financial Corporation. Mr. Frank, who makes his home in Belvedere, joined First Nationwide as President in 1971 and was elected Chairman of the Board in 1975. We welcome him to our Board of Trustees.

THEATRE PARTY TIME

Theatre parties offer the perfect way for clubs, organizations and service groups
A MESSAGE TO OUR PATRONS

A warm welcome to the second production of our 58-8 season. As you may know, this year marks the most significant turning point in A.C.T.'s history since the company was formed in San Francisco twenty years ago and opened its first production, Tribes, at the Geary on January 21, 1967, under William Ball's direction.

Now A.C.T. is moving forward into its third decade under the new leadership of Edward Hastings as Artistic Director. So far, the current season shows every promise of being among the most exciting in many years. In addition to outstanding productions on the Geary stage, the company is in the process of retooling our program for the development of new theatre making, Playwrights in Progress, which produced so many fine plays during the sixteen seasons, including outstanding works by Mark Medoff, Paul Cay, Frank Chier, Anne Coquery, Mary Gallagher, Robert Gordon and Patrick Meyers.

Concurrently, the Board of Trustees is undertaking a reexamination of its scope and function and an expansion in membership to make it more truly representative of the Bay Area community. Recent additions include Anthony M. Frank of Belvedere, Philip Lasky, and Albert S. Clum. One of our top priorities is to continue the strengthening of A.C.T.'s ties to the community.

In the meantime, the other members of the Board join me in expressing our gratitude to you for being with us at this performance and for your support of the American Conservatory Theatre.

I look forward to seeing you at the Geary throughout the season.

Best Wishes,

Frank Ottwell
President, A.C.T. Board of Trustees

IN THE A.C.T.

News of the American Conservatory Theatre

NEW S.F. ARTS FUND
The City's Voluntary Arts Contribution Fund is launching a new series of potential donors to A.C.T. and other non-profit arts groups. San Francisco property owners will find a notice on their property tax bills for this December advising them that by simply checking a box on their tax bills and adding a few dollars to their total, they can help the City artists and arts organisations in a convenient, relatively painless way.

During a recent twelve-month period, the fund distributed some $60,000 to arts groups, with the money helping one improve its lighting, another to purchase a new sound system, others to bring their facilities up-to-code.

"Working together," says Chief Administrative Officer Roger Besen, "we can keep San Francisco a haven for creative expression, diverse ethnic expression and neighborhood dynamism."

MONDAYS AT A.C.T.
Continuing the series of post-performance "conversations" that began with Sunday in the Park with George, Artistic Director Edward Hastings announces three more Monday night talks during the engagement of The Doctor's Dilemma.

On November 17, Alan Jones, Dean of Grace Cathedral, will talk informally about the play in the Lower Lounge right after the performance.

On November 24, Dr. William Dement, Professor of Psychiatry at Stanford, will be the speaker.

On December 1, Diane Johnson, the novelist and screenwriter, will lead the conversation and answer questions from the audience. All A.C.T. playgoers are invited to join the sessions.

The Lower Lounge is at the bottom of the stairs off the Geary lobby. Refreshments are available during the talks.

Anthony M. Frank

BOARD EXPANSION
Joining the A.C.T. Board of Trustees this fall is Anthony M. Frank, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of First Nationwide Savings, and its parent company, First Nationwide Financial Corporation. Mr. Frank, who makes his home in Belvedere, joined First Nationwide as President in 1971 and was elected Chairman of the Board in 1975.

We welcome him to our Board of Trustees.

THEATRE PARTY TIME
A formal and informal party for clubs, organizations and service groups will be held on December 1. All members of the community are invited.

ACT 3
to enjoy live theatre together and save money at the same time. You need a minimum order of twelve tickets to qualify for an across-the-board discount of twenty percent. The discount applies no matter what price seats you select. For all the details, including information on how you can use A.C.T. theatre parties as fundraising events for your group, call Rita M. Zeichner at (415) 771-3880. Party bookings are available now for all seven new productions on the season schedule as well as the annual holiday entertainment, A Christmas Carol.

A WORD ABOUT OUR SPONSORS

Simpson Paper Company, which is sharing the production sponsorship of The Doctor’s Dilemma with the Connecticut-based Xerox Foundation, has a history that goes back nearly a century. Since 1969, the company has had its corporate headquarters in San Francisco. Founded by President John Cunliffe of Hillsborough, Simpson Paper Company is a major producer of high-quality coated, printing, writing and technical papers. The company employs some 2,000 people nationwide.

Simpson Paper Company takes a progressive view of the corporate-community relationship. As Vice-President Ken Perkins points out, “we’re well aware of the role that a company such as ours should play in the life of a city, including the arts. We are proud to be headquartered in a city that has a real commitment to the arts, as does San Francisco.”

Perkins, who makes his home in Danville, notes that “Simpson Paper Company has been associated as corporate donors with A.C.T. for the past ten years. We feel that A.C.T. is unique in that it’s making a valuable contribution to a great city. We are interested in having that contribution nurtured and continued.” Simpson Paper Company also supports the San Francisco Symphony, Ballet and other arts. “And we’re pleased to be able to do so,” says Perkins.

By a happy coincidence, the two corporate co-sponsors of The Doctor’s Dilemma also share a business relationship of long standing. “We have a relationship that goes back many years,” Perkins explains. “Simpson Paper Company is a major producer of Xerox copy paper.”

A.C.T. extends its thanks to both Simpson Paper Company and the Xerox Foundation for their enlightened support of the arts.

A.C.T. NEEDS YOU

Friends of A.C.T., the volunteer organization supporting the American Conservatory Theatre, is seeking new members as the season continues. Members work behind the scenes in a variety of creative activities that provide important help for A.C.T. in many phases of the company’s operation.

An enthusiastic network of volunteers representing diverse age groups and backgrounds, the Friends of A.C.T. provides itself on supporting a theatre whose work enriches life in the Bay Area. For information about joining, call (415) 771-3880.

YOUR TABLE IS READY

The Lower Lounge, A.C.T.’s downstairs lobby, adds food service to its beverage complement for the first time this season. A light pre-theatre plate is now available, offering cold cuts, cheeses, baguette and fresh fruit or vegetable garnish. It can serve as an hors d’oeuvre tray when shared by several people or a more substantial snack for one or two. Pastries are also on sale.

In addition, cocktail service, beers, wines, soft drinks and coffee drinks are on the menu.

The Lower Lounge will open at 7 p.m. prior to evening performances and at 5 p.m. on matinee days, with service continuing through the last intermission.

For convenient intermission service, the staff recommends ordering and paying for drinks prior to curtain time. When you return at intermission, your drinks will be waiting for you on a reserved table bearing your name.

PROLOGUE TO A DILEMMA

Director John Carlin will be featured in the prologue to The Doctor’s Dilemma at 5:30 p.m., Monday, November 10. Co-sponsored by A.C.T. and the Junior League of San Francisco, Prologues offer an open forum on plays in the repertory and an opportunity for artists and audience members to exchange views. Carlin will talk about her new production of Bernard Shaw’s comedy about the mediocre profession’s private practices and answer questions from the audience. Prologues are usually about an hour in length. They are held in the Geary Theatre, and all are welcome to attend.

THE A.C.T. 400

This season, for the first time, San Francisco’s Cleo Faulkner and the Friends of A.C.T. are offering a premium subscription plan called The A.C.T. 400. The plan offers subscribers the opportunity to attend four special parties during the 1986-87 season, in addition to their subscription performances, as part of a special Thursday evening series. Each of the pre-theatre parties will be held at a different and unusual locale, to encourage subscribers to make new theatre-going friends while they enjoy the new shows on the season schedule.

Serving as Executive hosts, along with Mrs. Faulkner, are Mr. and Mrs. Cesar Beci. The Executive Committee includes Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Davies, Lewis, Maureen, Love, Michael T. Jackson, Professor Thanasia Maskalets, Ann Fur-\n bush and Marguerite Hessen. Nicole Lambo is serving as assistant to the committee.

Complete information, including prices and schedules, is available from Cleo Faulkner, (415) 567-610, or 771-3880.

HALF-PRICE TIX FOR STUDENTS

Students may purchase available seats in advance at half-price for all regular A.C.T. repertory performances. With valid current student identification, the bearer is entitled to buy two tickets at the special price. Student tickets may be purchased (1) at the Geary box office: (2) by mail, if the check or money order is accompanied by a clear photocopy of student ID in the same name that appears on the check; or (3) charged to Visa, MasterCard or American Express cards, in which case the valid student ID must be shown at the box office when the tickets are picked up.

ACT45
to enjoy live theatre together and save money at the same time. You need a minimum order of twelve tickets to qualify for an across-the-board discount of twenty percent. The discount applies no matter what price seats you select. For all the details, including information on how you can use A.C.T. theatre parties as fundraising events for your group, call Rita M. Zechner at (415) 771-3880. Party bookings are available now for all seven new productions on the season schedule as well as the annual holiday entertainment, A Christmas Carol.

A WORD ABOUT OUR SPONSORS
Simpson Paper Company, which is sharing the production sponsorship of The Doctor’s Dilemma with the Connecticut-based Xerox Foundation, has a history that goes back nearly a century. Since 1919, the company has had its corporate headquarters in San Francisco. Headed by President John Bunnell of Hillsborough, Simpson Paper Company is a major producer of high-quality coated, printing, writing and technical papers. The company employs some 2,000 people nationwide.

Simpson Paper Company takes a progressive view of the corporate-community relationship. As Vice-President Ken Perkins points out, “We’re well aware of the role that a company such as ours should play in the life of a city, including the arts. We are proud to be headquartered in a city that has a real commitment to the arts, as does San Francisco.” Perkins, who lives in Danville, notes that “Simpson Paper Company has been a corporate donor to A.C.T. for the past ten years. We feel that A.C.T. is unique and that it’s making a valuable contribution to the great city. We are interested in having that contribution nurtured and continued.” Simpson Paper Company also supports the San Francisco Symphony, Ballet and ACT4 other arts. “And we’re pleased to be able to do so,” says Perkins.

By a happy coincidence, the two corporate co-sponsors of The Doctor’s Dilemma also share a business relationship of long standing. “We have a relationship that goes back many years,” Perkins explains. “Simpson Paper Company is a major producer of Xerox copy paper.”

A.C.T. extends its thanks to both Simpson Paper Company and the Xerox Foundation for their enlightened support of the arts.

A.C.T. Friends (l. to r.) Roger and Sandra Dubick, Irving and Shirley Leake, and Marilyn Donav.

A.C.T. NEEDS YOU
Friends of A.C.T., the volunteer organization supporting the American Conservatory Theatre, is seeking new members as the season continues. Members work behind the scenes in a variety of creative activities that provide important help for A.C.T. in many phases of the company’s operation.

An enthusiastic network of volunteers representing diverse age groups and backgrounds, the Friends of A.C.T. prides itself on supporting a theatre whose work enhances life in the Bay Area. For information about joining, call (415) 771-3880.

YOUR TABLE IS READY
The Lower Lounge, A.C.T.’s downstairs lobby, adds food service to its beverage complement for the first time this season.

A light pre-theatre plate is now available, offering cold cuts, cheeses, baguette and fresh fruit or vegetable garnish. It can serve as an hors d’oeuvre tray when shared by several people or a more substantial snack for one or two. Pastries are also on sale.

In addition, cocktail service, beers, wines, soft drinks and coffee drinks are on the menu.

The Lower Lounge will open at 7 p.m. prior to evening performances and at 5 p.m. on matinee days, with service continuing through the last intermission.

For convenient intermission service, the staff recommends ordering and paying for drinks prior to curtain time. When you return at intermission, your drinks will be waiting for you on a reserved table bearing your name.

PROLOGUE TO A DILEMMA
Directed by Carlin

Carlin will talk about her new production of Bernard Shaw’s comedy about the medi- cal profession’s private practices and answer questions from the audience. Program notes are usually about an hour in length. They are held in the Geary Theatre, and all are welcome to attend.

THE A.C.T. 400
This season, for the first time, San Francisco’s Cleo Faulkner and the Friends of A.C.T. are offering a premium subscription plan called The A.C.T. 400. The plan offers subscribers the opportunity to attend four special parties during the 1986-87 season, in addition to their subscription performances, as part of a special Thursday evening series. Each of the pre-theatre parties will be held at a different and unusual locale, to encourage subscribers to make new theatre-going friends while they enjoy the new shows on the season schedule.

Serving as Executive hosts, along with Mrs. Faulkner, are Mr. and Mrs. Cesar Belli. The Executive Committee includes Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Davies Lewis, Maureen Love, Michael T. Jackson, Professor Thanasis Mskaloletic, Ann Furbush, and Margarette Hesser. Nicole Lambo is serving as assistant to the committee.

Complete information, including prices and schedules, is available from Cleo Faulkner, (415) 567-6101, or 771-3880.

HALF-PRICE TIX FOR STUDENTS
Students may purchase available seats in advance at half-price for all regular A.C.T. repertory performances at the Geary this season. With valid current student identification, the bearer is entitled to buy two tickets at the special price. Student tickets may be purchased (1) in person at the Geary box office; (2) by mail, if the check or money order is accompanied by a clear photocopy of valid student ID in the same name that appears on the check; (3) charged to Visa, MasterCard or American Express cards, in which case the valid student ID must be shown at the box office when the tickets are picked up.

ACT55
A.C.T. TURNS TWENTY-ONE
Opening Night, 1986

A.C.T. alumna Nancy Hamilton (left) congratulates "Sweeney" star Buzz Mahler at the opening night party in honor of her 20th year with the company. (Photo by John Lemberg)

Richard Carlsen (left) and Gallie Chairman Nancy Bevins, both members of A.C.T.'s Board of Trustees, look on as design intern Bruce Hill sketches the opening night party in progress.

Steve Silver (left), designer of the October 4 season premiere show, greats first-nighter Cyril Magen, whose gift of $50,000 helped to underwrite production costs of the opening show of the 1986-87 season.

If your kids think all heroes have to be as tough as Rambo, it's time they discovered A.C.T.'s A Christmas Carol

See Ebenezer Scrooge, Bob Cratchit, Tiny Tim and the Ghosts of Christmas come alive in this highly acclaimed production of the Charles Dickens' classic by the American Conservatory Theatre. Bring the whole family to enjoy the warmth and cheer of one of San Francisco's great holiday traditions. Performances run Dec. 3-27. Call now for preferred seating.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>December</th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>22 23 24</td>
<td>25 26 27</td>
<td>28 29 30</td>
<td>31 1 2 3</td>
<td>4 5 6 7</td>
<td>8 9 10 11</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Address</th>
<th>City</th>
<th>State</th>
<th>Zip</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Bus. Phone</th>
<th>Home Phone</th>
<th>1st Date</th>
<th>2nd Date</th>
<th>Section</th>
<th>No. Tickets</th>
<th>Price</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

CHARGE BY PHONE CALL 415/673-6440

A.C.T. Box Office, 420 Geary St., S.F., CA 94102
Richard Carron (left) and Gale Chairman Nancy Beitz, both members of A.C.T.'s Board of Trustees, look on as design intern Brian Hill sketches the opening night party in progress.

Steve Silver, designer of the October 4 season premiere show, gave first-nighter Cyril Magen, whose gift of $25,000 helped to underwrite production costs of the opening show of the 1986-87 season.

A.C.T. TURNS TWENTY-ONE
Opening Night, 1986

A.C.T. alumni Harry Hamlin (left) congratulates "Sweeney" star Andy Jackson on the opening night party at the post-performance party.
WHO'S WHO AT A.C.T.

TONY AMENDOLA is best known to Bay Area audiences as a resident artist at Berkeley Repertory Theatre, where he recently performed the roles of Jack Henry Abbott in In the Belly of the Beast and Malvolio in Twelfth Night and directed the current production Night of the Iguana. For the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival last summer he appeared as Coriolanus and directed The Tempest. He also directed A Midsummer Night's Dream for Oakland's Oregon Shakespearean Festival. As a resident actor with Berkeley Rep for the past six seasons he has been seen in Otherwise Engaged, American Buffalo, The Marginal Man, A Kiss in the Dark, and Cathayan Stage in Delhi, for which he received a Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle Award. Also this year he will appear in the San Francisco Opera's production of Porgy and Bess. Mr. Amendola is married to actress Kathleen Bradley. They recently moved to Los Angeles and are now living in Hollywood.

RICHARD BUTTERFIELD, who once appeared as the soldier in Sunday in the Park with George, has recently returned to San Francisco and will be appearing in the current production of Moliere's Tartuffe at A.C.T. and is also appearing at the West Coast Premiere of A Christmas Carol at the West Coast Playhouse. He has also performed in the Bay Area with the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, where he was seen as Nemmy in The Merry Wives of Windsor, and in the San Francisco Opera's production of Porgy and Bess. Mr. Butterfield is a graduate of Stanford University and has appeared in a number of Bay Area productions, including Twelfth Night, A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Importance of Being Earnest. He is also a member of the Actor's Equity Association.

PETER BRADBURY is a third year student in the advanced training program. While a student at A.C.T., he has performed in a number of productions, including The Tempest, Twelfth Night, and A Midsummer Night's Dream. He has also directed a production of Much Ado About Nothing at the University of California, Berkeley. His other credits include The Importance of Being Earnest, The School for Scandal, and The Merry Wives of Windsor. He is currently working on a new play, "The Gilded Lily," which he hopes to produce in the near future. He is also a member of the Actors' Equity Association.

NANCY CARLIN returns to A.C.T. for her second season. She performed most recently with the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, where she played Hermione in The Tempest, Cordelia in The Winter's Tale, and Beatrice in Much Ado About Nothing. She has also appeared in a number of productions in New York City, including The Taming of the Shrew, The Taming of the Shrew, and The Two Gentlemen of Verona. She is currently working on a new play, "The Gilded Lily," which she hopes to produce in the near future. She is also a member of the Actors' Equity Association.

DREW EISHELMER attended A.C.T.'s Advanced Training Program in 1975-76, and is a member of the Actors' Equity Association. He has appeared in a number of productions in the San Francisco Bay Area, including The Tempest, Twelfth Night, and A Midsummer Night's Dream. He is currently working on a new play, "The Gilded Lily," which he hopes to produce in the near future. He is also a member of the Actors' Equity Association.

GINA FERRALL is a graduate of A.C.T.'s advanced training program and appeared in the Geary Theatre's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Merry Wives of Windsor. She is currently working on a new play, "The Gilded Lily," which she hopes to produce in the near future. She is also a member of the Actors' Equity Association.
WHÓ'S WHO AT A.C.T.

TONY AMENDOLA is best known to Bay Area audiences as a resident artist at Berkeley Repertory Theatre, where he recently performed the roles of Jack Henry Abbott in In the Belly of the Beast and Malvolio in Twelfth Night and directed the current production Night of the Groom. For the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival last summer he appeared as Coriolanus and directed The Tempest. He also directed A Midsummer Night's Dream for Ashland's Oregon Shakespearean Festival. As resident actor, he has been seen in numerous plays, including The Rocky Horror Show, Angel Street, and Deathtrap. His acting credits include the title role in The Caucasian Chalk Circle. He is a member of the Actors' Equity Association and the League of American Theatres and Producers. He is currently appearing in the San Francisco repertory company's production of The House of the Dead.

NANCY CARLIN returns to A.C.T. for her second season. She performed most recently with the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, where she played Iolanthe in The Yeomen of the Guard and Queen Ado in The Merry Wives of Windsor. Her other credits include the title role in The Tale of a Tub and the role of Mrs. Malaprop in The Rivals. She is a member of the Actors' Equity Association and the League of American Theatres and Producers. She is currently appearing in the San Francisco repertory company's production of The House of the Dead.

RICHARD BUTTERFIELD, who appeared as the soldier in Sunday in the Park with George, has recently moved to Los Angeles and is currently performing in the musical revue The Marvelous Wonderettes. He is a member of the Actors' Equity Association and the League of American Theatres and Producers. He is currently appearing in the San Francisco repertory company's production of The House of the Dead.

PETER BRADBURY is a third year student in the advanced training program. While a student at A.C.T., he performed the roles of Lear in King Lear, Measle in The Comedy of Errors, and Young Man in The Royal Family. He is currently appearing in the San Francisco repertory company's production of The House of the Dead.

PETER DONAT joined A.C.T. in 1985. He was born in Nova Scotia, attended the Yale Drama School, and is currently appearing in the San Francisco repertory company's production of The House of the Dead.

GINA FERRALL is a graduate of A.C.T.'s advanced training program and appeared in the Geary Theatre stage in productions of Cat Among the Pigeons, A Christmas Carol, and The Turn of the Screw. She is currently appearing in the San Francisco repertory company's production of The House of the Dead.
Theatre and Montana's Shakespeare in the Parks. Performing on the New York stage, she was Emily in All Nighter at the New Arts Theda- and, while in New York, also engaged in fashion modeling, a pursuit she has continued on a freelance basis since her return to the Bay Area. With her parents, director/teacher Mike Ferrall and actress Mariann Valentoni Ferrall, she is co-owner of the Joel Robe Co. of San Francisco

TIMOTHY GREER joins the company this year to appear in Sunday in the Park With George, A Christmas Carol and Basin in 1987. A third-year student in the Advanced Training Program, his studio performances include the roles of Angelo in Measure for Measure, Peter Lawrence in Romeo and Juliet, Saturn in Hamlet and Judas Emmerson in Lydie Brito. While a member of the Texas-based Park Boulevard Players, he appeared in Black Comedy, Goodbye, Once Upon a Mattress and The Adirondacks. Mr. Greer holds a B.F.A. in acting from the Univers- ty of Texas./Austin.

RUTH KOBART was a company member during A.C.T.'s first San Francisco season in 1967. Now in her sixth season with A.C.T., she appeared in Britta, Thinner Criminal, House of Bernarda Alba, Threepenny Opera and the 1978 production of Hotel Paradiso. Since that time she has been a member of the first national tour of Annie, received a Tony nomination for her performance in A Funny Thing Happened on the ACT30

BARRY KRAFT is a charter member of the company. In 1967, he appeared in the A.C.T. production of King Lear at the Pittsburgh Playhouse as well as with in Sydney. The Crucible and Orson Welles during the company's 1967-68 season in San Francisco. Most recently, his work has been seen at The Empty Space in Seattle and in the San Jose Repertory Company's productions of Cyra de Bergerac as Cyrano, Edward Harrings' 'Tis Pity She's a Whore in Boston and in Boston Play on Jim under the direction of Joe Carlin. A veteran of 36 of Shakespeare's 29 plays, Mr. Kraft has spent 20 of the last 20 summers acting in Shakespearean festivals around the country, including the O.M. Cliburn Theatre's San Diego Shakespeare Festival, the Marin Shakespeare Festival, the California Shakespeare Festival, the Colorado Shakespeare Festival, the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival and the Oregon Shakespeare Festival. During the past six seasons at OSF in Ashland, Oregon he per- formed the role of John of Gaunt in Richard II, Beneke in Love's Labour's Lost, Hotspur in Henry V1, Pole I, Mark Antony in Julius Caesar, and Lear in The Winter's Tale among others. Mr. Kraft has also taught Shakespeare at various educational institutions.

LIAM O'BRIEN recently came to the attention of Bay Area audiences for his performance as Billy in the acclaimed production of Alan Bowsey's Shoreline and Billy at the Magic Theatre. Since his initial appearance in 1987, Liam has been a member of the company. Liam's exceptional talent was evident in his performance as Billy, and his portrayal of the character was widely praised. In addition to his work on stage, Liam has also appeared in numerous television productions, including "The Andy Griffith Show" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." His dedication to his craft and his passion for acting have earned him a reputation as one of the leading actors in the Bay Area. Liam currently resides in San Francisco, where he continues to work on various projects and to share his love of acting with others.

STEPHEN ROCKSWELL joins the company this year as a third-year student in the Advanced Training Program. For the past two years he has appeared in several A.C.T. studio productions, including "The Three Sisters" as Chebyukin, "A Life" as Edgar, "Tartuffe" as Orgon, "All's Well That Ends Well" as Silvertongue and "As You Like It" as Rosalind. Last summer at the Valley Shakespeare Festival, Mr. Rockswell performed the roles of Gower in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and the Duke in "As You Like It." A graduate of Vassar College, he has also worked for the Scottish Opera in New Hampshire, the Quig Theatre in New York City, and at Shakespeare's Globe, where he served as an assistant stage manager under director James Lapine. In the first production of "Macbeth" at the Globe, Mr. Rockswell will also appear in "A Christmas Carol," "The Winter's Tale" and "The Tempest." Theatre and Montta's Shakespeare in the Parks. Performing on the New York stage, she was Emily in All Nighter at the New Arts Theatre and, while in New York, also engaged in fashion modeling. a pursuit she has continued on a freelance basis since her return to the Bay Area. With her parents, director/teacher Mike Ferrall and actress Marian Walters Ferrall, she is co-owner of the Joel Robo Co. of San Francisco.

TIMOTHY GREER joined the company this year to appear in Sunday in the Park With George, A Christmas Carol and Baskin in 1977. A third-year student in the Advanced Training Program, his studio performances include the roles of Angelo in Measure for Measure, Petrarch in Romeo and Juliet, Seton in Hadrian and Jude Emerson in Lyric Beat. While a member of the San Francisco Park Boulevard Players, he appeared in Black Comedy, Godspell, Once Upon a Mattress and The Alchemist. Mr. Greer holds a B.A. in acting from the University of Texas/Austin.

RUTH KOBART was a company member during A.C.T.'s first San Francisco season in 1967. Now in her sixth season with A.C.T., she appeared in Brittain's Thinner Criminal, House of Bernarda Alba, Three Penny Opera and the 1975 production of Hotel Paradiso. Since that time she has been a member of the first national tour of Arie. received a Tony nomination for her performance in A Funny Thing Happened on the ACT30

BARRY KRAFT is a charter member of the company. In 1981, he appeared in the A.C.T. production of King Lear in the Pittsburgh Playhouse as well as Under Milkwood, The Crucible and Our Boys dur the company's 1967-68 season in San Francisco. Most recently, his work has been seen at The Empty Space in Seattle and in the San Jose Repertory Company's productions of Cyrano de Bergerac as Cyrano, Edward Harris' 1777 Creature as Iken in Boston Play on Jim under the direction of Joe Carlin. A veteran of 54 of Shakespeare's plays, Mr. Kraft has spent 20 of the last 26 summers acting in Shakespearean festivals across the country, including the OM Gicle Theatre's San Diego Shakespeare Festival, the Marin Shakespeare Festival, the California Shakespeare Festival, the Colorado Shakespeare Festival, the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival and the Oregon Shakespeare Festival. During the past six seasons at OSF in Ashland, Oregon he performed the roles of John of Gaunt in Richard II, Berowne in Love's Labour's Lost, Hotspur in Henry IV, Part I, Mark Antony in Julius Caesar, and Leontes in The Winter's Tale among others. Mr. Kraft has also taught Shakespeare at various educational institutions.

Liam O'Brien recently came to the attention of Bay Area audiences for his performance as Billy in the acclaimed production of Alan Bowley's Show and Billy at the Magic Theatre. Closing after six months and 128 performances, Sharon and Billy became the longest running show in the twenty year history of the Magic. Other local performances include Douglas in The Crocodile at the First at Theatre San Ano, and Wight in The Stingy Boat at the Berkeley Repertory Theatre and the male understudy in Time Perry Opess at the Eureka Theatre. In 1981 he won an award for Best Actor for Mr. O'Brien received his training at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles and the Drama Studio of London in Berkeley.

WILLIAM PATTERSON is now in his 25th season with A.C.T. Having joined the company in 1967 to play James Tyrone in Long Day's Journey into Night. A graduate of Boston University, Mr. Patterson served in the army for four years before starting his professional acting career in a summer stock company. He appeared for at least part of every season for twenty years at the Cleveland Play House, taking time out for roles in television, films and four national tours with his own one-man shows which he has performed in 52 states of the Union and in the U.S. Embassy in London. His major roles for A.C.T. include Yos SOLDIER'S TAKE IT WITH YOU, Jansen, The Threepenny (U.S.S.R., tour), The Cripple, All the Way Home (Japan tour), Burt, Codd, and Happy Endings, The Gin Game, Dial "M" for Murder and Printing Charley. Last season he appeared in Olympia Conwy, the 90th anniversary of A Christmas Carol, a role he originated; You Never Can Tell and The Lady's Not For Burning. He presently serves as a member of the San Francisco Arts Commission and is a newly-elected member of the board of Trustees of A.C.T.

STEPHEN ROCKWELL joined the company this year as a third-year student in the Advanced Training Program. For the past two years he has appeared in several A.C.T. studio productions, including The Three Sisters as Chechitsyn, Anya Lert at Edgar, Taffy as Orgon, All's Wellman as Nat Miller and Je Leg as Freddie. Last summer at the Valley Shakespeare Festival he performed the roles of Grahame in The Merchant of Venice and the Duke in Twelfth Night. A graduate of Vassar College with an A.B. in Drama, he has also worked for the Peterborough Players in New Hampshire, the Qunit Theatre in New York City, and at Playwright's Horizon, where he served as an assistant stage manager under director Jules Lapine in the first production of March of Fools. Mr. Rockwell will also appear in A Christmas Carol, Segall and Faustus in Hell later this season.
LANNY STEPHENS is a new company member and a third year student in the Advanced Training Program. While at A.C.T., she performed in studio productions as Olga in Three Sisters, Dorina in Tartuffe, General in King Lear and Martha Bell in The Physicist. She has appeared most recently as Sister in Paul Pelosi's Looking to the Dark for, directed by Robert Woodard at the Bay Area Playwrights Festival last summer. A graduate of the University of Texas at Austin with a B.A. in Drama, Miss Stephens has also appeared at the Golden Spike Repertory Theatre, the University of Texas Summer Repertory Theatre and in several university mainstage productions.

SYDNEY WALKER is a forty-year veteran of stage, film and television, having performed in some 276 productions since 1960. The Philadelphia native trained with Jasper Dexter and financial officer. Prior to his most recent position as senior advertising associate specializing in corporate communications at Wyrren/Vaughn & Associates, he served for two years as a deputy director of programs at the California Arts Council, overseeing the awarding of $14 million in grants to more than 800 artists and arts institutions. From 1979 through 1983, he headed John Sullivan Communications in Lander, WY. In the late 1990s, he spent three seasons at Los Angeles’ Mark Taper Forum, where he produced and directed plays in the theater’s Forum Laboratory and directed on its main stage. His work in film includes educational projects, three special films for national Emmy Award broadcasts and commercial features. He was a member of the Advisory Board for last summer’s San Francisco New Vaudeville Festival and, in association with the Magic Theatre, produced The Detective, a collaboration between Joseph Charkin and Vaudeville Nouveau. In 1985, among his writings are The National Outdoor Leadership School’s Wilderness Guide, published by Simon and Schuster in 1985, and numerous articles for major magazines and newspapers. He is married to Monick Buchwald-Sullivan, an attorney. They have two children.

DIREKTORS, DESIGNERS AND STAFF

EDWARD HASTINGS (Artistic Director), a graduate of Yale College and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and a founding member of A.C.T., whose productions of Chekhov’s Antip and One Enemy were seen during the company’s first two San Francisco seasons, has staged many shows for A.C.T. since 1963, including The York History, The House of Blue Leaves, All the Way Home and The Mind of July. In 1977, he founded the A.C.T. Plays-in-Progress program devoted to the development and production of new writing. During the summer of 1985, Mr. Hastings served as a resident director at the Eugene O’Neill Playwright’s Conference in Connecticut and taught acting in 1984 at the Shanghai Drama Institute as part of the Theatre Bridge Program between A.C.T. and the Shanghai Theatre. Off Broadway, he co-produced The Satinette of Margery Kemp and Epitaph for George Dillon and directed the national company of the Broadway musical

Other! He staged the American production of Shakespeare’s Romeo starring Sir Michael Redgrave, directed the Australian premiere of The Heir at Baltimore, and re-staged his A.C.T. production of Sam Shepard’s Buried Child in Serbo-Croatian at the Yugoslav Dramatic Theatre in Belgrade. He has recently been a guest director at the Guthrie Theatre, Seattle Repertory Theatre, Denver Center Theatre Company, San Francisco Opera Center and Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Earlier this year, he directed The Tempest for the Oregon Shakespearean Festival and Off-Centre for San Jose Repertory Company.

JOHN SULLIVAN (Managing Director) joins A.C.T. as part of the new team that will lead the company into its third decade. With a background encompassing arts administration, fundraising, theatre production, directing, writing and extensive experience in the communications field, he is A.C.T.’s chief administrative at the Hedg受贿 Theatre in New York, Pennsylvania. From 1960 to 1969, a leading actor with the 41st Repertory Company in New York City under the direction of Ellis Rabb. He also appeared for three seasons with the Lincoln Center Repertory Company under Jules Irving. In 1974, Mr. Walker joined A.C.T. and has since performed in twenty-eight productions including The Matchmaker (U.S.R. tour), Paris Hilton, The Circle, The National Enquirer, A Christmas Carol, The 39 Steps, and also in the film Love Story, and performed the voice of Pai Pea in the television movie, The Eek! Adventure. Mr. Walker was narrator for the KQED-TV series New York Master Class and teaches Auditioning in A.C.T.’s Conservatory.

J. STEVEN WHITE has been with A.C.T. for ten seasons, in a variety of capacities. He has excelled as an actor, director, choreographer, administrator and director. Mr. White traveled with A.C.T. to the Soviet Union in 1974 and to Japan in 1979, and spent last season at the Denver Center Theatre Company as Artistic Director. As an actor, he has been seen in twenty-seven A.C.T. productions, as a teacher and administrator, he has been active in A.C.T.’s Conservatory, most recently as director of the 1984 Summer Training Company. He is currently Dean of Academic Affairs in the Conservatory. In addition to teaching stage combat, Mr. White has been the fight choreographer for sixty-one productions, including the San Francisco Ballet’s production of Romeo and Juliet, directed by Michael Smuin, and A.C.T.’s Cyrano de Bergerac. His directing credits include the Valley Shakespeare Festival production of Caelestron in Caelestron at the Palisades Winery; six A.C.T. Playhouse productions, and Nonsense by Vanya and the Western Stage Company’s The Importance of Being Earnest.

LANNY STEPHENS is a new company member and a third year student in the Advanced Training Program. While at A.C.T., she performed in studio productions as Olga in Three Sisters, Dorina in Tartuffe, General in King Lear and Martha Bell in The Physicist. She has appeared most recently as Sister in Paul Pelosi’s Looking to the Dark for, directed by Robert Woodard at the Bay Area Playwrights Festival last summer. A graduate of the University of Texas at Austin with a B.A. in Drama, Miss Stephens has also appeared at the Golden Spike Repertory Theatre, the University of Texas Summer Repertory Theatre and in several university mainstage productions.

HOWARD SWAIN came to San Francisco in 1976 from the University of Idaho. Following a tour with the New Shakespeare Company he worked with the Magic Theatre, Buela Theatre, One Act Theatre, San Francisco Repertory Company and Overture Theatre. In 1982 he joined the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival and has also performed for the Berkeley Irish Theatre, San Jose Repertory Company and the Berkeley Repertory Theatre where he appeared as Cousin in The Teeth of Orin, receiving a Bay Area Critics’ Circle Award for best performance in a musical. He joins the company following Oregon Shakespearean Festival productions of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' and 'The Trestle as Callian. Mr. Swain's other credit include roles in 'Pinter' in 'Crier and Hill Street Blues' on network television, as well as the upcoming film 'Cryer 1960'. He is happy to be back in San Francisco and is especially honored to be working with A.C.T.
LANNY STEPHENS is a new company member and a third year student in the Advanced Training Program. While at A.C.T., she performed in studio productions as Olga in Three Sisters, Darline in Tartuffe, Generel in King Lear and Martha Bell in The Physicists. She has appeared most recently as Sister in Paul Bunyan’s Looking in the Dark for directed by Robert Woodruff at the Bay Area Playwrights Festival last summer, a graduate of the University of Texas/Austin with a B.A. in Drama, Miss Stephens has also appeared at the Golden Spike Repertory Theater, the University of Texas Summer Repertory Theatre and in several university mainstage productions.

SYDNEY WALKER is a forty-year veteran of stage, film and television, having performed in some 256 productions since 1946. The Philadelphia native trained with Jasper Deeter and financial officer. Prior to his most recent position as senior advertising associate specializing in corporate communications at Women/Vantage & Associates, he served for two years as a deputy director of programs at the California Arts Council, overseeing the awarding of $34 million in grants to more than 800 artists and arts institutions. From 1979 through 1983, he headed John Sullivan Communications in Lander, WY. In the late 1990s, he spent three seasons at Los Angeles’ Mark Taper Forum, where he produced and directed plays in the theatre’s Forum Laboratory and directed on its main stage. His work in films includes educational projects, three special films for national Emmy Award broadcasts and commercial features. He was a member of the Advisory Board for last June’s San Francisco New Vaudeville Festival and, in association with the Magic Theatre, produced The Detective, a collaboration between Joseph Chaikin and Vaudeville Noveau. In 1985, among his writings are The National Outdoor Leadership School’s Wilderness Guide, published by Simon and Schuster in 1985, and numerous articles for major magazines and newspapers. He is married to Monica Buchwald Sullivan, an attorney. They have two children.

DIRECTIONS, DESIGNERS AND STAFF

EDWARD HASTINGS (Artistic Director), a graduate of Yale College and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and a founding member of A.C.T., whose productions of Chekhov’s And Our Sons were seen during the company’s first two San Francisco seasons, has staged many shows for A.C.T. since 1963, including The Tree of Your Life, The House of Blue Leaves, All the Way Home and Threepenny. In 1971, he founded the A.C.T. Plays-in-Progress program devoted to the development and production of new writing. During the summer of 1983, Mr. Hastings served as a resident director at the Eugene O’Neill Playwrights’ Conference in Connecticut and taught acting in 1984 at the Shanghai Drama Institute as part of the Theatre Bridge Program between A.C.T. and the Shanghai Theatre. Off Broadway, he co-produced The Satinists of Margery Kemp and Epiphany for George Dillon and directed the national company of the Broadway musical

Off! He staged the American production of Shakespeare’s Twelfth Night starring Sir Michael Redgrave, directed the Australian premiere of The Her J. Balthrop, and restaged his A.C.T. production of Sam Shepard’s Buried Child in Serbo-Croatian at the Yugoslav Dramatic Theatre in Belgrade. He has recently been a guest director at the Guthrie Theatre, Seattle Repertory Theatre, Denver Center Theatre Company, San Francisco Opera Center and Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Earlier this year, he directed The Tempest for the Oregon Shakespearean Festival and Off! Transfer for San Jose Repertory Company.

JOHN SULLIVAN (Managing Director) joins A.C.T. as part of the new team that will lead the company into its third decade. With a background encompassing arts administration, fundraising, theatre production, directing, writing and extensive experience in the communications field, he is A.C.T.’s chief administrative officer. Prior to his most recent position as senior advertising associate specializing in corporate communications at Women/Vantage & Associates, he served for two years as a deputy director of programs at the California Arts Council, overseeing the awarding of $34 million in grants to more than 800 artists and arts institutions. From 1979 through 1983, he headed John Sullivan Communications in Lander, WY. In the late 1990s, he spent three seasons at Los Angeles’ Mark Taper Forum, where he produced and directed plays in the theatre’s Forum Laboratory and directed on its main stage. His work in films includes educational projects, three special films for national Emmy Award broadcasts and commercial features. He was a member of the Advisory Board for last June’s San Francisco New Vaudeville Festival and, in association with the Magic Theatre, produced The Detective, a collaboration between Joseph Chaikin and Vaudeville Noveau. In 1985, among his writings are The National Outdoor Leadership School’s Wilderness Guide, published by Simon and Schuster in 1985, and numerous articles for major magazines and newspapers. He is married to Monica Buchwald Sullivan, an attorney. They have two children.

EDWARD HASTINGS (Artistic Director), a graduate of Yale College and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and a founding member of A.C.T., whose productions of Chekhov’s And Our Sons were seen during the company’s first two San Francisco seasons, has staged many shows for A.C.T. since 1963, including The Tree of Your Life, The House of Blue Leaves, All the Way Home and Threepenny. In 1971, he founded the A.C.T. Plays-in-Progress program devoted to the development and production of new writing. During the summer of 1983, Mr. Hastings served as a resident director at the Eugene O’Neill Playwrights’ Conference in Connecticut and taught acting in 1984 at the Shanghai Drama Institute as part of the Theatre Bridge Program between A.C.T. and the Shanghai Theatre. Off Broadway, he co-produced The Satinists of Margery Kemp and Epiphany for George Dillon and directed the national company of the Broadway musical

Off! He staged the American production of Shakespeare’s Twelfth Night starring Sir Michael Redgrave, directed the Australian premiere of The Her J. Balthrop, and restaged his A.C.T. production of Sam Shepard’s Buried Child in Serbo-Croatian at the Yugoslav Dramatic Theatre in Belgrade. He has recently been a guest director at the Guthrie Theatre, Seattle Repertory Theatre, Denver Center Theatre Company, San Francisco Opera Center and Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Earlier this year, he directed The Tempest for the Oregon Shakespearean Festival and Off! Transfer for San Jose Repertory Company.

JOHN SULLIVAN (Managing Director) joins A.C.T. as part of the new team that will lead the company into its third decade. With a background encompassing arts administration, fundraising, theatre production, directing, writing and extensive experience in the communications field, he is A.C.T.’s chief administrative officer. Prior to his most recent position as senior advertising associate specializing in corporate communications at Women/Vantage & Associates, he served for two years as a deputy director of programs at the California Arts Council, overseeing the awarding of $34 million in grants to more than 800 artists and arts institutions. From 1979 through 1983, he headed John Sullivan Communications in Lander, WY. In the late 1990s, he spent three seasons at Los Angeles’ Mark Taper Forum, where he produced and directed plays in the theatre’s Forum Laboratory and directed on its main stage. His work in films includes educational projects, three special films for national Emmy Award broadcasts and commercial features. He was a member of the Advisory Board for last June’s San Francisco New Vaudeville Festival and, in association with the Magic Theatre, produced The Detective, a collaboration between Joseph Chaikin and Vaudeville Noveau. In 1985, among his writings are The National Outdoor Leadership School’s Wilderness Guide, published by Simon and Schuster in 1985, and numerous articles for major magazines and newspapers. He is married to Monica Buchwald Sullivan, an attorney. They have two children.

DIRECTIONS, DESIGNERS AND STAFF

EDWARD HASTINGS (Artistic Director), a graduate of Yale College and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and a founding member of A.C.T., whose productions of Chekhov’s And Our Sons were seen during the company’s first two San Francisco seasons, has staged many shows for A.C.T. since 1963, including The Tree of Your Life, The House of Blue Leaves, All the Way Home and Threepenny. In 1971, he founded the A.C.T. Plays-in-Progress program devoted to the development and production of new writing. During the summer of 1983, Mr. Hastings served as a resident director at the Eugene O’Neill Playwrights’ Conference in Connecticut and taught acting in 1984 at the Shanghai Drama Institute as part of the Theatre Bridge Program between A.C.T. and the Shanghai Theatre. Off Broadway, he co-produced The Satinists of Margery Kemp and Epiphany for George Dillon and directed the national company of the Broadway musical Off! He staged the American production of Shakespeare’s Twelfth Night starring Sir Michael Redgrave, directed the Australian premiere of The Her J. Balthrop, and restaged his A.C.T. production of Sam Shepard’s Buried Child in Serbo-Croatian at the Yugoslav Dramatic Theatre in Belgrade. He has recently been a guest director at the Guthrie Theatre, Seattle Repertory Theatre, Denver Center Theatre Company, San Francisco Opera Center and Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Earlier this year, he directed The Tempest for the Oregon Shakespearean Festival and Off! Transfer for San Jose Repertory Company.
DENNIES POWERS (Director of Communications) joined A.C.T. in 1982 after six years at the Oakland Tribune, where he was Book Review Editor and Associate Drama Editor, and a season at Stanford Repertory Theatre, where he was Associate Managing Director. After serving as A.C.T.'s Press Representative, he became General Director William Stull's executive assistant and, later, Drama Critic and Repertory Director, collaborating with Ball on new translations or adaptations of such classics as Oedipus Rex, Cyrano de Bergerac, The Cherry Orchard and The Burnt Out Gentleman. With Leonard Williams, he adapted A Christmas Carol for the stage, and the production has been presented annually by A.C.T. since 1976. As Director of Communications, he provides writing, and editorial supervision for several departments as well as working with Artistic Director Edward Hastings on season planning, play selection and casting. His 1979 dramatization of Dracula was presented at the Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts and subsequently produced by several theater companies. In 1985, he and Williams wrote Christmas Miracles, which had its premiere at the Denver Center Theatre Company. Both Qwone and A Christmas Carol have been produced for television. Mr. Powers is a member of the 1986 National Endowment for the Arts Theatre Panel and the Dramatists Guild.

JESSE HOLLIS (Scenery) joined A.C.T. for the first time last fall to design scenery for The Magik Kid and Open Campus. Prior to his work with A.C.T., he provided scenery for the Arts from the University of the West, Vista, where he was also Department Chair at The Performing Arts Center. His recent work includes the production of The Magik Kid at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, where he has also designed scenery for The Magik Kid and at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, where he has also designed scenery for Open Campus and Open Campus. Most recently Mr. Duarte designed lighting for The Normal Heart at Berkeley Repertory Theatre. His work has been seen at the New York Shakespeare Festival, San Jose Rep, Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Mr. Duarte holds an M.F.A. in film production from UCSC.

JAMES HAIRO (Production Manager) began his career on Broadway working for the famed Eric Le Gallier's National Repertory Theatre. Among the productions he has designed costumes for are The New York Shakespeare Festival, the Pershing Square Outdoor Players and the San Francisco Opera. In recent years, he has also designed costumes for the San Francisco Ballet, San Francisco Opera, Civic Repertory of Walnut Creek, Contra Costa Music Theater, West Bay Opera of Palo Alto, Opera Piccola of San Francisco and the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival.

FRITZA KNUDSEN (Costumes) continues a long association with A.C.T. After earning a B.A. in costume design from California State University (Sacramento), she worked as a costume designer for the University of California and served as Assistant Shop Supervisor for the Blackberry Iris. She has been a member of the Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle Award for her work on Open Campus. She was the recipient of a Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle Award for her work on Open Campus.

DEREK DUARTE (Lighting) returns to A.C.T. for a second season as resident lighting designer after designing seven productions last season, including Open Campus and Passion. Most recently Mr. Duarte designed lighting for The Normal Heart at Berkeley Repertory Theatre. His work has been seen at the New York Shakespeare Festival, San Jose Rep, Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Mr. Duarte has degrees in Political Science and Theatre Arts from UCSC.

ALICE SMITH (Stage Manager) began her career at A.C.T. as a stage management intern. In her eighth season, she has been the company's executive producer, coordinating all aspects of the company's productions, including casting, marketing, and production management. She has been the director of the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival, the San Francisco Opera, the San Francisco Symphony, and the San Francisco Ballet. She has also served as the company's executive producer, coordinating all aspects of the company's productions, including casting, marketing, and production management. She has been the director of the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival, the San Francisco Opera, the San Francisco Symphony, and the San Francisco Ballet. She has also served as the company's executive producer, coordinating all aspects of the company's productions, including casting, marketing, and production management. She has been the director of the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival, the San Francisco Opera, the San Francisco Symphony, and the San Francisco Ballet.
DENNIS POWERS (Diversity of Communications) joined A.C.T. in 1967 after six years at the Oakland Tribune, where he was Book Review Editor and Associate Digital Editor, and a season at Stanford Repertory Theatre, where he was Associate Managing Director. After serving as A.C.T. Press Representative, he became General Director William Hall's executive assistant and, later, Drama Director and Associate and Head of Repertory. During his 15 seasons at A.C.T., he worked on over 200 productions as a stage manager and ushers. He is also a member of the board of directors for the San Francisco Performing Arts Library and Archive. He has been a member of the A.C.T. board of directors for the past 20 years.

JAMES HARE (Production Manager) began his career on Broadway with the famed Eva Le Gallienne's National Repertory Theatre. Among the productions he managed were "The Moon's a Balloon, "The Trojan Women," and "The Devil and Daniel Webster." As a stage manager during the past two seasons he managed the Broadway production of "A Moon for the Misbegotten" and "The Caucasian Chalk Circle." His credits include "The Life," "The Milk Train Doesn't Stop There," and "The Shawshank Redemption." He has been a member of the A.C.T. board of directors for the past 10 years.

ERNESTO GARCIA (Stage Manager) has been with A.C.T. for 20 years. He is a member of the board of directors for the San Francisco Performing Arts Library and Archive. He has been a member of the A.C.T. board of directors for the past 10 years.

LAWRENCE HEECH (Conservatory Director) continues this year as head of A.C.T.'s Conservatory. In addition to staging productions at A.C.T., he has also served as resident director and director of Actor Training for the Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts in Santa Maria, California, where he taught acting credits include Merton, Major Barret and Be My Baby. This will be his 20th season with A.C.T. A graduate of the University of San Francisco and A.C.T.'s Advanced Training Program, Mr. Heech has developed numerous productions for the Play-In Progress Series and is an instructor in the Advanced Training Program. He has also been a member of the company since 1978, 14 years with A.C.T., including the National Health, The Visit, Buried Child, Night and Day, The Three Sisters, Happy Landings and The Heidi.
THE AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATRE

premieres

THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA

(1906)

by George Bernard Shaw

Directed by Joy Carlin
Scenery by Jesse Hollis
Costumes by Freita Knudsen
Lighting by Derek Duarte
Sound by Stephen LeGrand
Wigs by Rick Echols

Cast
(in order of appearance)

Reynolds: Liam O'Brien
Ennui: Ruth Kobart
Sir Colenso Raffles: Peter Dudek
Dr. Les Schatmacher: Drew Liebman
Sir Patrick Cullen: Sydney Walker
Dr. Cullen: Barry Krutt
Sir Ralph Bloomfield-Benington: William Paterson
Dr. Blackstone: Tony Amendola
Jennifer Dubedat: Nancy Carlin
Louis Dubedat: Howard Swain
Marie Timmel: Gianna Ferral
Waiter: Peter Bradley
Reporter: J. Steven White
Mr. Bundy: Stephen Rockwell

June, 1903

Act I: Dr. Colenso Raffles's consulting room
Act II: The terrace at the Star and Garter, Richmond
Act III: Dubedat's studio
Act IV: Dubedat's studio
Act V: A Bond Street picture gallery

There will be one intermission between acts two and three.

UNDERSTUDIES
Reynolds—Peter Bradley; Ennui—Kimberly LaMarque; Raffles—Frank Ottwell; Schatmacher—J. Steven White; Cullen—Joseph Bend; Cullen—Peter Bradley; Bloomfield-Benington—Lawrence Hecht; Blackstone—Stephen Rockwell; Dubedat—Timothy Corey; Marie Timmel—Laurie Stephens; Waiter—Timothy Green;
Reporter—Stephen Rockwell; Mr. Bundy—Peter Bradley

Stage Management: Alice Elliott Smith

The Company dedicates this production to the memory of Carol Teitel, a dear friend and a distinguished actress.

This production is made possible by generous gifts from the Simpson Paper Company and the Xerox Foundation.
THE AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATRE presents

THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA

(1906)

by George Bernard Shaw

Directed by Jay Carlin
Scenery by Jesse Hollis
Costumes by Fritha Knudsen
Lighting by Derek Duarte
Sound by Stephen LeGrand
Wigs by Rick Echols

Cast
(in order of appearance)

Reynolds: Liam O'Brien
Enny: Ruth Kohart
Sir Colenso Rugge: Tony Amendola
Dr. Leo Schutzmacher: Barry Knott
Sir Patrick Callen: Drew Labergh
Dr. Calter: Nancy Carlin
Sir Ralph Bloomfield-Benington: Howard Swain
Dr. Blankings: Gina Ferraii
jennifer Dubedat: Peter Bradford
Louis Dubedat: J. Steven White
Minnie Timmel: Stephen Rockwell
Waiter: Mr. Dandy

Mr. Dandy: Mr. Dandy

Niccolo: Peter Bradford

Act I: Dr. Colenso Rugge's consulting room
Act II: The terrace at the Star and Garter, Richmond
Act III: Dubedat's studio
Act IV: Dubedat's studio
Act V: A Bond Street picture gallery

There will be one interval between acts two and three.

UNDERSTUDIES

Reynolds—Peter Bradford; Enny—Kimberly LaMoger; Rugge—Frank Otvosky; Schutzmacher—J. Steven White; Callen—Joseph Bend; Calter—Peter Bradford; Bloomfield-Benington—Lawrence Helt; Blankings—Stephen Rockwell; Nancy—Robin Nardi; Dubedat—Timothy Green; Minnie Timmel—Lainey Stephens; Waiter—Timothy Green;

Repairs—Stephen Rockwell; Mr. Dandy—Peter Bradford

Stage Management: Alice Elliott Smith

The Company dedicates this production to the memory of Carol Teitel, a dear friend and a distinguished actress.

This production is made possible by generous gifts from the Simpson Paper Company and the Xerox Foundation.
From the Director's Notebook
by Joy Carlin

The story of the play is easily accessible. Funny and wicked, it would make a great episode of St. Elsewhere. A doctor is called upon to save the life of a genius/ eccentric with whose wife he has fallen in love. Conflict of interest? Moral anguish? Not really. Not for our Dr. Ridgeon.

Numerous satirical characterizations and mildly serious discussions, too, of morals and medical ethics. Hilarious shop talk among the doctors of their various medical disasters: "You remember Jane Marsh's arm?"

The play is a show. We would say: "Off the wall." The set should reflect this.

Shaw is telling us what happens when professionals are put into the position of being competing tragedians. Heard among fellow-actors: "I'd kill for that part!"

Reading about Stephen Porter's current New York production of Shaw's You Never Can Tell with Uta Hagen, Amanda Plummer in it, too. She wonders whose to put her heart when doing Shaw. She concludes, "The heart is in the mind." And vice-versa, say I.

Next to the wackiness in this play, which appeals to me greatly, my cast is a chief inspiration. Donat, Paterson, Walker, Kraft, Amendola, Eshein... a veritable Masterpiece Theatre cast for this master piece of theatre. Ruth Kobert, Liam O'Brien, Gina Ferrall, J. Steven White, Stephen Rockwell and Peter Bradbury in small scene-stealing parts (encourage ACTF8 from her husband's indifference, so she invests in her son's talent. Ah, mothers. That's another angle. What's motherly about Jennifer?

All the women in The Seagull are in love with men who, in their eyes, are creative geniuses. In his new Beyond Therapy, Christopher Durang (I know Durang has some spiritual connection to PBS!) has a character describe the love threads of the plot of The Seagull: "Mashe loves Konstantin; but Konstantin only loves Nina. Nina doesn't love Konstantin; but falls in love with Trigorin. Trigorin doesn't love Nina; but sort of loves Masha. Arkadina, who doesn't love anyone but herself. And Medvedenko loves Masha, but she only loves Konstantin, which is where we started out!"

In The Real Thing, Annie and Henry are each creative artists. The sexual revolution has arrived but the tormentingers say: "I use you because you love me. I love you, you say me.

Here's finally a reverse twist in the sexes: in Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, Ma is the creative "star" her clingers-on, mostly men in the music business, are bitching themselves to. What is in my own experience to play on here? Putting myself in the Godly hands of doctors? Definitely, repeatedly. Learning that the famous and gifted have weaknesses like the rest of us? Alas, yes. Falling in love with the artist at work? Story of my life.
From the Director's Notebook
by Joy Carlin

The story of the play is easily accessible. Funny and wicked, it would make a great episode of St. Elsewhere. A doctor is called upon to save the life of a genius/ scoundrel with whose wife he has fallen in love. Conflict of interest? Moral angst? Not really. Not for our Dr. Ridgeon.

Numerous satirical characterizations and mildly serious discussions, too, of morals and medical ethics. Hilarious shop talk among the doctors of their various medical disasters: “You remember Jane Marsh’s arm?”

The play is as good as we would say: “off the wall.” The set should reflect this: Shaw is telling us what happens when professionals are put into the position of being competitive tradespersons. Heard among fellow-actors: “I’d kill for that part!”

Reading about Stephen Porter’s current New York production of Shaw’s You Never Can Tell with Uma Hagen, Amanda Plummer in it, too. She wonders where to put her heart when doing Shaw. She concludes, “The heart is in the mind.” And vice-versa, say I.

Next to the wackiness in this play, which appeals to me greatly, my cast is a chief inspiration. Donat, Paterson, Walker, Kraft, Amendola, Estheman… a veritable Masterpiece Theatre cast for this master piece of theatre. Ruth Kobart, Liam O’Brien, Gina Ferrall, J. Steven White, Stephen Roberts and Peter Bradbury in small scene-stealing parts (encourage ACT38

Shaw at A.C.T. New Asher Book and Ken Rate in the 1985 production of "Miss and Mrs. Eshelman." (I mean—love me—loose reins). Nancy and Howard, with their new wave sensibilities are the linchpins—state of the art Shavianists of the 80’s.

Vocal music. Remind them all ad nauseam to do vocal warm-ups. The secret to doing Shaw, Albert Shanker, once told me, is breath control. Uma Hagen in two Shaw revivals in the last two seasons, reminds us that Shaw requires almost operatic lungs.

Jennifer Duhedat intrigues me. Like Sonia Teltow, like the fascinating and true stories of the wives of great men: Jane Carlyle, Mrs. Mill, Mrs. Dickens. What are their own names? I found my copy of Phyliss Rose’s Parallel Lines. Our heroine deliberately attaches herself to a man of genius. With her beauty, her encouragement, and her “little savings,” hopes to bring some charm and happiness into a struggling artist’s life. Shaw sees that Jennifer Duhedat gets to the top on her own terms. She not only inherits the entire oeuvre of her talented but thorny husband; she promises to be the living symbol of his immortality. She wholeheartedly accepts the legacy to carry on with her the atmosphere of wonder and romance that has always accompanied great art.

Which American women did this? (Wyeth’s model Helge.) And it is only something women do for men? Call Diane Johnson. Henry James “encouraged” Edith Wharton. George Henry Lewes “stood behind” Mary Ann Evans. Mr. Thatcher is often publicly appreciated by Mrs. Thatcher. John Zaccaro certainly gave his all for Geraldine Ferraro. But can’t men be seduced into becoming muses?

Infatuated women run rampant through our season. In addition to Jennifer in The Doctor’s Dilemma, there is Dot in Sunday in the Park with George. Dot has little education. She loves George’s beard, she loves his “eagle” or his “face”—this is ambiguous, but she has the surprisingly sophistication to sing “most of all George, I love your painting.” She wants the one she sat for… to take her when she leaves him. She’s not thinking of the future value of the piece. She wants proof of her personal contribution. The thrill, the honor of being part of the creative process. God knows she deserves it!

Enid Pollock in The Floating Light Bulb puts her hopes on her magician son, Paul. She stands behind her son and pushes him… a little too hard… to become her ticket to financial independence and fame. She’s a romantic. She’s no good at investing schemes to free herself from her husband’s indifference, so she invests in her son’s talent. Ah, mothers. That’s another angle. What’s motherly about Jennifer?

All the women in The Seagull are in love with men who, in their eyes, are creative geniuses. In his essay Beyond Therapy, Christopher Durang (I know Durang has some spiritual connection to CBS) has a character describe the love threads of the plot of The Seagull: “Masha loves Konstantin, but Konstantin only loves Nina. Nina doesn’t love Konstantin, but falls in love with Trigorin. Trigorin doesn’t love Nina, but sorts of loves Masha. Arkadina, who doesn’t love anyone but herself. And Medvedenko loves Masha, but she only loves Konstantin, which is where we started out.”

In The Real Thing, Annie and Henry are each creative artists. The sexual revolution has arrived but the urumen lingers on: “Use you because you love me. I love you so come me.”

Here’s finally a reverse twist in the sexes: in Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom, Ma is the creative “star” her clingers-on, mostly men in the music business, are bitching themselves to.

What is in my own experience to play on here? Putting myself in the Godly hands of a doctor? Definitely, repeatedly. Learning that the famous and gifted have weaknesses like the rest of us? Alas, yes. Falling in love with the artist at work? Story of my life.
ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Disciple (1877), Caesar and Cleopatra (1899), Master and Margarita (1921), Major Barbara (1905), and The Doctor's Dilemma (1906).

At the age of forty-two, having achieved sufficient material success to make leisure charges of fortune hunting impossible, Shaw said Charlotte Frances Payne-Townshend, a lady of means. The two remained contented companions for nearly thirty years until Charlotte's death. Their union, a marriage of equals, was never consummated: "We found a new relation in which sex had no part," Shaw explained. He prized the passion of his creative partner into his work and into his famous forty-year-long epistolary romance with Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

In the first decade of this century Shaw became associated with the Court Theatre and achieved his greatest public success. In subsequent years his Giulia (1913), Pygmalion (1913), Heartbreak House (1920) and Saint Joan (1923) appeared, adding to the master dramatist's reputation.

Through the later period of his life Shaw continued to aim at the minds of playgoers rather than at their emotions in his writing, but plays like The Millionaires (1935) and Backward Billiards (1943) failed to hit the mark with the accuracy of his earlier work. At the same time, however, a biennal Pascall's film of Pygmalion, Major Barbara and Caesar and Cleopatra were bringing the playwright's wit and eloquence to millions of people who had never seen plays on the stage.

Shaw died at the age of ninety-four in 1950. In accordance with his wishes, no religious ceremony attended his cremation—he had specified that "no cross or any other instrument of torture or symbol of blood sacrifice" was to be in evidence. Some years earlier he had written what can now be taken as his testament: "Either I shall be remembered as a playwright as long as Aristophanes and Shakespeare and I shall be a forgotten down before the end of the century."

George Bernard Shaw achieved the status of a classic dramatist in his own lifetime, yet was so iconoclastic that his contemporary, Oscar Wilde, once remarked: "Shaw hasn't an enemy in the world, and none of his friends like him."

Born in Dublin in 1856, Shaw moved to London at the age of nineteen. There he wrote five unsuccessful novels and worked as an art, music and book reviewer. Having seen at first hand the destructive effect of alcoholism on his father, Shaw was a teetotaller. At twenty-five he became a vegetarian and after a mild attack of smallpox, gave up smoking. The writer's lifelong interest in socialism began in 1882. Two years later he founded the Fabian Society, "to promote the general renovation of the world."

In 1885 Shaw began work on his first play, Arms and the Man (1894), Candida (1895), The Devil's Disciple (1897), Caesar and Cleopatra (1899), Master and Margarita (1921), Major Barbara (1905), and The Doctor's Dilemma (1906).

CONTRIBUTORS

The American Conservatory Theatre is grateful for its continuing support from individuals, local and national foundations and corporations, the California Arts Council, the City and County of San Francisco Hotel Tax Fund, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Our donors make great theatre possible. We salute them by associating their names with the literary guests of our rich dramatic heritage. This list reflects gifts received between June 1, 1985 and October 31, 1986.

SOPHOCLES CIRCLE

($25,000 AND ABOVE)

William and Flora Hewlett Foundation
James Irvine Foundation
Japan Foundation
San Francisco Foundation
Shubert Foundation

SHAKESPEARE CIRCLE

($10,000-$25,000)

Anon.
Albright-Knox Art Gallery
Arthur Anderson & Co.
Chevron U.S.A.
Mrs. Frank D. Johnson, Jr.
Louis R. Latrobe Foundation
Macy's California
McCann-Erickson
Mr. & Mrs. Albert J. Macmean
National Corporate Theater Fund
David and Lucile Packard Foundation
Shakespeare Center of Los Angeles
Simonds Paper Company
Squibb Foundation

WILLIAMS CIRCLE

($5,000-$9,999)

Murry L. Brenner Foundation
Carter Hawley Hale Stores
Charles Zellerbach Foundation
Coit Tower Institute of San Francisco
Dr. Margaret Hadden Green
Stuart and Mabel Hadden Trust
Mr. & Mrs. Burton J. Muir
Mr. & Mrs. Robert M. Moore
Performing Arts Network
Peninsula Guidance Center
Dr. & Mrs. H. Harrison Scharf
Sobrato Foundation

O'Neill CIRCLE

($2,500-$4,999)

Mr. & Mrs. Ray Babco
Elingard Foundation
Richard and Ethed Goldberg Fund
Mr. & Mrs. Douglas Grigg
Bernard Ostrich Foundation
Edna M. Brichta Foundation
Mr. & Mrs. Gary J. Tomes

WIDENER CIRCLE

($1,000-$2,499)

Anonymous Benefactor
Allan, Inc.
Mr. & Mrs. David Branson
Mr. & Mrs. Ernest A. Benech
John M. Bryan Family Fund
Curtis Foundation
Curtis Publishing Co.
Mr. & Mrs. David Cawley
Mr. & Mrs. Nancy Cawley
Mr. & Mrs. H. Brooke Cyril Creston National Bank
The Distribution Fund
Mr. & Mrs. Robert M. Earl Edison Foundation
Mr. & Mrs. Michael Edna
Mettler Foundation
Mr. & Mrs. Edward L. Ginzton
ITT Corporation
Mrs. Ada Glover Jackson
Mr. & Mrs. Paul R. Kelly
Mrs. John R. Kelly
Mr. & Mrs. Jesse Knight
Koons Foundation
Mr. John Kostick
Lakeside Foundation
Mr. & Mrs. Phillip A. Larson
Mr. & Mrs. Dean D. Lesher
Mr. & Mrs. Ernie Meyer
Pierson Restaurant
Mr. & Mrs. Gerald Rilet
Mr. & Mrs. Arthur Rock
Mrs. Maude Hill Scholl
Mr. & Mrs. Jack Schumacher
Segerstrom Foundation
Mr. & Mrs. Maryanne Shaw
Mr. & Mrs. Jan Thomson
Mr. & Mrs. Sylvia C. Tolk
Mrs. Alice R. Willet
Mr. & Mrs. Craig Wallace
Mr. & Mrs. Dow Williams
Mr. & Mrs. A. William Zaffarano
Mr. & Mrs. Francis W. Zaffarano

ACT-21
ABOUT THE AUTHOR

George Bernard Shaw achieved the status of a classic dramatist in his own lifetime, yet was so ironicistic that his contemporaries, Oscar Wilde, once remarked: "Shaw hasn't an enemy in the world, and none of his friends like him."

Born in Dublin in 1856, Shaw moved to London with his family at the age of nineteen. There he wrote five unsuccessful novels and worked as an art critic and book reviewer. Having seen at first hand the destructive effect of alcoholism on his father, Shaw was a teetotaler. At twenty-five he became a vegetarian and after a mild attack of smallpox gave up smoking. The writer's lifelong interest in socialism began in 1882. Two years later he founded the Fabian Society "to promote the general renovation of the world."

In 1885 Shaw began work on his first play, "Widowers' Houses," which was staged in 1893. Mr. Warren's Profanity (1893), banned by the Lord Chamberlain until 1903 for dealing with the taboo subject of prostitution, was followed by Arms and the Man (1894), Candida (1895), and The Devil's Disciple (1897), Caesar and Cleopatra (1899), Man and Superman (1903-1904), Major Barbara (1905), and The Doctor's Dilemma (1906).

At the age of forty-two, having achieved sufficient material success to make personal money impossible, Shaw wed Charlotte Frances Payne-Townsend, a lady of means.

The two remained devoted companions for nearly thirty years until Charlotte's death. Their union, a marriage of pure intellect, was never consummated. "We found a new relation in which sex had no part," Shaw explained. He poured the passion of his creative life into his work and into his famous forty-year-long epistolary romance with Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

In the first decade of this century Shaw became associated with the Court Theatre and achieved his greatest public success. In subsequent years - Maude (1911), Pygmalion (1912), Heartbreak House (1920) and Saint Joan (1923) appeared, adding to the master dramatist's reputation.

Through the late period of his life Shaw continued to aim at the minds of playwrights rather than at their emotions in his writing, but plays like The Millionairess (1935) and Saint Joan (1939) failed to hit the mark with the accuracy of his earlier work. At the same time, however, G. B. Shaw's films of Pygmalion, Major Barbara and Caesar and Cleopatra were bringing the playwright's wit and eloquence to millions of people who had never seen the plays on the stage.

Shaw died at the age of ninety-four in 1950. In accordance with his wishes, no religious ceremony attended his cremation - he specified that "no cross or any other instrument of torture or symbol of blood sacrifice" was to be in evidence. Some years earlier he had written what he could now be taken as his testament: "Neither shall I be forgotten as a playwright as long as Aristophanes and Moliere, or I shall be forgotten down before the end of the century."
The American Conservatory Theatre was founded in 1865 by William Hall.

NATIONAL: CORPORATE THEATRE FUND

The National Corporate Theatre Fund seeks to generate support from corporations of national significance for ten theatres of national significance. As a member of this organization, the American Conservatory Theatre gratefully acknowledges the support of the following major contributors to the National Corporate Theatre Fund:

Alco Foundation
American Broadcasting Companies, Inc.
American Can Company Foundation
Amoco Foundation
Arthur Amick & Co.
Arthur Rubloff Foundation

Corinthian Corporation of America
DFS Derlind Worldwide, Inc.
Essen Corporation
GTE Foundation

General Electric Foundation
General Foods Corporation

Gulf & Western Foundation

H.J. Heinz Company Foundation

John W. Hill

Pillsbury Foundation

International Business Machines Corporation

Dana Kaye & Sylvia Fine Foundation

Guerrero Foundation

Lerner Star Initiatives, Inc.

McGraw-Hill Foundation

Mellon Foundation

Nielsen Industries

Nabisco Brands, Inc.

Newhouse Foundation

New York Life Foundation

New York Timex Company Foundation

Oxley & Mather Advertising

Philips

Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company

United Airlines

Uniaction Corporation

San Francisco Foundation
COPRORATE MATCHING GIFTS

The following corporations have generously gifted to A.C.T. by their employees in the past year, thus doubling the impact of many individual contributions. A.C.T. extends its gratitude to these companies and invites all of their employees to join us in supporting live theatre in San Francisco.

Bank America Foundation
Chevron U.S.A.
CPC North America
Del Monte Corporation
Digital Equipment Corporation
Equitable Life Assurance Society
Exxon Corporation
Redwood Department Stores
Fireman's Fund Insurance Company Gap Foundation
IBM Corporation
International Data Corporation
Levi Strauss Foundation
R.J. Reynolds Industries
R.H. Macy & Co.
Security Pacific Foundation
Sohio Petroleum Company
Southern Pacific Transportation Company
Transamerica Corporation
TRW Foundation
United Technologies
Westinghouse Electric Fund
Xerox Foundation

SPECIAL THANKS

Arthur Andersen & Co.
Ballroom Bouquets of San Francisco
Clark and Wade
Bruce Cole
Grant Dehart
Emettee Marketing
Green Valley Plant Rental
Hearing Society for the Bay Area, Inc.
Heller, Sherman, White & McKenzie
Bruce Hill
Horshamore Yacht Club
KRON TV
La Rosa Formal Wear
Mary's California
Mailing Management, Inc.
Land Miller
Mirassou Vineyards
Peer Johnna & Partners Advertising
Pett Marin
Shapira, Kinos, Hor & Associates
Shubert-Hays-Nederlander
Steve Silver and Beach Blanket Babylon
Matthew Soyster

TO THE AUDIENCE

HOW TO BUY TICKETS

Tickets by Telephone—Call (415) 861-4440 and charge your tickets to AMEX, Visa, or MasterCard ($1 service charge per order).

Window Sales—Visit A.C.T.'s Geary Theatre Box Office at Geary and Mason Streets.

Box Office Hours: 10 a.m. through the first intermission of the evening performance.

For information call 673-6440.

Mail Orders—Write A.C.T. at 450 Geary Street, San Francisco 94102, or sign up for A.C.T.'s mailing list at the Geary Theatre lobby.

Ticket Agencies—Most ticket agencies handle tickets for A.C.T. (service charges vary). If you buy through your local agency, you'll get either tickets (BASS or Ticketron) or a receipt to present prior to the performance at the Geary Theatre in exchange for your tickets.

NOTE: If tickets are held for you at the box office, it is best to pick them up at least one half hour prior to the performance.

BOX OFFICE TICKET EXCHANGE AND DONATION POLICY

Tickets may be exchanged at the A.C.T. Box Office at least 24 hours prior to show time.

If, as an A.C.T. ticketholder, you are unable to attend a performance, you may make a tax-deductible contribution to the theatre by turning in your tickets at the box office prior to the curtain. Donations are accepted by telephone only on the day of the performance. A receipt for tax purposes will be issued in exchange for the tickets.

LATE ARRIVAL AT THE THEATRE

A.C.T. performances start on time! Curtain times vary, so please check your tickets! Latecomers will not be seated until intermission or a suitable break in the performance so those who have arrived on time are not disturbed.

NOTICES

Please observe the no smoking regulations. The use of cameras or tape recorders is not permitted. Kindly refrain from carrying in refreshments. In respect for the health of our performers it is the policy of this company to not actually light cigarettes during the play. The management reserves the right to change the attraction without prior notice to the patrons.

WHEELCHAIR ACCESS

Boxes are available for wheelchairs who wish to attend the performance. A wheelchair accessible restroom is available on the main floor.

A.S.L. AT A.C.T.

A.C.T. has a special series of plays interpreted in American Sign Language for the hearing-impaired. For information call TTY (415) 771-0388 or 771-3880 (Voice).

CHILDREN

Patrons are discouraged from bringing very young children or infants to regular performances. Everyone, regardless of age, must have a ticket.

PHOTOGRAPHY

A.C.T. photography is by Larry Merkle (415) 626-2267.

GIFT IDEAS

Gifts available from A.C.T.: The A.C.T. of Cooking is a collection of recipes from the kitchens of the A.C.T. family, available for $6.00 including postage and handling. The tote bag and apron, specially designed for A.C.T., are off-white with burgundy lettering. The tote bags are $15.00 each and the aprons are $35.75 each; prices include postage and handling. Make checks payable to A.C.T.

ANY DISCARDS?

The A.C.T. props department welcomes the donation of any useable furniture, clothing, books and other household items. Please call the production office, 771-3880.

This theatre operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors' Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.

If you carry a beeper, watch, or calculator with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the "OFF" position while you are in the theatre to prevent any interruption.
TO THE AUDIENCE

HOW TO BUY TICKETS
Tickets by Telephone—Call (415) 875-6480 and charge your tickets to AMEX, Visa, or MasterCard ($1 service charge per order).

Window Sales—Visit A.C.T.'s Geary Theatre Box Office at Geary and Mason Streets.

Box Office Hours: 10 a.m. through the first intermission of the evening performance.

For information call 673-6440.

Mail Orders—Write A.C.T. at 450 Geary Street, San Francisco 94102, or sign up for A.C.T.'s mailing list at the Geary Theatre lobby.

Ticket Agencies—Most ticket agencies handle tickets for A.C.T. (service charges vary). If you buy through your local agency, you'll get either tickets or a receipt to present prior to the performance at the Geary Theatre in exchange for your tickets.

NOTE: If tickets are held for you at the box office, it's best to pick them up at least one half hour prior to the performance.

BOX OFFICE TICKET EXCHANGE AND DONATION POLICY
Tickets may be exchanged at the A.C.T. Box Office at least 24 hours prior to show time.

If, as an A.C.T. ticketholder, you are unable to attend a performance, you may make a tax-deductible contribution to the theatre by turning in your tickets at the box office prior to the curtain. Donations are accepted by telephone only on the day of the performance. A receipt for donation purposes will be issued in exchange for the tickets.

TO THE AUDIENCE

LATE ARRIVAL AT THE THEATRE
A.C.T. performances start on time! Curtain times vary, so please check your tickets! Latecomers will not be seated until intermission or a suitable break in the performance so those who have arrived on time are not disturbed.

NOTICES
Please observe the no smoking regulations. The use of cameras or tape recorders is not permitted. Kindly refrain from carrying refreshments. In respect for the health of our performers it is the policy of this company to not actually light cigarettes during the play. The management reserves the right to change the attraction without prior notice to the patrons.

WHEELCHAIR ACCESS
Boxes are available for wheelchairs the week of the performance at $5 a ticket. A wheelchair accessible restroom is available on the main floor.

A.S.L. AT A.C.T.
A.C.T. has a special series of plays interpreted in American Sign Language for the hearing-impaired. For information call TTY (415) 771-1938 or 771-3880 (Voice).

CHILDREN
Patrons are discouraged from bringing very young children or infants to regular performances. Every person, regardless of age, must have a ticket.

PHOTOGRAPHY
A.C.T. photography is by Larry Merkle (415) 626-2287.

GIFT IDEAS
Gifts available from A.C.T.: The A.C.T. of Cooking is a collection of recipes from the kitchens of the A.C.T. family, available by mail for $6.00 including postage and handling. The tote bag and apron, specially designed for A.C.T., are off-white with burgundy lettering. The tote bags are $15.00 each and the aprons are $15.00 each; prices include postage and handling. Make checks payable to A.C.T.

ANY DISCOUNTS?
The A.C.T. props department welcomes the donation of any usable furniture, clothing, books and other household items. Please call the production office, 771-3880.

This theatre operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors' Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States.

If you carry a beeper, watch, or calculator with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “OFF” position while you are in the theatre to prevent any interruption in the performance.
THE AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATRE

EDWARD HASTINGS
Artistic Director
JOY CARLIN
Resident Director

JOHN SULLIVAN
Managing Director

LAWRENCE HECHT
Conservatory Director

DENNIS POWERS
Communications Director

ACT/30

ACTORS AND DIRECTORS

Tony Amendola
Claudia Rose Gold
Rabin Novell
Joy Carlin

Jessica Amlee
Cynthia Nelles
Edward Hastings

Joseph Bird
Timothy Ure
Liam Coughlin

Anne Buechschm
Lawrence Hecht
Franz Oettl.

Richard Butterfield
Robert Jacoby
Elizabeth Puddle
Michael Scanlon

Joy Carlin
Ruth Kowal
William Patterson

Nancy Carlin
Larry Karl Stephan Rockwell

Melanie Chase
Kimberly LaMarque
Kevin Sorren

Peter Donat
Alisa Lyon
Larry Segura

Drew Edelman
Mary Jo McConnell
Howard Swain

Gina Ferrall
James Mendel
Sydney Walker

Richard R. Gavin
Doelen Y Mitchell
J. Steven White

REPERTORY

MUSIC
John Johnson, Musical Director

SCENE SHOP
Ed Raymond, Shop Foreman
Randy Reed, Lead Scenic Artist

DALE HAGUIS, Lead Sonic Artist
Leo Loveino, Mechanical Engineer
Eric Korten, Shop Coordinator
Bruce Hill, Design Assistant

ASSOCIATE DIRECTORS

FELICIA KNOWLES, Supervisor
Crissette Armenta, First Hand

Barbara Gill, Sundries
Carolyne Davis, Men's Cutter/Dresser

Rick Schick, Wig Master
Leslie Elledge, Design Assistant
Lisa Agostini, Sewing

KITTY MONTZAK-KRAINOS, Women's Cutter/Dresser

JANET W. PETERSON, Accessories
Sonja Tedakajian, Head Seamstress
Marie Jose Caputi, Intern

CONSERVATORY

Lawrence Hecht, Conservatory Director
J. Steven White, Dean of Academic Affairs
Emilia Carpin, Conservatory Administrator
John Hartnett, Financial Aid Director
Rebecca Merrill, Registrar
John Louchman, Assistant Conservatory Director
Lisa McAllister, Conservatory Assistant

TRAINERs

Addah Barnes, Acting
Benita Bradley, Yaga
Kate Bricker, Voice
Joy Carlin, Acting

Dennett Players Co.,
Physical Comedy
Beverly Durnon, Tip
Rick Edwards, Makeup
Sohib Epstein, Acting
Scott Freeman, Acting
Rowe Gigman, Speech

HUMAINTS
Edward Hastings, Acting
Lawrence Hecht, Acting
Nancy Houck, Vice
John Johnson, Stage
Rhoda Kaufman, HumaINTs

Barry Kraft, Text
Joyce Livergood, Script Reading
John Louchmann, Ballet

PRODUCTION

DESIGNERS
Barbera Bauer, Costumes
Robert Blackman, Costumes and Scenery

Debra Duerte, Lighting
RALPH PINTOLO, Scenery

Holly Hanlin, Costumes
Jesse Hollis, Scenery

FELICIA KNOWLES, Costumes
STEVEN LEGRAND, Sound

Robert Morgan, Costumes
Michael Silch, Scenery

Richard Segur, Scenery

STAGE MANAGEMENT
James Halter
Eugene Babcock

Karen Van Zandt
Bruce Phillips, Intern

Meg Slavin, Intern
Cynthia McCarr

Production Coordinator

YOUNG CONSERVATORY

Linda Aldrich, Director
Richard Butterfield

Kathy Blyde
James Friesman
Rhoda Kaufman

Deborah Weitzman
Gemma Whelan

ADMINISTRATION

Danne M. Frankland, General Manager
Pamela Sartwell, Administrative Director
Mary Garrett, Company Manager
Verity Adler, Business Manager
Robert Hollenberg, Cheryl Kahn, Business Office
John Wills, Contracts Administrator
Stephen Durante, Information Systems Manager
Darcy Butterfield, Dance Division Coordinator
Miiko Dao, Executive Assistant
Beulah Steen, Receptionist
Eve Cogswell, Volunteer Coordinator
Arthur Anderson & Co., Accountants
Pete & Martin, Legal Counsel

COMMUNICATIONS & MARKETING

Ralph Hendrie, Press and Public Relations
Ann Benett, Graphic Design
Richard Bemiss, Marketing Associate
Carson Bemat, Ticketing Manager
Joe Dullay, Student Director
Michael Bemiss, Mail Room Manager
Janice Kusky, Ticketing/Box Office
Rita M. Zech, Office Manager
Cleo Faulkner, A.C.T. 400

BOX OFFICE
John Dixon, Manager
Gilda Solow, Assistant Manager
Steve Alexander
Petra Ratten
Sharon Cox
Joel Liebschneider

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Patty Costa, Manager
Ellen Matthews
Eileen B. Anderson

FACILITIES
Leslie Pannell, Manager
David Mather
David Schwartz
David Scott
Curtsis Cahn, Jr., Security
Robert A. Davis, Security

FRONT OF HOUSE
Robert Eddy, House Manager
Fred Quirk, Doorman
Mary Patel, Assistant House Manager
Danna Brown
Stu Marros

David Englemann
Brynn Raft
Beverly Balin
Nancy Hodges
Susanne Housman
Gaylen Snyder
Cortez Toland

ACT/31
ety of creative endeavor. And by matching outside donations with Government funds, it claims a hand in boosting the total of private gifts to the arts field from $296 million in 1967 to more than $4.6 billion in 1984.

Thus, the face of it, the endowment — contributing less than 5 percent of all spending on the arts in this country, but still their largest single backer — is an American success story par excellence. A major boon to the culture industry, it may even be — though the notion is challenged by conservative critics — a boon to culture itself. While President Reagan, in his first year of office entertained proposals for dismantling it in favor of an agency that would solicit private funds, the endowment seems since to have risen in its graces, and he recently praised its "good work" in making creative activity "accessible to all Americans, not merely a small elite." Representative Sidney Yates, Democrat of Illinois, the white knight in Congress who continually does battle on behalf of the agency, sees it as a force for "cultural advancement, not only in urban centers, but also in smaller rural areas of this country, instilling pride in Americans for their own creative achievements."

On the other hand, as a cultural superpower, the endowment is wide open to challenge and attack. And some critics, even as the agency approaches its majority, so to speak, are questioning whether it has a right to go on living. "Even if they cleared up their act, I still wouldn't want them to exist," Congressman Richard Armey, a Republican from Texas, said of the endowment last September. He is one of three Texas Representatives who tried to have Congress cut off endowment financing of what the Representatives judged to be "pornographic" work by poets, and then proposed cuts in this year's endowment budget. To save the situation, Representative Talent agreed to freeze the agency's budget at last year's level of $163 million provided that 5 million more was added for public broadcasting. The Texas Representatives acceded. Their pornography citation was picked up by the Christian Broadcasting Network, which on its Club 700 television show last September excoriated the endowment as a waste of taxpayers' money.

On a somewhat more philosophical level, in his 1984 book, The Democratic Muse, Edward C. Banfield, professor of government at Harvard University, argued that Federal support of the arts is not constitutionally justified, and doesn't work in practice; that is, it does nothing to enhance the aesthetic experience. And the pianist and critic Samuel Lipman, who is also publisher of the conservative arts magazine The New Criterion, takes the view that the large-scale cultural expenditures by the endowment "haven't created any art. We're in no different an artistic position than we'd be without the endowment," he says. "It's true we've expanded the audience, however we ety of creative endeavor. And by matching outside donations with Government funds, it claims a hand in boosting the total of private gifts in the arts field from $226 million in 1967 to more than $4.6 billion in 1984.

Thus, on the face of it, the endowment — contributing less than 5 percent of all spending on the arts in this country, but still their largest single backer — is an American success story par excellence. A major boon to the culture industry, it may even be — though the notion is challenged by conservative critics — a boon to culture itself. While President Reagan, in his first year of office entertained proposals for dismantling it in favor of an agency that would solicit private funds, the endowment seems since to have risen in its grace, and he recently praised its “good work” in making creative activity “accessible to all Americans, not merely a small elite.” Representative Sidney Yates, Democrat of Illinois, the white knight in Congress who continually does battle on behalf of the agency, sees it as a force for “cultural advancement, not only in urban centers, but also in smaller rural areas of the country, instilling pride in Americans for their own creative achievements.”

On the other hand, as a cultural superpower, the endowment is wide open to challenge and attack. And some critics, even as the agency approaches its majority, so to speak, are questioning whether it has a right to go on living. “Even if they cleaned up their act, I still wouldn’t want them to exist,” Congressman Richard Armey, a Republican from Texas, said of the endowment last September. He is one of three Texas Representatives who tried to have Congress cut off endowment financing of what the Representatives judged to be “pornographic” work by poets, and then proposed cuts in this year’s endowment budget. To save the situation, Representative Lutes agreed to freeze the agency’s budget at last year’s level of $193 million provided that $3 million more was added for public broadcasting. The Texas Representativesacceded. Their pornographic citation was picked up by the Christian Broadcasting Network, which on its Club 700 television show last September excoriated the endowment as a waste of taxpayers’ money.

On a somewhat more philosophical level, in his 1984 book, The Democratic Muse, Edward C. Banfield, professor of government at Harvard University, argued that Federal support of the arts is not constitutionally justified, and doesn’t work in practice; that is, it does nothing to enhance the aesthetic experience. And the pianist and critic Samuel Lipman, who is also publisher of the conservative arts magazine The New Criterion, takes the view that the large-scale cultural expenditures by the endowment “haven’t created any art. We’re in no different an artistic position than we’d be without the endowment,” he says. “It’s true we’ve expanded the audience, however we... decide what the audience is. But its quality has gone down in recent years, that’s the other side of size.

If the endowment were to approach its task as educating the citizenry to be a sophisticated audience for any art, that would be fine. Until this particular moment, however, the aim has not been education but entertainment.” Part of a team that in 1980 wrote a report harshly critical of the endowment for the conservative Heritage Foundation, Mr. Lipman wrote in a recent talk on the endowment’s future, “the only way to serve on the National Council on the Arts is to have an advisory body to the endowment, and he remains one of the agency’s most diligent gadflies.

But, troubled by such sallies from intellectuals, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., the historian and professor of the humanities at the City University of New York, stressed in a recent talk the solid mandate given the endowment by the American public. “The policy of Federal support is an expression of the values the Republic places on the arts, a symbol of the role assigned to the arts in our national life,” he said. “And Congress today remains steadfast in its belief in the centrality of arts in a civilized society. It has shown no disposition to try to repeat the act of 1965 and has steadily resisted President’s attempts to cut National Endowment budgets.”

The agency’s establishment in 1965 was a momentous decision for Congress. It signaled that support of the arts was an important area of concern for the Federal Government. The endowment, even with its then token budget, would not only provide funds to stimulate development of the arts and their audiences, it would also give culture a national presence. As Frank Hidke took the endowment’s current chairman — who has just been confirmed by the Senate for his second four-year term — puts it, “For the first time people from the different fields of creativity could come together to provide a national perspective on the arts.”

Starting off with $2.5 million under the chairmanship of Roger L. Stevens, the real-estate magnate and theatrical producer appointed by President Johnson in 1965, the endowment was brilliantly expanded by Mr. Stevens’s successor, the late Nancy Hanks. A consummate politician who built an arts constituency that helped her budgets swell through Congress, Nancy Hanks presided over the agency’s biggest appropriations hike, from $8.4 million when she took office in 1969 to $12.5 million on her retirement in 1977. And she broadened its scope to include such categories as expansion arts, which supported community-based arts projects, and the challenge grant program, aimed at giving larger institutions long-term financial stability.

After the Hanks regime and the advent of big budgets for the agency, it grew its first heavy salvos from critics. Under Roger Stevens and Nancy Hanks, the endowment had always been perceived as isolated from the political hurly-burly that surrounded most Federal agencies. But cries of “politicization” arose with the installation of Livingston Biddle appointed by the Carter Administration. Rival lines were drawn between “elitists” and “populists” referring to those who thought primarily in terms of reaching large audiences (populists) versus those for whom the size of the audiences was purely incidental to the quality of presentations (elitists).

As a special assistant to Senator Claiborne Pell, Democrat of Rhode Island (a prime mover behind the endowment), Mr. Biddle had drafted the legislation establishing the Arts and the Humanities Endowments. His appointment was sponsored by Senator Pell, whose expressed goal of “vitality” statements played into the “populist” views of the Carter Administration. Though the shift of endowment money — including challenge grants — toward wider geographically representation and support of nonneurotic groups had actually begun during the Hanks chairmanship, it was...
Dare to be More.

FILTR CIGARETTES

More MENTHOL

120's

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: Quitting Smoking Now Greatly Reduces Serious Risks to Your Health.

17 mg "tar", 1.5 mg nicotine in CIGARETTES by FTC method.
intensified during Mr. Biddle's time.

Under Mr. Biddle, a diligent but low-key chairman whose service it has served him well, the agency undertook such "populist" initiatives as the Office of Minority Concerns, to act as liaison between the endowment and minority arts groups. Mr. Biddle and his staff also helped to give the agency's annual budget another healthy boost of almost $35 million to $133 million by 1981. He forecast that it would reach $380 million by 1984.

That, of course, given the less-is-more government philosophy of the Reagan Administration, and the huge federal deficit that has forced cuts in most agency budgets, has proved to be a pipe dream. At $350.6 million for fiscal 1985 the endowment may be said to have leveled off, and substantive increases are certainly not in the cards for a while. Chairman Hodsdon, a good soldier, has consistently requested less money than Congress has finally given him.

Among the sharpest critics of the Reagan-proposed cuts for the endowment is former Representative John Brademas, actually one of the agency's legislative creators -- and now president of New York University. In a speech in New York City on Nov. 1, Mr. Brademas said: "It is nonsense to expect that state and local governments, corporations and foundations can fill the immense gap in the funds for the arts, education and social services that would be the consequence of the cuts Mr. Reagan proposes."

Regarded as purely a Reagan functionary in the early days of his office, Mr. Hodsdon appears now to have established himself as a chairman to reckon with. Although he makes it clear that his mandate is from the Reagan Administration, his approach seems to be on the liberal side of that Administration, and he has taken a lively interest (some say too lively) in promoting avant-garde and experimental work.

While feeling that the chairman serves the Reagan budget position on the arts "too strongly," Representative Nitts says: "I'm told he's a good administrator and I guess he's doing a fairly good job, he's carrying out orders in asking for these low budgets, but his hands are not tied in any other way. He has a good deal of flexibility and discretion.

The "elitist-populist" question seems to have faded away, due to Mr. Hodsdon's skill at nurturing both grass-roots and more-established movements. While regarding the "populist" expansion-arts program as "a very good thing," he has also beefed up the up-grade-arts program -- which gives grants to institutions of high artistic quality to help their long-term financial stability -- from $14 million it stood at in 1982, to nearly $22 million this year.

The word "private" is important to Mr. Hodsdon, who takes very seriously the dictum that Federal funds are given in partnership with private money. One of his most successful initiatives has been the so-called "Locals Test" program begun in 1983, whereby for a three-year period the endowment gives matching funds to a group of state and local arts agencies across the country, on the premise that they will raise $2 in new -- private and public -- money for every $1 contributed by the agency.

Imbued with the idea that the arts should be taught from the first grade in schools "on the level of English, math and science," Mr. Hodsdon has led the endowment to commissaires, with the Rockefeller Foundation and the Department of Education, a survey on the state of arts education in the country. Next spring the agency will take the significant step of setting up, in partnership with state arts councils, a program to make the arts an integral part of basic education, from the first to the 12th grades. And somewhat more problematically, it has joined with the J. Paul Getty Trust to produce a series of public-television programs in the arts aimed at children from 8 to 10 years of age.

As an administrator, Mr. Hodsdon gets good marks from within and without the agency. He has tightened staff operations and assumed greater control over them than his predecessors. He has also, he says, effectively "systematized" the workings of one of the endowment's most important -- and controversial -- processes, its peer review panels, on which experts drawn from the various arts fields serve to advise the agency on grant-making in their respective areas. Endowment applicants have long complained about the secrecy of the panels -- rejectees are not told in detail why they were turned down -- and suggest that the objectivity of panels may be flawed by conravity and conflicts of interest. There are also complaints that some panels are weighted on one side, such as the current dance panel, which has far more participants from modern dance than from traditional disciplines.

"We may not have a perfect balance," says Mr. Hodsdon, "but now we have several checks. Program directors submit two, three or four names for every slot; we look at them from the point of view of geographic distribution, we try to ask all the right questions. But we never do a perfect job. As for conflicts of interest, no one who's coming up for a grant himself as an individual can serve on any panel," with regard to the dance panel, he says "ballet companies get by far the largest grants."

Mr. Hodsdon himself, unlike his predecessors, takes a very active role in reviewing panels' recommendations. And he has even voted some of them. Last year, he caused a flap in the art world by suspending indefinitely a program of fellowships for critics in the visual arts, after a report by an outside evaluator, John Beardsley, pointed out weaknesses in the program. Mr. Hodsdon says now that an overview panel for the endowment has recommended that the agency should increase its emphasis on publications by artists and critics rather than continue the fellowships.

Does partisan politics play a part in the endowment's decisions? Although some critics would insist that it does, Mr. Hodsdon vigorously denies it. On the plus side for the endowment is the case of the painter Peter Saul, winner of a $25,000 fellowship in the visual arts. His recent work contains vitric portraits of President Reagan in situations that, to say the least, unflattering. "We do fund good artists, and if they do things that are political, that's their business," says Mr. Hodsdon.

As the endowment awaits its reauthorization by Congress through fiscal year 1990, a process that by law must occur every five years, its role as a cultural benefactor seems established. But as Mr. Hodsdon himself points out, that role remains a limited one. "The endowment has nothing to do with creating genius," he says. "We've done essentially is to make it easier for institutions and creative individuals to pursue their art. More important, we symbolize the Federal Government's recognition of culture in this country as an aspect of national health."
intensified during Mr. Biddle's time.

Under Mr. Biddle, a diligent but low-key chairman whose lively staff served him well, the agency undertook such "populist" initiatives as the Office of Minority Concerns, to act as an ombudsman between the endowment and minority arts groups. Mr. Biddle and his staff also helped to give the agency's annual budget another healthy boost of almost $35 million to $138.7 million by 1981. He forecast that it would reach $300 million by 1984.

That, of course, given the less-than-government philosophy of the Reagan Administration, and the huge federal deficit that has forced cuts in most agency budgets, has proved to be a pipe dream. At $136.5 million for fiscal 1985 the endowment may be said to have leveled off, and substantive increases are certainly not in the cards for a while. Chairman Biddle, a good soldier, has consistently requested less money than Congress has finally given him.

Among the sharpest critics of the Reagan-proposed cuts for the endowment is former Representative John Brademas, actually one of the agency's legislative creators — and now president of New York University. In a speech in New York City on Nov. 1, Mr. Brademas said: "It is nonsense to expect that state and local government, corporations and foundations can fill the immense gap left by the cutback of federal funds for the arts, education and social services that would be the consequence of the budget Mr. Reagan proposes."

Regarded as purely a Reagan functionary in the early days of his office, Mr. Hodsoll appears now to have established himself as a chairman to reckon with. Although he makes it clear that his mandate is from the Reagan Administration, his approach seems to be on the liberal side that Administration, and he has taken a lively interest (some say too lively) in promoting avant-garde and experimental work.

While feeling that the chairman serves the Reagan budget position on the arts "too strongly," Representative Bingham says, "I'm told he's a good administrator and I guess he's doing a fairly good job, he's carrying out orders in asking for these low budgets, but his hands are not tied in any other way. He has a good deal of flexibility and discretion."

Mr. Hodsoll's "philosophy" seems to have faded away, due to Mr. Hodsoll's skill at nurturing both grass-roots and more established arts groups. While regarding the "populist" expansion-arts program as a "very good thing," he has also kept the much-changed "grant" program — which grants to institutions of high artistic quality to help their long-term financial stability — from the $14 million it stood at in 1982, to nearly $22 million this year.

The word "private" is important to Mr. Hodsoll, who takes very seriously the dictum that Federal funds are given in partnership with private money. One of his most successful initiatives has been the so-called "Local/Expanded" program, which has far more participants from modern dance than from traditional disciplines.

"We may not have a perfect balance," says Mr. Hodsoll, "but now we have several checks. Program directors submit two, three or four names for every slot; we look at them from the point of view of geographic distribution, and we try to ask all the right questions. But we never do a perfect job. As for conflicts of interest, no one who's coming up for a grant himself as an individual can serve on any panel," with regard to the dance panel. He says "ballet companies get by far the largest grants." Mr. Hodsoll himself, unlike his predecessors, takes a very active role in reviewing panels' recommendations. And he has even voiced some of them.

Last year, he caused a flap in the art world by suspending indefinitely a program of fellowships for critics in the visual arts, after a report by an outside evaluator, John Beardsley, pointed out weaknesses in the program. Mr. Hodsoll says now that an overview panel for the endowment has recommended that the agency should increase its emphasis on publications by artists and critics rather than continue the fellowships.

Does partisan politics play a part in the endowment's decisions? Although some critics would insist that it does, Mr. Hodsoll vigorously denies it. On the plus side for the endowment is the case of the painter Peter Saul, winner of a $25,000 fellowship in the visual arts. Mr. Hodsoll's recent work has contained virulently portrayals of President Reagan in situations that are, to say the least, unfair. "We do fund good artists, and if they do things that are political, that's their business," says Mr. Hodsoll.

As the endowment awaits its reauthorization by Congress through fiscal year 1991, a process that by law must occur every five years, its role as a cultural benefactor seems established. But as Mr. Hodsoll himself points out, its role remains a limited one. "The endowment has nothing to do with creating genius," he says. "We've done essentially is to make it easier for institutions and creative individuals to pursue their art. More important, we symbolize the Federal Government's recognition of culture in this country as an aspect of national health."
by Catherine Seipp

- For those who want the real thing in silver jewelry to go with all the gray and black clothes in the stores this fall, Tiffany's has some elegantly understated strings of sterling silver beads for between $85 and $275 and a very pretty sterling compact for $200. The costume jewelry counter at Neiman-Marcus is overflowing with silver-colored necklaces of every description. An amusing one looks like a string of ball-bearings and costs $60. Another, for $75, is made up of several ribbony metal strands that manage to evoke the undulating form of a waterfall.

Donna Karan's new collection of hammered and pounded brass jewelry at Saks Fifth Avenue should appeal to those who want a look that is warm and earthy, yet also sleek and urbane. Prices range from $300 for earrings and cufflinks to about $1,000 for a necklace. The pieces are just the thing to set off Karan's figure-flattering, clean-lined fall ready-to-wear.

The champion figure skater Tai Babilonia, who once wanted to go to art school, has teamed up with artist Marina Drasnin to create a collection of butterfly-shaped crystal pins and hair ornaments. This "Flutterby" jewelry costs between $30 and $150.

- A new evening bag is a lovely present for a woman, especially if she goes to a lot of black tie parties. Whiting and Davis, the company known for its beautiful work in metal mesh, is celebrating its 130th anniversary this year with a "heritage collection." These bags are elongated enough to hold a pair of opera glasses and bring back the turn-of-the-century with pale, colorful printed mesh reminiscent of Victorian upholstered brocades. They cost between $85 and $75 and are available at Saks Fifth Avenue. Also spotted in the accessories department at Saks were a couple of elaborate little rhinestone-encrusted, cabsheved evening cases by Judith Leiber. These cost $1,950 each and are just the thing to give to a woman who indulges in that improper habit of resting her evening bag on the dinner table. This way, the bag looks like a small cat taking a nap, which is rather charming.

- What would the holidays be without a new sweater? Pretty cold, no doubt. Here are a few suggestions:

  A. A German company that's been getting a lot of attention lately, has some great looking ribbed cotton turtlenecks in exaggeratedly long lengths. They come in a variety of bright colors, retail for around $125 and are available at Saks Fifth Avenue, Neiman-Marcus, Bullock's in Southern California, Ron Ross in Tarrytown, Fred Segal in West Hollywood and The Garment Center in San Diego.

  B. A relaxed, cheerful line of casual Italian knits, has an appealing fall collection of cableknit pullovers and drop-shouldered cardigans in fresh-looking shades of indigo, green, gray and blue. One sweaters range from $45 to $100 and are carried at Encino Flair, Encino, Attitudes in Brentwood, Philippe Dreyer in the Beverly Center, Comme Ca in Marina Del Rey, Jean Ryan in Newport Beach, Just Clever in Laguna Niguel, and Sharon Wilson in San Diego. Winter white always brightens up the cold, dark months. Lisa Lee in Beverly Hills has a creamy, textureful wool and viscose sweater by Umberto Giocchi. Eventually, for men, the Trifles holiday catalogue features a cashmere long-sleeved polo shirt in hunter green, beige or burgundy for $380. To order, call (800) 525/0277.

  C. For anyone preparing to take off for the slopes during the holidays, nothing could be a more welcome gift than one of those trendy, new European-influenced ski suits. No longer is it enough to just get out that trusty old navy blue parka. Skiwear this year is designed as much for fashion as for function. But, points out Lisa Kovitz of the trade organization Ski Industries America, "A lot of it looks outrageous, but it's also highly skiable. You have research scientists constantly figuring out new ways to make it drier, warmer, slimmer."

One of the leaders in the field is Bogner, which this year introduced a $3,000 "thermal system" suit made with a SuperMicrofleece outer shell and insulated with Alufil 2000. Small packs that keep warm for 20 hours (just rubbing them between your hands activates the heat-producing chemicals) are inserted in the outer's lower back. "We call it the most comfortable suit in the world," says Bogner's marketing vice-president, Don Schwab.

For those who prize individuality, Bogner this year commissioned 350 artists to hand-paint 350 one-of-a-kind suits. The cost: between $1,000 and $2,000 and are selling extremely well. Or if you prefer a dash of look from days of yore, the company also has a collection of medieval-inspired, tapestry-patterned $1,000 outfits designed to make you look like Sir Lancelot of the Slopes.

Bogner is also doing a group of suits in multi-colored, zigzag patterns and jacquard weaves that range from $400 to $700. "People turn from grey city dwellers during the course of the week to these colorful creatures on the slopes," says Schwab. "You can't dress up like this for paddle tennis or basketball or any other sport." The Bogner collection is available at Bogner and Swiss Ski Sports in San Francisco, Vale West in Beverly Hills, Abercrombie and Fitch in the Beverly Center and Newport Ski Company in Newport Beach.

- Here's the perfect stocking stuffer for a man who longs to wear a bow tie but could never figure out how to tie it: The Bow Tie Book by Mario Sartori, which costs $5.95, should be out this month at most bookstores and comes complete with a quite nice bow tie. The book gives clear, step-by-step instructions on how to tie a real bow tie (we don't even want to hear about clip-ons) and should be welcomed by any man who wants to imitate the suave style of George F. Will, or even Pee Wee Herman.

Tim McGinnis, a senior editor at Fireside, the book's publisher, says that when the book's cover picture was photographed, he had to ask a salesmen from Barney's in New York to come over and tie the featured bow tie. That was nothing new. "All times are always pulling up to Barney's, and guys run into the store to get the salesmen to tie their bow ties," McGinnis recalls. "That's my neck on the cover, friggin' enough," he adds.

Bow ties are becoming ever more popular, though. "A lot of guys say they're great because you can't spill things on them," McGinnis says. "But on the other hand, you spill things on your shirt. In the book, we call that food physics."
by Catherine Seipp

- For those who want the real thing in silver jewelry to go with all the gray and black clothes in the stores this fall, Tiffany's has some elegantly understated strings of sterling silver beads for between $85 and $125 and a very pretty sterling compact for $200. The costumeAbout $1,000 for a necklace. The pieces are just the thing to set off Karan's own couture fits, clean-lined fall ready-to-wear.

- The champion figure skater Tai Babilonia, once wanted to go to art school, has teamed up with artist Marina Dramin to create a collection of butterfly-shaped crystal pins and hair ornaments. This "Butterfly" jewelry costs between $200 and $150.

- A new evening bag is a lovely present for a woman, especially if she goes to a lot of black tie parties. Whiting and Davis, the company known for its beautiful work in metal mesh, is celebrating its 110th anniversary this year with a "heritage collection." These bags are elongated enough to hold a pair of opera glasses and bring back the turn-of-the-century with pale, colorful printed mesh reminiscent of Victorian upholstery brocades. They cost between $85 and $150 and are available at Saks Fifth Avenue. Also spotted in the accessories department at Saks were a couple of elaborate little rhinestone-encrusted, casket-shaped evening cases by Judith Leiber. These cost $1,950 each and are just the thing to give to a woman who indulges in that improper habit of resting her evening bag on the dinner table. This way, the bag looks like a small cat taking a nap, which is rather charming.

- What would the holidays be without a new sweater? Pretty cold, no doubt. Here are a few suggestions:

  - Aissi, a German company that's been getting a lot of attention lately, has some great looking ribbed cotton turtlenecks in exaggeratedly long lengths. They come in a variety of bright colors, retail for around $120 and are available at Saks Fifth Avenue, Neiman Marcus, Bullock's in Southern California, Ron Ross in Tarrytown, N.Y., and at the Barneys in New York.

  - Chantilly, priced under $200, and in cashmere and silk, comes in a variety of rich colors and patterns, retailing for around $300 and are carried at Encino Bluff in Encino, Atkinsons in Brentwood, Philip's in Beverly Hills, and at the Barneys in New York.

  - Winter white always brightens up the cold, dark months. Lisa Lee in Beverly Hills has a creamy, texturized wool and viscose sweater by Umberto Loschiere. Finally, for men, the Trifles holiday catalogue features a cashmere long-sleeved polo shirt in hunter green, beige or burgundy for $30. To order, call (800) 322-9277.

- For anyone preparing to take off for the slopes during the holidays, nothing could be a more welcome gift than one of those trendy, new European-influenced ski suits. No longer is it enough to just get out that trusty old navy blue parka. Skiwear this year is designed as much for fashion as for function. But, points out Lisa Kovitz of the trade organization Ski Industries America, "A lot of it looks outrageous, but it's also highly skiable. You have research scientists constantly figuring out new ways to make it drier, warmer, thinner.

- One of the leaders in the field is Bognor, which this year introduced a $2,000 'thermal system' suit made with a SuperMicrofleece outer shell and insulated with Alufill 2000. Small packs that keep warm for 20 hours (just rubbing them between your hands activates the heat-producing chemicals) are inserted in the eurth's lower back. "We call it the most comfortable suit in the world," says Bognor's marketing vice-president, Don Schwab. For those who prize individuality, Bognor this year commissioned 350 artists to hand-paint 350 one-of-a-kind suits. The cost, between $1,000 and $2,000, and are selling extremely well. Or if you prefer a dashingly look from days of yore, the company also has a collection of medieval-inspired, tapestry-patterned $1,000 outfits designed to make you look like Sir Lancelot of the Slopes.

- Bognor is also doing a group of suits in multi-colored, zigzag patterns and jacquard weaves that range from $400 to $700. "People turn from gray city dwellers during the course of the week to these colorful creatures on the slopes," says Schwab. "You can't dress up like this for paddle tennis or basketball or any other sport." The Bognor collection is available at Bognor and Swiss Ski Sports in San Francisco, Yale West in Beverly Hills, Abercrombie and Fitch in the Beverly Center and Newport Ski Company in Newport Beach.

- Here's the perfect stocking stuffer for a man who longs to wear a bow tie but never figures out how to tie it: The Bow Tie Book by Mario Santorii, which costs $5.95, should be out this month at most bookstores and comes complete with a quite nice bow tie. The book gives clear, step-by-step instructions on how to tie a real bow tie (we don't even want to hear about clip-ons) and should be welcomed by any man who wants to imitate the erudite style of George F. Will, or even Pee Wee Herman.

- Tim McGinnis, a senior editor at Fireside, the book's publisher, says that when the book's cover picture was photographed, he had to ask a salesman from Barney's in New York to come over and tie the featured bow tie. That was nothing new. "An artist is always pulling up to Barney's, and guys run into the store to get the salesmen to tie their bow ties," McGinnis recalls. "That's why we put on the cover, tragically enough," he adds.

- Bow ties are becoming every more popular, though. "A lot of guys say 'they're great because you can't spill things on them,'" McGinnis says. "But on the other hand, you spill things on your shirt. In the book, we call that food physics."
The Compulsion to Act
by Dennis Powers

Actors' Equity Association, the American stage actors' union, admits that up to eighty percent of its members are out of work at any given time. The Screen Actors' Guild has said that something like ninety percent of its membership earns less than $5,000 a year from movie acting jobs. A handful of stars can command fees so astronomical that in some cases the word "salary" seems hopelessly inadequate, and a larger number of semi-stars and top featured players make a very good living in the profession. But the great majority toils in relative obscurity, worrying about where the next job -- if not the next meal -- is coming from.

Uta Hagen, a revered acting teacher and a respected actress herself, says that actors are often the "migrant workers" of the arts, forced to go where the work is and seldom able to put down roots or save the rewards of the good life. What's more, she adds, although some stars are idolized, actors as a group usually don't command the kind of respect routinely accorded to ballet dancers, opera singers or concert violinists.

In the face of such overwhelmingly unfavorable odds and dauntingly grim prospects, you'd think that acting would rank somewhere near bond-discounting or indentured servitude on the list of preferred career choices. But, in fact, acting schools like the Juillard Theatre Centre in New York, the Yale School of Drama...
The Compulsion to Act
by Dennis Powers

Actors' Equity Association, the American stage actors' union, admits that up to eighty percent of its members are out of work at any given time. The Screen Actors' guild has said that something like ninety percent of its membership earns less than $5,000 a year from movie acting jobs. A handful of stars can command fees so astronomical that in some cases the word "salary" seems hopelessly inadequate, and a larger number of demi-stars and top featured players make a very good living in the profession. But the great majority toils in relative obscurity, worrying about where the next job -- if not the next meal -- is coming from.

Uta Hagen, a revered acting teacher and a respected actress herself, says that actors are often the "migrant workers" of the arts, forced to go where the work is and seldom able to put down roots or secure the rewards of the good life. What's more, she adds, although some stars are idolized, actors as a group usually don't command the kind of respect routinely accorded to ballet dancers, opera singers or concert violinists.

In the face of such overwhelmingly unfavorable odds and dauntingly dim prospects, you'd think that acting would ruin somewhere near bonita dismantling or indentured servitude on the list of preferred career choices. But, in fact, acting schools like the Juillard Theatre Center in New York, the Yale School of Drama...
In New Haven, the National Theatre Conservatory in Denver and the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco, along with scores of others across the country, are not only packed with students but turn away hundreds of applicants every year. Obviously, the eager young graduates of such schools who turn up annually on the doorsteps of agents and casting directors haven't chosen their profession on the basis of a coldly objective assessment of job opportunities and chances for success. On the contrary, the desire to act seems more

Now In The City
BUSH & TAYLOR
SAN FRANCISCO 775-2233
VALET PARKING
BEFORE AND AFTER THEATRE DINING California Cafe
Bar & Grill
ALSO IN MILL VALLEY, WALNUT CREEK, SAN RAMON, LOS GATOS AND PALO ALTO

Julie Harris, with Charles Durning, in "On Golden Pond" at the Ahmanson Theatre in Los Angeles, likely to be the result of deep feelings and powerful needs that frequently have their roots in early childhood. A classic case in point is that of the legendary Sarah Bernhardt. Born out of wedlock, she was an unloved and neglected child, a ragged, lonely waif who knew little love or acceptance until she got it years later when it came in waves after wave of applause from her audiences. "When she was off the stage, she always seemed to be acting," wrote

We always remember that long before communication was a business, it was an art.

US Sprint
"SOUND'S LIKE YOU'RE RIGHT THERE"

Picture used with the permission of the Bob Fosse Estate. The Music of Bob Fosse was composed by Henry M. Alain. © 1980 US Sprint Communications Company. Sound is a registered trademark of US Sprint Communications Company.
In New Haven, the National Theatre Conservatory in Denver and the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco, along with scores of others across the country, are not only packed with students but turn away hundreds of applicants every year. Obviously, the eager young graduates of such schools who turn up annually on the doorsteps of agents and casting directors haven’t chosen their profession on the basis of a coldly objective assessment of job opportunities and chances for success. On the contrary, the desire to act seems more her biographer Gamaliel Bradford: "She only seemed to be living when she was on it." The same comment, in countless variations, has been made about thousands of other actors. Of course, an actor's love affair with his or her audience has its pitfalls, as the great British actress Ellen Terry pointed out when she remarked, "They love me, you know — not for what I am, but for what they imagine I am.

Julie Harris, a star for more than three decades and the winner of an unmatched five Tony Awards as Broadway's best actress, recalls that "I was a child who felt herself very plain and enjoyed all the pretty girls in school. I went to the movies and saw all those beautiful people, and later to the theatre and felt its magic and wanted to be part of that. Then it wouldn't matter if I were pretty or not, because I would be in a different atmosphere, an imaginative atmosphere where I could be beautiful if I wanted to be."

Harris, who performs her popular one-woman show The Belle of Amherst (about Emily Dickinson) and Carter Beaufort (about Charlotte Bronte) in between taped episodes of the television serial East of Eden, on which she's been a cast member for five years, also remembers that "as school I was a pitiful student in most courses. But when I acted in school plays, everybody applauded me and told me I was good." Like many other future actors, Harris learned early on that performing earned her praise and approval not available elsewhere.

Sada Thompson, another highly regarded actress who has won many awards and honors for her stage performances but is probably best known for her work on a TV series — in this case, the long-running family — has memories of "putting on plays and performing for my parents in the living room — it was their approval, I guess, but for my own enjoyment, too. Yes, I always wanted to be as scarce. Early on, it was getting dressed up and looking as pretty as possible, and wanting to be like somebody in the movies. Later on, I began to see how hard it was and how demanding."

Ellis Rabb, the Broadway actor-director recently seen as Henry Higgins in the San Diego Old Globe Theatre production of Pygmalion, says that "as a boy I knew nothing about the theatre except what I had read on my grandmother's back porch, where I used to force the family to gather and watch me show off — it was what I guess I thought the theatre was. And probably still do."

Unlike many another stage-struck child, both Harris and Thompson had parents who were supportive of their daughter's ambitions. "I had remarkable parents," says Harris, "who took me to the theatre and who loved actors and acting. From my father, I had the feeling that I was somehow remarkable, and I said to myself, 'If he thinks I'm remarkable,' her biographer Gamelian Bradford. "She only seemed to be living when she was on it." The same comment, in countless variations, has been made about thousands of other actors. Of course, an actor's love affair with his or her audience has its pitfalls, as the great British actress Ellen Terry pointed out when she remarked, "They love me, you know — not for what I am, but for what they imagine I am."

Julie Harris, a star for more than three decades and the winner of an unmatched five Tony Awards as Broadway's best actress, recalls that "I was a child who felt herself very plain and envied all the pretty girls in school. I went to the movies and saw all those beautiful people, and later to the theatre and felt its magic and wanted to be part of that. Then it wouldn't matter if I were pretty or not, because I would be in a different atmosphere, an imaginative atmosphere where I could be beautiful if I wanted to be."

Harris, who performs her popular one-woman show The Belle of Amherst (about Emily Dickinson) and Career Girl, Jess (about Charlotte Bronte) in between taping episodes of the television series The Bear, on which she is a cast member for five years, also remembers that "in school I was a pitiful student in most courses. But when I acted in school plays, everybody applauded me and told me I was good." Like many other future actors, Harris learned early on that performing earned her praise and approval not available elsewhere.

Sada Thompson, another highly regarded actress who has won many awards and honors for her stage performances but is probably best known for her work on a TV series — in this case, the long-running family — has memories of "putting on plays and performing for my parents in the living room — it was their approval, I guess, but for my own enjoyment, too. Yes, I always wanted to be an actress. Early on, it was getting dressed up and looking as pretty as possible, and wanting to be like somebody in the movies. Later on, I began to see how hard it was and how demanding."

Ellis Rabb, the Broadway actor-director recently seen as Henry Higgins in the San Diego Old Globe Theatre production of Pygmalion, says that "as a boy I knew nothing about the theatre except what I had read in my grandmother's back porch, where I used to force the family to gather and watch me show off — which is what I guess I thought the theatre was. And probably still do."

Unlike many another stage-struck child, both Harris and Thompson had parents who were supportive of their daughter's ambitions. "I had remarkable parents," says Harris, "who took me to the theatre and who loved actors and acting. From my father, I had the feeling that I was somehow remarkable, and I said to myself, 'If he thinks I'm remarkable,"

At American Airlines, we understand how much planning and hard work go into the Performing Arts. After all, we put on 1,400 performances of our own, every day, throughout the continental U.S., Mexico, Canada, the Caribbean, Hawaii, even Europe. We salute the Arts and their dedication to making every performance something special.
maybe I am. But I don’t think they had any idea that I would become a professional actor or that I would go to New York and have a tough time and be told that I was nothing. They thought it would be sort of a hobby, and that I would go to college and marry, and that would be that. They didn’t know how stubborn I was."

Rabb recalls that his father accepted the idea of his only son becoming an actor and even admired the boy’s gumption in choosing a profession so notoriously tough to crack. But on the other hand, "My mother thought I would get over it. To her it was like a bad cold."

As things turned out, it was some time before his mother came around, but as Rabb tells it, the occasion was worth waiting for: "I got my first professional acting job at the Antioch Shakespeare Festival in Ohio one summer, and my parents came for a visit. My best role of the season was Cardinal Wolsey in Henry VIII, and on the night they came to see the show, it happened that twenty or so people had come backstage afterward to see me. As they crowded around the dressing room door, I spotted my parents at the back of the group. In that moment, I saw in my mother’s eyes a look of utter astonishment. She had expected to walk right up to me with one of her characteristic after-the-show comments like ‘Why on earth did you have to wear that funny-looking nose all through the play?’ But for the first time in her life she had to wait to see me, while other people were complimenting and congratulating me. So by the time she and my father got to me, she didn’t quite know what to say. It was no big deal but I think that was the moment when she realized that maybe I’d made the right choice after all.

“Shortly after that she brought a very large press book and began to keep a record of my career. Now, when I go home to Memphis for a visit, she always says, ‘Have you even looked at your scrapbook?’ You know I wrack my fingers to the bone on those things."

When parents do object to the idea of a son or daughter treading the boards, it’s usually because they want to spare their child the rigors and uncertainties of the actor’s life — or because, as stage and film actor Roscoe Lee Browne ruefully acknowledges, some vestiges of the age-old view of theatre folk as ‘essentially sinful, careless and irresponsible gypsies’ lingers even today. Conservative parents still cringe, if only inwardly, at the idea of their innocent darling plunging into a gaudy backstage world where conventional morality is blithely waved aside, all sexual orientations are welcomed, and even rather bizarre personal eccentricities are cheerfully tolerated.

As it happens, Browne, whose most recent Broadway appearance was as co-star of My One and Only, has no childhood memories of brooding parental disapproval to pursue his acting ambitions,
maybe I am. But I don't think they had any idea that I would become a professional actor or that I would go to New York and have a tough time and be told that I was nothing. They thought it would be sort of a hobby, and that I would go to college and marrying, and that would be that. They didn't know how stubborn I was."

Rabb recalls that his father accepted the idea of his only son becoming an actor and even admired the boy's gumption in choosing a profession so notoriously tough to crack. But on the other hand, "My mother thought I would get over it. To her it was like a bad cold."

As things turned out, it was some time before his mother came around, but as Rabb tells it, the occasion was worth waiting for: "I got my first professional acting job at the Antioch Shakespeare Festival in Ohio one summer, and my parents came for a visit. My best role of the season was Cardinal Wolsey in Henry VIII, and on the night they came to see the show, it happened that twenty or so people had come backstage afterward to see me. As they crowded around the dressing room door, I spotted my parents at the back of the group; in that moment, I saw in my mother's eyes a look of utter astonishment. She had expected to walk right up to me with one of her characteristic after-the-show comments like 'Why on earth did you have to wear that funny-looking nose all through the play?' But for the first time in her life she had to wait to see me, while other people were complimenting me. So by the time she and my father got to me, she didn't quite know what to say. It was no big deal but I think that was the moment when she realized that maybe I'd made the right choice after all.

"Shortly after that she bought a very large press book and began to keep a record of my career. Now, when I go home to Memphis for a visit, she always says, 'Have you ever looked at your scrapbooks? You know I keep my fingers to the bone on those things."

When parents do object to the idea of a son or daughter treading the boards, it's usually because they want to spare their child the rigors and uncertainties of the actor's life — or because, as stage and film actor Roscoe Lee Browne ruefully acknowledges, some vestiges of the age-old view of theatre folk as 'essentially sinful, careless and irresponsible gypsies' lingers even today. Conservative parents still cringe, if only inwardly, at the idea of their innocent darling plunging into a gaudy backstage world where conventional morality is hilariously tossed aside, all sexual orientations are welcomed, and even rather bizarre personal eccentricities are cheerfully tolerated.

As it happens, Browne, whose most recent Broadway appearance was as costar of My One and Only, has no childhood memories of brooding parental disapproval to pursue his acting ambitions.
San Francisco's most exciting cabaret
Just one block from Union Square

- cabaret entertainment nightly
- cocktail hour shows
- theater music & dancing
- midnight comedy

Bar open 4 pm til 2 am daily

THE CITY CABARET
401 Mason Street
San Francisco 94102
441-555P

An International Experience

Atlanta
Beverly Hills
Chicago
Dallas
Denver
Houston
Kansas City
London
Los Angeles
New York
Oklahoma City
Philadelphia
San Francisco
Seattle
Singapore
Sydney
Toronto
Vancouver BC
Washington, DC

TRADER VIC'S
23 Grant Place
San Francisco
776-3352

because they didn't surface until he was nearly 30. By that time, he had already been a truck driver, a college teacher of literature and French, and a sales executive for a large liquor import company. It was in 1996, when the firm wanted to promote him to a top management position, that he suddenly began to feel trapped, the "company was mapping out my future for me, and if I took the job I'd be there for the rest of my life."

Ignoring dire warnings from friends like Leonette Price and Josephine Premice, who spoke from firsthand experience about the difficulties of carving out a theatrical career, Browne abruptly quit his lucrative job and announced to one and all, "I'm going to become an actor." Until that time, he'd been an avid playwright who occasionally dabbled in amateur theatricals. But, he now realized, the desire to act professionally had been simmering on the back burner for years, and it was now or never. Notice that he was, Premice took him under her wing, bringing him a stack of theatrical trade papers to give him some idea of what he was getting into.

"I opened one called Show Business," Browne remembers, "and there on the page was an announcement that Joseph Papp was holding final auditions for the inaugural season of the New York Shakespeare Festival. I knew Shakespeare, even if I'd never acted it, so I thought, why not?" By 6 p.m. the next day I had my first acting job, playing the Soothsayer in Julius Caesar."

From then on, Browne worked pretty steadily, becoming a pillar of the Off-Broadway theatre before going on to make films in the 1970s. One of his foremost images is the 1961 production of Jean Genet's The Maids, whose original cast also included James Earl Jones. Louis Gossett, Cicely Tyson, Godfrey Cambridge, Raymond St. Jacques, Maya Angelou and Charles Gordone.

Actor-director Dakin Matthews has had

Sample the ravishing fragrance of Raffine in the front pages of this program. And see the exceptional offer.

Mezabote

Midnight, Ciao is open until midnight. (The Italians like to eat late.) Come for espresso after the theater. Or for carpaccio before the clubs. It's the perfect end to the perfect beginning. Ristorante Ciao, 230 Jackson St. 982-9600.
San Francisco excitation is just a boat ride away. Just tell your friends to join you on the Bay Area's longest running boat, BART!
Always a good plan to take BART to avoid the headaches of traffic and the expense of parking. In fact, if you're out for an evening of music or theater, take BART and discover why San Francisco is still the fun place to go.

An Intimate Experience

San Francisco, CA 94111

TRADERS VIC'S
230 Jackson St., San Francisco
739-2322

Shakespeare Festival. I knew Shakespeare, even if I'd never acted it, so I thought, why not? By 6 p.m. the next day I had my first acting job, playing the Soothsayer in Julius Caesar.

From then on, Browne worked pretty steadily, becoming a pillar of the Off-Broadway theatre before going on to make films in the 1970s. One of his fondest memories is the 1961 production of Jean Cocteau's The Black, whose original cast also included James Earl Jones, Louis Gossett, Cicely Tyson, Godfrey Cambridge, Raymond St. Jacques, Maya Angelou and Charles Gordone.

An original director, Donald Matthews, had had the kind of career that provokes snarling and teeth-grasping from dedicated players who’ve wanted to do nothing but act for as long as they can remember and have fought tooth and nail for every little break that’s come their way. Like Browne, Matthews — seen last summer in the Mark Taper Forum repertory productions of The Red Thing and Hedda Gabler — came to acting relatively late in life. But for him, acting remained a sideline for nearly two decades.

He calls himself an “accidental actor” and admits that, in spite of substantial recognition and the ability to attract a succession of performing jobs with increasingly prestigious companies, he thought of himself until recently as “a college teacher who acted on the side.” As a youngster, Matthews spent eleven years as a seminarian studying for the priesthood. At 23, he left the seminary and got a job teaching at Sierra High School in San Mateo.

In 1965, a fellow teacher saw a newspaper article announcing auditions for the old Marin Shakespeare Festival, then a fledgling company with nonprofessional status. Seeing that Henry IV, Part I was on the Festival schedule and remembering that Matthews had bragged about playing Falstaff as a college student, he dared him to try out for the part. “I thought, why not?” Matthews remembers.

Lugging a huge, heavy volume of Shakespeare’s complete works and swapping through his dark blue suit at the height of a heat wave in the Festival’s outdoor theatre, Matthews felt completely out of place but doggedly completed the audition and, to his astonishment, got the job. “After that,” he says, “I just sort of kept on acting — but always on the side, as an avocation.”

Why did it take Matthews nearly twenty years to realize that acting was really what he wanted to do with his life?

Dakin Matthews — with Robert Dunham — in the A.C.T. production of Leonard Whiting’s “Angels Fall.”

AMERICAN SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

WE PERFORM FOR YOU!

As American Savings, we’ve been performing for you for more than 80 years. Our high interest earning accounts will make more in your ears. The convenience of more than 150 locations statewide will make choreographing your financial transactions easy. And you are certain to enjoy our carefully selected array of services. Visit one of our branches and present the coupon below for a free gift.

If you are a member of the American Savings Club, you’ll receive the score of free services and discount offers. You’ll enjoy “Rewards” at the bonus interest program for members. And, our discount travel program will have you heading for the “South Pacific” or other exotic ports at a fraction of the real price.

American Savings and Loan Association — where under the sun and the stars发光, the reviews are always great!

More than 150 branches throughout California

Present this coupon for:

A FREE SET OF SIX NORMAN ROCKWELL PRINTS

11” x 14” size, in full color, suitable for framing

Name: ____________________________
Address: ____________________________
City: ____________________  Zip: __________
Phone: ____________________________

I have an account at American Savings.
[ ] I am not an American Savings customer.

[ ] My age is under 18. [ ] 18 to 29. [ ] 30 or over.
[ ] I have read and understand the terms of this plan available to American Savings Club members only.

Consult your telephone directory for the American Savings branch nearest you.

American Savings Bank, a division of American Savings and Loan Association. Member FDIC.
the kind of career that provokes snarling and teeth-grashing from dedicated players who've wanted to do nothing but act for as long as they can remember and have fought tooth and nail for every little break that's come their way. Like Browne, Matthews — seen last summer in the Mark Taper Forum repertory productions of The Real Thing and Hedda Gabler — came to acting relatively late in life. But for him, acting remained a sideline for nearly two decades.

He calls himself an "accidental actor" and admits that, in spite of substantial recognition and the ability to attract a succession of performing jobs with increasingly prestigious companies, he thought of himself until recently as "a college teacher who acted on the side." As a younger, Matthews spent eleven years as a seminarian studying for the priesthood. At 23, he left the seminary and got a job teaching at Sierra High School in San Mateo.

In 1965, a fellow teacher saw a newspaper article announcing auditions for the old Marin Shakespeare Festival, then a fledgling company with nonprofessional status. Seeing that Henry IV, Part I was on the Festival schedule and remembering that Matthews had bragged about playing Falstaff as a college student, he dared him to try out for the part. "I thought, why not?" Matthews remembers. "Lugging a huge, heavy volume of Shakespeare's complete works and slogging through his dark blue suit at the height of a heat wave in the Festival's outdoor theatre, Matthews felt completely out of place but doggedly completed the audition and, to his astonishment, got the job. "After that," he says, "I just sort of kept on acting — but always on the side, as an avocation." Why did it take Matthews nearly twenty years to realize that acting was really what he wanted to do with his life? "A Christmas Carol" with Robert Duvall is "in the A.C.T. production of LaMont Wilson's "Angels Fall."

Dustin Hoffman — with Robert Duvall in the A.C.T. production of LaMont Wilson's "Angels Fall."

AMERICAN SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

WE PERFORM FOR YOU!

At American Savings, we've been performing for you for more than 150 years! Our high interest earning accounts will make it easy to earn. The convenience of more than 150 locations statewide will make administering your financial transactions easy. And, you are certain to enjoy our carefully orchestrated employees of services. Visit one of our branches soon and present the coupon below for a free gift. If you're a lover of art, ask about "The American Painters Club." To a Yankee Doodle Dandy, you'll applaud the score of free services and discount offers. You'll "hit the mark" at the bonus interest program for members only. And, our discount travel program will have you heading for the "South Pacific," or other exotic ports at a fraction of the usual price.

American Savings and Loan Association — where value is the star and the reviews are always great!

More than 150 branches throughout California

A FREE SET OF SIX NORMAN ROCKWELL PRINTS
11" x 14" size, in full-color, suitable for framing

Note:

Address

City

State

Zip

Phone

Fax

Work

Home:

I agree under 50. I do not agree under 50.

If I have an account at American Savings, I am not an American Savings customer.

Consult your telephone directory for the American Savings branch nearest you.

American Savings and Loan Association, NMLS 445986

"American Painters Club" members only!
“Well, for one thing, I loved teaching and found a lot of satisfaction in it,” he explains. “And I still do, although I’m taking more leaves of absence now than ever before. It wasn’t that I thought the theatre was demeaning or anything like that; I guess it just never crossed my mind that it might be the profession for me. And I never really had to choose one or the other, because I could always do both. Somehow I managed to have an acting and directing, and Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, where I was artistic director until resigning after this year’s summer season opening.”

“I offered to resign because I could never guarantee anymore that I would actually be on site when I was needed. Opportunities are beginning to open up for me now, both in acting and directing, that I feel I can’t turn down. And I felt the Festival would be better off with someone who could commit full-time to it.” And, he confides, although he enjoys directing, “especially plays that are extraordinarily demanding of language, well, frankly, I’d rather act.”

Now that he’s working in Los Angeles more than ever before, Matthews is finding that film and television work has become a prerequisite for getting first-class stage acting jobs. “If a theatre has to choose between me and somebody who’s only been acting for three years but has a TV series, they’ll probably pick the other guy, even though I have twenty years of experience. And if by chance they hire both of us, they’ll pay him more than they pay me. It’s unfortunate, but film and TV credits give an actor national recognition, and without them, he has less control over his destiny as an artist.”

What does he think about acting on television? “Well, as a friend of mine says, usually it’s not really acting. It’s something like acting. And it’s what you have to do to support your acting habits.”

Needless to say, things don’t always fall neatly into place when an actor is just starting out, and a young performer can wait a long time for the fabled “big break” that opens all the doors. For Julie Harris, the turning point came in a now forgotten play of 1948, Bessie Breuer’s Sunny Beach, directed by Elia Kazan, in which she played a young Southern woman married to an emotionally disturbed returning World War II pilot. She’d had another man’s baby while her husband was overseas. “It was a very touching

Alaska
and Bach.

When you take a World Explorer cruise to Alaska, you not only see more spectacular scenery. You hear more beautiful music.

You’ll visit more ports than on any other Alaskan cruise. While you listen to the sounds of string quartet, chamber ensembles, and a full dance orchestra every night.

You’ll learn all there is to know about Alaska, too because we have experts on board to give you insight into everything from history to geology. Best of all, you can take our 14-day cruise for as low as $1,605 per person. About the price of many 7-day Alaskan cruises.

If all this sounds good to you, see your Travel Agent or call us at the 800 number below. And book your Alaskan cruise on board our S.S. Universe.

World Explorer Cruises
14 City Hall Office, Suite A, Los Angeles, California
(800) 851-3013

Dakin Matthews is the Center Theatre Group's Mark Taper Forum "The Real Thing" by Tom Stoppard. He'll be with the Center Theatre Group's "The Real Thing" by Tom Stoppard. And until recently, he has divided his time between San Francisco's A.C.T., where he acted and directed, and Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, where he was artistic director until resigning after this year's summer season opened.
“Well, for one thing, I loved teaching and found a lot of satisfaction in it,” he explains. “And I still do, although I’m taking more leaves of absence now than ever before. It wasn’t that I thought the theatre was demeaning or anything like that; I guess it just never crossed my mind that it might be the profession for me. And I never really had to choose one or the other, because I could always do both. Somehow I managed to have an acting and directed, and Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, where he was artistic director until resigning after this year’s summer season opened.

“I offered to resign because I could never guarantee anymore that I would actually be on site when I was needed. Opportunities are beginning to open up for me now, both in acting and directing, that I feel I can’t turn down. And I felt the Festival would be better off with someone who could commit full-time to it.” And, he confesses, although he enjoys directing, “especially plays that are extraordinarily demanding of language, well, frankly, I’d rather act.”

Now that he’s working in Los Angeles more than ever before, Matthews is finding that film and television work has become a prerequisite for getting first-class stage acting jobs. “If a theatre has to choose between me and somebody who’s only been acting for three years but has a TV series, they’ll probably pick the other guy, even though I have twenty years of experience. And if by chance they hire both of us, they’ll pay him more than they pay me. It’s unfortunate, but film and TV credits give an actor national recognition, and without them, he has less control over his destiny as an artist.”

What does he think about acting on television? “Well, as a friend of mine says, usually it’s not really acting. It’s something like acting. And it’s what you have to do to support your acting habit.”

Needless to say, things don’t always fall so neatly into place when an actor is just starting out, and a young performer can wait a long time for the famed “big break” that opens all the doors. For Julie Harris, the turning point came in a now forgotten play of 1948, Bessie Beecher’s Sunbonnet Beach, directed by Elia Kazan, in which she played a young Southern woman, married to an emotionally disturbed returning World War II pilot. She’d had another man’s baby while her husband was overseas. “It was a very touching career without having to leave the Bay Area to do it.”

Dakin Matthews is in the Center Theatre Group’s Mark Taper Forum’s “The Real Thing” by Tom Stoppard.

In the past few years, Matthews has turned his hand to directing. This fall, he and his wife Ann McNaughton staged “his-and-hers” productions of Bernard Shaw’s Man and Superman and the theatrical centerpiece Don Juan in Hell for Denver Center Theatre Company. And until recently, he has divided his time between San Francisco’s ACT, where he acted and Bach.

Alaska

When you take a World Explorer cruise to Alaska, you not only see more spectacular scenery. You hear more beautiful music.

You’ll visit more ports than on any other Alaskan cruise. While you listen to the sounds of string quartets, Chamber ensembles, and a full dance orchestra every night.

You’ll learn all there is to know about Alaska, too. Because we have experts on board to give you insight into everything from history to geology.

Best of all, you can take our 14-day cruise for as low as $1,600 per person. About the price of many 7-day Alaskan cruises.

If all this sounds good to you, see your Travel Agent or call us at the 800 number below. And book your Alaskan cruise on board our SS. Universe.

WORLD EXPLORER CRUISES
14 City Charter Cruise Co., Inc.
9100 N. Tustin Avenue, Suite 121
Costa Mesa, CA 92627
(800) 855-3053

credit and mistakes are solely to me."

Matthews is box office. Even more so in recent years: he has scored with a 1984 production of the Off-Broadway hit "The Good, the Bad and the Queen"...
"With the best food in mind..."

Lunch or Dinner at

SUTTER 300

an affordable treat!

Before Theater

Restaurant Sutter 500: 362-3346
Café Sutter: 362-4884

After Theater

The restaurant and the café are open seven days a week.

500 Sutter at Powell, Embarcadero Square

EXPECTING?

Lullaby Lane

Over 60 crib sets and chair sets
all at Discount Prices!

Infant & Children's Department Store
Clothing and Accessories
Since 1897
556 San Mateo Ave. • San Bruno
(415) 588-7644
Open Every Day
3 weeks from S.F. Airport

"part," says Harris, "and it showed off that waifish quality I had." Luckily, director Harold Clurman saw the play, and Harris's performance convinced him that she could play the tricky role of 12-year-old Frankie Adams in The Member of the Wedding. "I never had to read for the part of Frankie," she recalls, "and it was the beginning of everything for me." Casson McCuller's play opened in 1950, and critic Brooks Atkinson described Harris as "an actress compounded of light and spirit." When it became her first film two years later, she went on with Oscar nomination as best actress.

As any actor will tell you, acting is usually very hard work. In John Gielgud's words, "Acting is never really easy. Sometimes, you know, it is an escape, occasionally a pleasure, often a responsibility." Writer Edward Wajenkechi puts his finger on one of the things that make acting so difficult and that puts actors in a uniquely vulnerable position when he said, "Only the actor gives himself to his audience, only he dramatizes his own personality, uses his own body as the instrument on which he plays.

Do the rewards and satisfactions of acting justify the hard work and the risky, uncertain life that goes along with it? Sada Thompson, who spent much of last year playing Amanda Wingfield in The Glass Menagerie at the Stratford, Ontario, Festival Theatre, thinks they do: "Most of all, it's the people. There's a rich sort of brotherhood possible in a theatre company, and it's a wonderful thing. And it's wonderful to be onstage with somebody when you know just how their heart is beating and pulses are leaping back and forth between you that are exciting and exciting. And then there's the audience.
When things start coming together onstage and the audience turns into this one creature, it's just marvelous, even though it doesn't last very long. The theatre is so evanescent. It's just a breath, a breath on the evening air."
part," says Harris, "and it showed off that wafish quality I had." Luckily, director Harold Clurman saw the play, and Harris's performance convinced him that she could play the tricky role of 12-year-old Frankie Adams in The Member of the Wedding. "I never had to read for the part of Frankie," she recalls, "and it was the beginning of everything for me." Casson McCullers's play opened in 1950 and critic Brooks Atkinson described Harris as "an actress compounded of light and spirit." When it became her first film two years later, she got an Oscar nomination as best actress.

As any actor will tell you, acting is usually very hard work. In John Gielgud's words, "Acting is never really easy. Sometimes, you know, it is an escape, occasionally a pleasure, often a responsibility." Writer Edward Waggoner describes his finger on one of the things that makes acting so difficult and that puts actors in a uniquely vulnerable position when he said, "Only the actor gives himself to his audience, only he dramatizes his own personality, uses his own body as the instrument on which he plays."

Do the rewards and satisfactions of acting justify the hard work and the risky, uncertain life that goes along with it? Sada Thompson, who spent much of last year playing Amanda Wingfield in The Glass Menagerie at the Stratford, Ontario, Festival Theatre, thinks they do: "Most of all, it's the people. There's a rich sort of brotherhood possible in a theatre company, and it's a wonderful thing. And it's wonderful to be onstage with somebody when you know just how their heart is beating and pulses are leaping back and forth between you that are enlivening and exciting. And then there's the audience. When things start coming together onstage and the audience turns into this one creature, it's just marvelous, even though it doesn't last very long. The theatre is so evanescent. It's just a breath, a breath on the evening air."
Many actors have memories of going to movies and plays as youngsters and being deeply affected, even inspired by the stars they saw. Among Julie Harris's favorites as a young girl were Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Laurence Olivier, Merle Oberon, and Vivien Leigh. "I remember seeing Gone With the Wind perhaps a dozen times," she says. "Later, in the theatre, I saw Laurette Taylor in The Glass Menagerie, and that really changed my life. I could hardly find my way out of the theatre. I was so moved."

“One of the first times I realized that acting might be something I’d want to do with my life was when I saw David Ogden Steer [the actor later known for his TV work on M*A*S*H] playing King Lear back in the sixties,” Matthews recalls. "He really knocked me out of my seat. Another performance that had the same effect was the character actor G. Wood as Sir Anthony Absolute in The Rivals with Eva LeGallienne’s company. And there are some people, Elizabeth Huddles is one, whose work always makes me proud to be an actor.”

The actors who fascinated me were always stage actors,” says Ellis Rabb. "When I was a student at Carnegie Tech, I would go into New York and see the Lunts, the Oliviers, Katharine Cornell, Helen Hayes and Eva LeGallienne. They were really my role models.”

Among the most persistent cliches about actors is that they never grow up, that they remain childish creatures inhabiting an imaginary world cut off from “real life.” Thompson believes the image may have something to do with the fact that an actor “has to retain throughout his life certain qualities — like openness, spontaneity, responsiveness — that people generally regard as childish. So I think they assume we must be childlike in other ways, too.” In truth, she adds, "actors really have to be so endlessly inventive with their lives, always pulling themselves up by their bootstraps, that I..."
Many actors have memories of going to movies and plays as youngsters and being deeply affected, even inspired by the stars they saw. Among Julie Harris’s favorites as a young girl were Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Laurence Olivier, Merle Oberon and Vivien Leigh. “I remember seeing Gone With the Wind perhaps a dozen times,” she says. “Later, in the theatre, I saw Laurette Taylor in The Glass Menagerie, and that really changed my life. I could hardly find my way out of the theatre, I was so moved.”

“One of the first times I realized that acting might be something I’d want to do with my life was when I saw David Ogden Stiers (the actor later known for his TV work on M*A*S*H) playing King Lear back in the sixties,” Matthews recalls. “He really knocked me out of my seat. Another performance that had the same effect was the character actor G. Wood as Sir Anthony Absolute in The Rivals with Eva LeGallienne’s company. And there are some people. Elizabeth Huddle is one, whose work always makes me proud to be an actor.”

The actors who fascinated me were always stage actors,” says Ellis Rabb. “When I was a student at Carnegie Tech, I would go into New York and see the Lunts, the Oliviers, Katherine Cornell, Helen Hayes and Eva LeGallienne. They were really my role models.”

Among the most persistent cliches about actors is that they never grow up, that they remain childish creatures inhabiting an imaginary world cut off from “real life.” Thompson believes the image may have something to do with the fact that an actor “has to retain throughout his life certain qualities — like openness, spontaneity, responsiveness — that people generally regard as childish. So I think they assume we must be childlike in other ways, too.” In truth, she adds, “actors really have to be so endlessly inventive with their lives, always pulling themselves up by their bootstraps, that I... think they're actually people of stronger character than most other fellows I've met."

Have times changed much the years since these few players — all of them in the 40-60 age range — felt the lure of the acting bug? In some ways, yes. For one thing, acting as a profession is at least somewhat more acceptable now, even to anxious parents. Training opportunities are more widely available than ever before. And the growth of regional theater has brought the professional stage to virtually all over the nation and with it, more role models for young hopefuls as well as more roles for working actors.

Some things, however, are constant. At 22-year-old Timothy Piggo, a first-year acting student at the Denver Center Theater Company's National Theatre Conservatory, reveals when he talks about his Utah childhood. "I was 11 years old and planning to become a Baptist minister," he remembers. "One night I went to see my sister in a Salt Lake City Acting Company production of The Little Foxes. It was only the second play I'd seen in my life. I remember wanting her and thinking, how wonderful it was, because she wasn't just my sister anymore. She was someone else entirely, someone I'd never met. The whole notion of being able to become someone else, to interpret life and create a whole other world completely fascinated me. By the time it was over, I knew that's what I wanted to do."

A school-sponsored audition to New York where Piggo and his ninth-grade classmates took in Annie, A Chorus Line, Deathtrap and half a dozen other Broadway hits, cinched it. When he graduated from the University of Utah — where he had been the only black student in the actor-training program — he auditioned for the National Theatre Conservatory and was accepted. Since last September, he's been taking classes in voice, speech, scenic and movement, acting, dance and cultural history, as well as applying what he's learned to workshop productions of

Harry's Bar and American Grill
500 Van Ness Avenue
(415) 86 HARRY

A Christmas present Scrooge would love

This season, The Westin St. Francis offers you San Francisco's most economical Christmas gift package. With luxury accommodations at 50% off on Union Square. A host of complimentary shopping services, courtesy of Max's. And much more, including a special December Dickens Festival in the English Grill. Just ask for the "Holiday Package" when making your reservation. Call toll free (800) 228-8355, your travel agent, or (415) 397-2700.

The Westin St. Francis
San Francisco
think they're actually people of stronger character than most other folks I've met.”

Have things changed much the years since these five players — all of them in the 45-60 age range — first felt the lure of the acting bug? In some ways, yes. For one thing, acting as a profession is at least somewhat more acceptable now, even to ascetic parents. Training opportunities are more widely available than ever before. And the growth of regional theater has brought the professional stage to nearly all over the nation and wish it, more for models for young hopefuls as well as for more roles for working actors.

Some things, however, are constant, as 25-year-old Timothy Pigg, a first-year acting student at the Denver Center Theater Company’s National Theatre Conservatory, reveals when he talks about his Utah childhood. “I was 11 years old and planning to become a Baptist minister,” he remembers. “One night I went to see my sister in a Salt Lake City Acting Company production of The Little Foxes. It was only the second play I’d seen in my life. I remember wanting her and thinking, how wonderful it was, because she wasn’t just my sister anymore. She was someone else entirely, someone I’d never met. The whole notion of being able to become someone else, to interpret life and create a whole other world completely fascinated me. By the time I was 14, I knew that’s what I wanted to do.”

A school-sponsored excursion to New York, where Pigg and his ninth-grade classmates took in Annie, A Chorus Line, Deathtrap and half a dozen other Broadway hits, cinched it. When he graduated from the University of Utah — where he had been the only black student in the acting-training program — he auditioned for the National Theatre Conservatory and was accepted. Since last September, he’s been taking classes in voice, speech, scansion, movement, acting, dance, and cultural history, as well as applying what he’s learned to workshop productions of
“The Butler Did It”

You’re gently awakened to find your self-prased, your shoes shined. Your coffee steaming in a fine china cup on a silver tray is beside your favorite newspaper. There’s no mystery about it. At the Sheraton Grande in Los Angeles, the Butler did it! There’s a Butler on every floor for every guest. No request is too large or too small. Your first request may well be for reservations. It so, just ring us. 800-225-3333

Sheraton Grande
The Hospitality people of ITT
333 S. Figueres Street
Los Angeles, CA 90071
(213) 617-1433

The Butler did it.

In the next phase of the students’ training, the emphasis will be on working with classical texts.

Piggee is aware that he faces tough odds as a young actor but is convinced that his “endurance and personal commitment” will carry the day. “If my belief and my desire are strong enough, it will happen for me.” And although his mother occasionally makes wishful references to his “going back to the ministry,” he feels that his parents are behind him all the way. Has he had second thoughts about acting as a career? “Well, I can convince myself for about five minutes that there’s something else I’d rather do,” he confesses, “but I always come back to acting, because I can’t imagine my life without the theatre.”

Why do people become actors? There are probably as many answers as there are actors. For most, a powerful urge for self-expression plays a big part in the decision. So does the opportunity “to interpret life,” as Piggee puts it, and to “become” somebody else, to communicate the thoughts and feelings, the poetry of great playwrights, to move an audience to laughter and tears. Some seek approval or validation at the outset. Others hope to overcome shyness or personal problems such as stammering — it’s true that some actors who stammer frequently offstage have perfect speech as soon as they get “into character.” In Sada Thompson’s words, “Nothing seems to open up your soul in quite the same way as acting, you can say things that you just can’t communicate in other ways.”

One of the most distinctive reasons I have ever heard came from a successful character actor. When I asked him how he’d come to settle on acting as a career, he said, “Well, I’ll tell you. I was sitting in my cell at a state prison, trying like hell to figure out how I could make a living when I got out. What I needed to find was a job where my prison record wouldn’t be a handicap. What I came up with was acting. That was years ago and it’s never been a problem.”

Samuel L. Jackson at the right (photograph here with Antonio Fargas) in his award-winning performance in Derek Walcott’s “The Dream on Monkey Mountain” at the Mark Taper Forum in 1975.

Masons Restaurant
Private Dining Rooms
Piano Entertainment
Rightly
Cocktails from 5:30
Dinner from 6:00
California at Passav
Apo Rob Hill
952-0115

Uncover French Country Dining
La Cuisine de Savoie
Garfield Avenue
805-904-0040

SMALL BUSINESS SUCCESS
THE TRUE CAUSE OF SMALL BUSINESS FAILURE IS PERSONAL.- IF YOUR BUSINESS GROWING UP. LET US HELP YOU CUT THROUGH THE TOUGH PROBLEMS BLOCKING YOUR WAY TO SUCCESS.
YOU CAN COUNT ON US! SATISFACTION UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEED.
The Business Clinic
145 Fourth Street, San Francisco, CA 94117
(415) 510-3838 • 10 AM TO 7 PM • FREE PARKING
CONSULTANTS TO BUSINESS SINCE 1976
Fifth of July and The Blood Knot. In the next phase of the students’ training, the emphasis will be on working with classical texts.

Piggot is aware that he faces tough odds as a young actor but is convinced that his “endurance and personal commitment” will carry the day: “If my belief and my desire are strong enough, it will happen for me.” And although his mother occasionally makes wishful references to his “going back to the ministry,” he feels that his parents are behind him all the way. Has he had second thoughts about acting as a career? “Well, I can envision myself for about five minutes that there’s something else I’d rather do,” he confesses, “but I always come back to acting, because I can’t imagine my life without the theatre.”

Why do people become actors? There are probably as many answers as there are actors. For most, a powerful urge for self-expression plays a big part in the decision. So does the opportunity “to interpret life,” as Piggot puts it, and to “become” somebody else, to communicate the thoughts and feelings, the poetry of great playwrights, to move an audience to laughter and tears. Some seek approval or validation at the outset. Others hope to overcome shyness or personal problems such as stammering—“it’s true that some actors who stammer frequently offstage have perfect speech as soon as they get into character.” In Sada Thompson’s words, “Nothing seems to open up your soul in quite the same way as acting. You can say things that you just can’t communicate in other ways.”

One of the most distinctive reasons I have ever heard came from a successful character actor. When I asked him how he came to settle on acting as a career, he said, “Well, I’ll tell you. I was sitting in my cell at a state prison, trying like hell to figure out how I could make a living when I got out. What I needed to find was a job where my prison record wouldn’t be a handicap. What I came up with was acting. That was years ago and it’s never been a problem.”

The Butler did it.

You’re gently awakened to find your self-pressed shirt, your shoes shining. Your coffee steaming in a fine china cup on a silver tray alongside your favorite newspaper. There’s no mystery about it. At the Sheraton Grande in Los Angeles, the Butler did it.

There’s a Butler on every floor for every guest. No request is too large or too small. Your first request may well be for reservations. It so, just ring us.

800-255-3535

Sheraton Grande
The Hospitality People of ITT

333 S. Figueroa Street
Los Angeles, CA 90071
(213) 617-1133

Masons Restaurant
in the heart of LA

Private Dining Rooms
Piano Entertainment nightly
Cocktails from 5:30
Dinner from 6:00
California at its best
Apol Rob Hill
592-0315

Uncover French Country Dining
At Home in Southern California

Le Olivier
by Stanley Eichelbaum

The good news is that traditional French cuisine is back in vogue. I'm delighted to say that the food Mafia's effort to bury it under an avalanche of trendy cooking, from Cajun to Thai, hasn't worked. French food, done with classical charm and know-how, forms the basis of three small, bistro-like restaurants that are recent arrivals in town. All three are the personal domains of seasoned chefs from France. All three are modestly priced. And all are eminently commendable.

Let's begin at Le Piano Zinc, 708 14th St. (Phone: 431-5266), just off Market Street in quarters that used to house Gérard's Bistrot. The new owner-chef, Michel Laurent, took as his partner a French compatriot, Joel Coutre, remembered as the manager of Camargue. The men met at Le Costel, where they worked in 1979. Laurent went on to return to Paris. Now, he's doing simpler food, but of elegant quality. Under the slogan, "A Renaissance of Classic French Cuisine," which is certainly a welcome thought. Laurent and Coutre chose the name "Le Piano Zinc" after a piano bar in Paris, the "zinc" being the durable material that covers a good many bars in France. The bistro, though, is that it only a name. There's no zinc covering on a small wine bar, or for that matter, on a white piano that stands near it. Nonetheless, the atmosphere is overwhelmingly French and exceedingly agreeable. Banquettes line the walls, and the close quarters make it possible for you to get to know your neighbor. The crowd is friendly and casual, and the interesting selection of appetizers and entrées gives one ample cause for conversation. Coutre is an affable host, and together with Laurent's expertise in the kitchen, the pair couldn't possibly fail.

A prix fixe dinner, at $30, is something of a feat. You're fed three courses: a shiitake mushroom pâté, a lobster turnover and a truly winning warm salad of quail and bean sprouts. You get a choice of three main courses—pleasanthn with a Cognac sauce, or two orders of beef Bourguignon, or, the one I tried, a paillard of Provençal veal sautéed with a sherry sauce. You have the feeling here that someone cares a lot about what he's doing. The vegetables come in a splendid combination of pureed broccoli, pureed carrots, sautéed spinach and corn flitter. If you order la carte, you can have a fine house salad of mixed baby lettuces ($3.50) and a meticulous underdone rack of lamb in a no-nonsense presentation with natural juices and baked garlic ($25). Desserts are also notable, like a sensual black currant mousse cake ($4.50).

Next, there's Janot's in the heart of downtown, near Union Square. You'll find Janot's at 44 Campton Place (phone: 431-5733), in an attractive brick-walled setting with brass trim and cloth panels. It's named for Jacques Janot, long-time owner of the Bicolor Restaurant way out on Geary. He's now teamed with chef Pierre Morin, a native of Angers in the Loire Valley. For such a small place (about 40 seats), Janot's offers a fairly extensive menu made up of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, grilled entrées, poached or braised entrées, and a large selection of house-made desserts. For a starter, you can have an excellent roulette of salmon stuffed with shrimp, mushrooms and spinach, with a basil sauce ($5.50). I would also recommend the hearts of romaine salad done with a tangy vinaigrette and grated Roquefort strewn over it ($4.50). A classic steak with French fries
DINING SCENE

by Stanley Eichelbaum

The good news is that traditional French cuisine is back in vogue. I'm delighted to say that the food Mafia's effort to bury it under an avalanche of trendy cooking, from Cajun to Thai, hasn't worked. French food, done with classical charm and know-how, forms the basis of three small, bistro-like restaurants that are recent arrivals in town. All three are the personal domains of seasoned chefs from France. All three are modestly priced. And all are eminently commendable.

Let's begin at Le Piano Zinc, 708 14th St. (Phone: 431-5266), just off Market Street in a quarters that used to house Gérard's. The new owner-chef, Michel Laurent, took as his partner a French compatriot, Joel Coutre, remembered as the manager of Camargue. The men met at Le Costel, where they worked in 1979. Laurent left to return to Paris, and worked for a time at Maxim's. Now, he's doing simpler food, but of elegant quality, under the slogan, "A Renaissance of Classic French Cuisine," which is certainly a welcome thought. Laurent and Coutre chose the name Le Piano Zinc after a piano bar in Paris, the "zinc" being the durable material that covers a good many bars in France. The bitch, though, is that it's only a name. There's no zinc covering on a small wine bar, or for that matter, on a white piano that stands near it. Nonetheless, the atmosphere is overwhelmingly French and exceedingly agreeable. Banquettes line the walls, and the close quarters make it possible for you to get to know your neighbor. The crowd is friendly and causal, and the interesting selection of appetizers and entrées gives one ample cause for conversation. Coutre is an affable host, and together with Laurent's expertise in the kitchen, the pair couldn't possibly fail.

A prix fixe dinner, at $30, is something of a feast. You're fed three first courses: a shitake mushroom pâté, a lobster turnover and a truly winning warm salad of quail and bean sprouts. You get a choice of three main courses—pleasant with a Coq au vin, or bœuf bourguignon, or the veal with a sauce of Provençal vegetables and a sherry sauce. You have the feeling here that someone cares a lot about what he's doing. The vegetables come in a splendid combination of puréed broccoli, puréed carrots, sautéed spinach and corn. If you order la carte, you can have a fine house salad of mixed baby lettuces ($3.95) and a meticulously underdone rack of lamb in a no-nonsense presentation with natural juices and baked garlic ($9.75). Desserts are also notable, like a sensual black currant mousse cake ($4.50).

Next, there's Janot's in the heart of downtown, near Union Square. You'll find Janot's at 44 Campton Place (phone: 292-5373), in an attractive, brick-walled setting with brass trim and cloth panels. It's named for Jacques Janot, long-time owner of the Bicolor Restaurant way out on Geary. He's now teamed with chef Pierre Morin, a native of Angers in the Loire Valley. For such a small place (about 40 seats), Janot's offers a fairly extensive menu made up of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, grilled entrées, poached or braised entrées, and a large selection of house-made desserts. For a starter, you can have an excellent roulade of salmon stuffed with shrimp, mushrooms and spinach, with a basil sauce ($5.50). I would also recommend the hearts of romaine salad done with a tangy vinaigrette and grilled Foie gras over it ($4.50). A classic steak with French fries...
A STAR IS REBORN!

Meliciously restored and modernized beyond its original grandeur!

(213) 466-100 Los Angeles 1-800-423-9233 in California 1-800-858-2244 U.S. & Hawaii

The NEW
HOLLYWOOD ROOSEVELT HOTEL
7230 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, CA 90038

KIRKLAND NATURAL

Kirkland Natural is a special champagne, rare and lovingly created. Each bottle carries a registration number on the back label to document its noble lineage from harvest, to creation, to the very bottle you hold.

Bottle No. 459,727

Earn one of our Registered Deluxe Champagnes, Kirkland Natural, Blanc de Blancs or Extra Brut de Noirs. Share one with someone special very special.

Uncork the magic!

comes in a butter-fried version that I found delicious ($33). Lamb chops are served with white beans and fresh mint sauce ($15), and a seaweed dish of prawns, scallops and oysters, each molded in cabbage leaves with a tarragon butter sauce ($11). Frua a wonderful-looking dessert tray. I chose an orange-génoise cake ($3.25) made with obvious love.

Heading south of Market, you can stop at the South Park Cafe, evoking its authentic atmosphere of a Paris bistro. Located in the Financial District that's being rehabilitated with small businesses after decades of decay. The oval-shaped park provides a pleasant background for the light, airy cafe, which has been made to look very inviting, with white tiles, red tile floor and a wine bar that rises have a zinc covering.

You can sit at the bar and order from a wide selection of wines available by the glass. But food, or tapas, may also be ordered. Prawns in garlic, for example, cost $2.99. The lunch and dinner menu is the handiwork of Catherine Allsang, an exceptionnally gratifying Parisienne who is co-owner with Robert Wornoe. Considering today's high cost of food, you might not believe the prices. A substantial fish soup made with sea bass, prawns and mussels is only $7.99, though it's a meal in itself and comes, bouillabaisse-style, with a small dish of zilolot, or garlic mayonnaise. Rabbit fricasse with a lemon sauce is also hearty and satisfying, for $9.99. Roast duck with turkeys is $9.75, and grilled lamb chops are at the top of the price list for $18.50.

No wonder the South Park Cafe is doing so well. The food is prepared with flair, and attractively presented without all the pretentious that you get today. Desserts are turned out by chef Allsang, be it a tarte aux poires ($3), or a Gateau des reines, which is a coconut rum cake served with creme fraiche ($2.50).
A STAR IS REBORN!

Melissiously restored and modernized beyond its original grandeur!

(213) 466-7000 Los Angeles
1-800-423-5263 in California
1-800-859-2244 U.S. & Hawaii

THE

HOLLYWOOD ROOSEVELT HOTEL
2320 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, CA 90028

coffees in a butterflies version that I found delicious ($3). Lamb chops are served with white beans and fresh mint sauce ($5), and a seared dish of prawns, scallops and oysters coated molded in cabbage leaves with a lemon butter sauce ($11). For a wonderful-looking dessert tray, I chose an orange-genoise cake ($3.25) made with obvious love.

Heading south of Market, you can stop at the South Park Cafe, amazing for its authentic atmosphere of a Paris bistro. It's situated at 308 South Park (phone: 495-7275), in a once-fashionable residential district that's now being rehabilitated with small businesses after decades of decay. The oval-shaped park provides a pleasant backdrop for the light, airy cafe, which has been made to look very inviting, with off-white walls, red tile floor and a wine bar that does have a zinc covering.

You can sit at the bar and order from a wide selection of wines available by the glass. Bar food, or tapas, may also be ordered. Prawns in garlic, for example, cost $2.90. The lunch and dinner menu of the bar, based on the work of Catherine Allsung, an exceptionally engaging Parisienne who co-owns with Robert Worsham. Considering today's high cost of food, you might not believe the prices. A substantial fish soup made with sea bass, prawns and mussels is only $7.95, though it's a meal in itself, and comes with a saffron rice. A small dish of zillolti, or garlic mayonnaise, Rabbit fricassée with a lemon sauce is also hearty and satisfying, for $9.50. Roast duck with turnips is $9.75, and grilled lamb chops are at the top of the price list for $11.50.

No wonder the South Park Cafe is doing so well. The food is prepared with flair, and attractively presented without all the pretention that you get today. Desserts are turned out by chef Allsung, be it a tarte tatin with Peaches ($3), or a Gateau des roses, which is a coconut rum cake served with creme fraiche ($2.50).
The only coffee to go with your Danish.

The richest coffee in the world.