by Domini Impact Investments

If you're interested in seeing your money help create positive change while saving for retirement, then look for ways you can help grow your investments with your values. That's because nearly 80% of wealthy investors together have a group of investors who believe the fund invests in companies with high environmental and social standards, your next 100 investments could also have a big impact on the world.

Impact investors seek a greater green future — for themselves and for others

Any of these impact investors can tell you not only about their financial returns, but also how their investments are made. Impact investing allows investors to pursue financial returns and social change. These investments are active in both equity and debt, so they're designed to support the mission, and the financial returns, that you believe in.

Ask these questions to ensure your investment makes an impact

Can your investment really have a meaningful impact? Is it easy to understand why this has a greater green future? Impact investing works through the fund managers and the companies they invest in to pursue the environmental and social standards that they believe in.

Retire and Inspire a greater and greener world

Another consideration is the specific companies for your investments. They should be businesses that uphold the most common social and ethical standards. The fund should invest in companies that focus on outcomes, not natural gas, nuclear, coal, and tobacco mining, as well as groups that invest in tobacco, services, entertainment, or gambling.

Domini Impact Investments work with the companies they invest in to improve their performance. They're designing a way to help businesses that are aligned with investors' goals.
