

Artist Statement

Silvia Gallart is a visual artist and graphic designer based in Switzerland whose work explores how identity is constructed and destabilized within digital, emotional, and territorial systems.

Rooted in lived experiences, her practice examines how the self is shaped by structures beyond individual control.

Working at the intersection of Post-Internet Art, New Media, and contemporary visual culture, she engages with visual languages of communication—typography, symbols, maps, and digital interfaces—transforming them into fragmented and unstable carriers of meaning.

Her work is autobiographical yet indirect, translating personal experiences into layered compositions where narrative is dispersed across repetition and visual transformation.

The human face appears as a site of inscription, often merging with cartographic forms to suggest identities that are mapped, constrained, and difficult to displace.

Across her practice, images function as spaces of projection and negotiation, where fiction and reality overlap.

Recurring textual fragments such as “Thanks for the music”, “Connect – Make the Internet Real”, “Lost in Translation” and “When does a picture disappear?” function as conceptual anchors, articulating questions around communication, loss, and the persistence of images in an increasingly mediated world.
