Overview

Finicity, A Mastercard company, has several reports that help verify income and employment by looking at transaction data collected from a consumer's bank account(s). The consumer grants permission to the account(s) that should be used to help in this verification. Income and employment verification is commonly used in cases such as: applying for a mortgage, applying for other credit products such as a credit card, personal loan, or auto loan, and applying for an apartment. We recommend to lenders that deposit income should not be the sole basis for decisioning. Consumers should be given an alternative means to verify income when necessary. Offering an alternative allows for situations such as suboptimal deposit income results due to a lack of data, or if the consumer could not connect all their accounts where income is deposited, among other possibilities.

How Deposit Income Works

The lender will make a request to create a deposit income report. We then access the accounts the consumer permissioned to retrieve the transaction data. All deposits in the accounts are evaluated to see if they represent the consumer's income. Most deposits will be grouped together into "streams". Four computer models vote on whether these streams are income or not income. The result of this vote is the Confidence Score. The Confidence Score will be discussed more below, but it helps lenders know what deposits are most likely to be income deposits. Combined with other income stream information, lenders will decide if they have enough information to verify income and/or employment.

Deposit Income Report Details

The report typically includes up to 24 months of transaction data, but this amount may be less if, for example, the permissioned accounts haven't been open for 24 months or longer, if the financial institution where the accounts are located has a policy of returning less data, or if the lender requested less than 24 months of data. The core element of the report is the Income Stream.

- Income Stream: an income stream is made up of one or more deposits. Deposits are generally grouped by the name we identified in the transaction description such as the name of an employer or payroll provider. Each income stream includes a confidence score, cadence, status, length, gross income estimate, projected income for the next twelve months, and certain summary information. Transactions that are part of an Income Stream are grouped together for ease of review.
- Confidence Score: the Confidence Score is based on the vote of four computer models. These models analyze several aspects of the deposits, such as the number of deposits, length of deposit history, their consistency, and the dollar amount. Confidence Scores can range from 0-100:
 - 0-25: These scores indicate either zero or only one of the models voted that the stream represents income. A stream with this score would be assigned LOW confidence and we would not consider it income.
 - 50: This score indicates two of the models voted that the stream represents income. A stream with this score would be assigned MODERATE confidence and we would consider it income.
 - 75-100: These scores indicate either three or four of the models voted that the stream represents income. A stream with this score would be assigned HIGH confidence and we would consider it income.
- Cadence: indicates the number of dates in between deposits.
- Status: indicates if the income stream is still receiving deposits. Values can be "active" or "inactive".
- Length: This score range conveys the request has a low likelihood of return risk due to the consumer's account having insufficient funds, with a corresponding indicator value of "Highly Likely to Settle".
- Gross Income Estimate: This score range conveys the request has a high likelihood of return risk due to the consumer's account having insufficient funds, with a corresponding indicator value of "Less Likely to Settle".
- Projected Income: This score range conveys the request has a moderate likelihood of return risk due to the consumer's account having insufficient funds, with a corresponding indicator value of "Likely to Settle".
- Summary Information: This score range conveys the request has a low likelihood of return risk due to the consumer's account having insufficient funds, with a corresponding indicator value of "Highly Likely to Settle".

A Summary of Your Rights Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act

This report is an estimate of income and should not be used as a replacement for documents such as a W-2 confirming actual income. The federal Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) promotes the accuracy, fairness, and privacy of information in the files of consumer reporting agencies. There are many types of consumer reporting agencies, including credit bureaus and specialty agencies (such as agencies that sell information about check writing histories, medical records, and rental history records). Here is a summary of your major rights under FCRA.

For more information, including information about additional rights, go to www.consumerfinance.gov/learnmore or write to: Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, 1700 G Street N.W., Washington, DC 20552.

- You must be told if information in your file has been used against you. Anyone who uses a credit report or another type of consumer report to deny your application for credit, insurance, or employment – or to take another adverse action against you – must tell you, and must give you the name, address, and phone number of the agency that provided the information.
- You have the right to know what is in your file. You may request and obtain all the information about you in the files of a consumer reporting agency (your “file disclosure”). You will be required to provide proper identification, which may include your Social Security number. In many cases, the disclosure will be free. You are entitled to a free file disclosure if:
 - a person has taken adverse action against you because of information in your credit report;
 - you are the victim of identity theft and place a fraud alert in your file;
 - your file contains inaccurate information as a result of fraud;
 - you are on public assistance;
 - you are unemployed but expect to apply for employment within 60 days.

All consumers are entitled to one free disclosure every 12 months upon request from each nationwide credit bureau and from nationwide specialty consumer reporting agencies. See www.consumerfinance.gov/learnmore for additional information.

- You have the right to ask for a credit score. Credit scores are numerical summaries of your credit-worthiness based on information from credit bureaus. You may request a credit score from consumer reporting agencies that create scores or distribute scores used in residential real property loans, but you will have to pay for it. In some mortgage transactions, you will receive credit score information for free from the mortgage lender.
- You have the right to dispute incomplete or inaccurate information. If you identify information in your file that is incomplete or inaccurate, and report it to the consumer reporting agency, the agency must investigate unless your dispute is frivolous. See www.consumerfinance.gov/learnmore for an explanation of dispute procedures.
- Consumer reporting agencies must correct or delete inaccurate, incomplete, or unverifiable information. Inaccurate, incomplete, or unverifiable information must be removed or corrected, usually within 30 days. However, a consumer reporting agency may continue to report information it has verified as accurate.
- Consumer reporting agencies may not report outdated negative information. In most cases, a consumer reporting agency may not report negative information that is more than seven years old, or bankruptcies that are more than 10 years old.
- Access to your file is limited. A consumer reporting agency may provide information about you only to people with a valid need – usually to consider an application with a creditor, insurer, employer, landlord, or other business. The FCRA specifies those with a valid need for access.
- You must give your consent for reports to be provided to employers. A consumer reporting agency may not give out information about you to your employer, or a potential employer, without your written consent given to the employer. Written consent generally is not required in the trucking industry. For more information, go to www.consumerfinance.gov/learnmore.
- You may limit “prescreened” offers of credit and insurance you get based on information in your credit report. Unsolicited “prescreened” offers for credit and insurance must include a toll-free phone number you can call if you choose to remove your name and address from the lists these offers are based on. You may opt out with the nationwide credit bureaus at 1-888-5-OPTOUT (1-888-567-8688).
- You may seek damages from violators. If a consumer reporting agency, or, in some cases, a user of consumer reports or a furnisher of information to a consumer reporting agency violates the FCRA, you may be able to sue in state or federal court.
- Identity theft victims and active duty military personnel have additional rights. For more information, visit www.consumerfinance.gov/learnmore.

States may enforce the FCRA, and many states have their own consumer reporting laws. In some cases, you may have more rights under state law. For more information, contact your state or local consumer protection agency or your state Attorney General. For information about your federal rights, contact:
