Lord, should I feel guilty about being relieved I've sent Jeff out of my life?

I have tried over and over to come to terms with the way he feels about me - that being that his love for me goes beyond Christian comraderie, or brotherly love.

I have tried to keep him as a friend and brother for a long time now - you know that. But I just don't feel the same for him as he does for me and this has always made me feel somewhat uncomfortable aroud him. And now I feel relieved and more relaxed. Is that wrong? Have I outgrown him? He helped bring me to you and keep me faced toward you when I felt like giving up.

I can't help but think he used his faith to get close and stay close to me. Somehow I think he had been kinda lieing to me and using Jesus' name with alterior motives. I feel fre from that now. He has not even tried to come to my door, and for that I am grateful.

Forgive me for judging him harshly for his weaknesses. You know I have so many of my own. You also know that I am working on correcting my trespasses.

It's such hard work breaking old habits and I honestly do not want to be a hypocrit.

I crave peace of mind and heart so much. Sometimes I'm not sure if when I do feel peace after I've made a decision is your work or the deceit of the devil. I hope that peace comes from you even if I don't understand the method to the outcome.
