Churchill wanted more spending on military pensions.
The fact that Churchill made pensions such a major part of his speech shows that welfare reforms like pensions were an important issue.
Welfare reforms weren't traditionally an area that Conservatives had supported so this audience wouldn't have liked what Churchill said.
Churchill was completely opposed to any measure to bring in old age pensions.

Churchill was reluctantly in favour of old age pensions.
This source suggests that the top people in society were starting to believe that welfare reforms like pensions were necessary in Britain.
