SOURCES AND SUGGESTIONS FOR FURTHER READING

Note: Works listed in the book as references and sources are included again in this more extensive list, organized thematically, based on the topics addressed in each chapter. Personal accounts are listed separately chapter by chapter. Generally items are listed in the first chapter to which they directly relate. Many titles given in one place are helpful elsewhere, too, and the themes repeat in different chapters. By no means is this bibliography even close to complete: the scholarship is too enormous to master. To the extent possible, I have limited myself to works available in English. I included materials that influenced me or that I consider useful; this does not mean I agree with everything in them.

WEBSITES

Through the website of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, DC, one can access some of the Museum's collections of photographs, maps, documents, and oral testimonies as well as the Holocaust Encyclopedia:
