

Journal articles – finding useful material

Ask yourself,

- Is the article too general or too specific?
- Is its main focus different from the focus of your project?
- Are there restrictions (limited number of years, locations or people involved) that make it less relevant to your project?
- Does it contain useful information about the research methods employed and the practical problems involved?