Dear Mr Brown,

We are Amy and Ella Meek, two sisters who feel passionately about environmental issues which are harming our planet. We are writing to you because we are very worried about the problems caused by plastic bottles. Many people are beginning to realise that this is a serious problem. Wouldn't you like to keep your customers happy and have a positive impact on our beautiful planet?

When plastic bottles are thrown away, they do not disappear. They will be on our planet forever. The plastic used in water bottles eventually breaks down into very small pieces. These tiny pieces, and other plastic items which have been thrown away, make their way into our oceans and into our food chain. Most bottles are only used once before they are thrown away. They are thrown into landfill centres where they are burned or just left in nature as rubbish. This has to stop. Is this the planet we want to pass on to future generations?

There is an alternative. Supermarkets like yours could give customers a choice, such as selling water in cartons, boxes or cans. If you do this, we will benefit as customers and the Earth will benefit from less plastic pollution. Also, you will benefit because your customers will be more loyal to you when they see that you are trying to make a difference. Please don't leave the world with a problem that can't be fixed. Make a change now.

Yours sincerely,

Amy and Ella Meek
