"It's going to snow today so make sure you take your hat and gloves," my mother warned me as I tugged on my boots.

"I can't remember where I put my hat and my gloves are still soaked from yesterday's snowball fight," I replied.

"Well, you can't go to school without your hat and something on your hands. You'll freeze for sure," my mother declared out loud.

"I'm late mum. I'll have to just head out now without my gloves."

"You'll definitely freeze for sure!" she repeated as I dashed out the door and down the street.

"What's on your sandwich Jess?" Leah inquired as Jess unpacked her apple from my lunch rucksack.

"Don't know yet. I haven't unpacked it," Jess stated.

"Well, my sandwich looks horrible. My mum is on a hummus kick and it looks like the same thing I had yesterday," groaned Leah.

"Sorry pal. Looks like you're keeping your sandwich today. I've got my favourite - curried tuna fish on whole wheat," Jess said.
