The London Symphony Orchestra Collections on Bloomsbury Video Library

Classical masterpieces ready to debut in the classroom

From Bach, to Mahler, to 21st century composers like Soweto Kinch and Hannah Kendall, the London Symphony Orchestra Collections on Bloomsbury Video Library offer extensive variety. Stream concerts conducted by Sir Simon Rattle and Sir Antonio Pappano as well as performances featuring guest musicians Leonidas Kavakos, Gerald Finley, Barbara Hannigan, Julia Bullock and many others.

"The London Symphony Orchestra is one of the world's very best ensembles, and the chance to see them play such a wide variety of repertoire in high-quality videos is a fantastic opportunity for students studying music history and theory, as well as any of the orchestral instruments, conducting, or recording and broadcast technology for classical music."

Dr Gregory Camp, University of Auckland School of Music
