

BLOOMSBURY GLOBAL ENCYCLOPEDIA OF WOMEN IN ARCHITECTURE

Unearth the hidden stories of women who built the world

Bloomsbury Global Encyclopedia of Women in Architecture tells the untold story of architectural history from 1960 to 2015, as the authoritative reference to women architects and their work, for students, scholars, and professional architects.

Within a geographical and historical framework, discover over 1,000 detailed biographical entries of key architects from over 135 countries. The encyclopedia covers an innovative period in women's history from 1960 onwards – from when the gender bar was lifted at iconic architecture schools, to the present day.

Women now comprise half of all architecture students in many countries but students and scholars lack authoritative, globally connected histories of female mentors, peers, and forebears. The encyclopedia introduces them to the notable and overlooked women of the global built world, founding a ground-breaking new field of historical scholarship.
