

HOLLYWOOD CINEMA

on SCREEN STUDIES

Explore the films, figures, aesthetics and cultural histories that have shaped the world's most influential film industry, Hollywood. Comprised of 42 titles originally published by Rowman & Littlefield, this collection provides invaluable resources for students, researchers and scholars, covering blockbuster trends, star studies, studio-era legacies, film music, adaptation, representation and behind-the-scenes perspectives from Hollywood's past and present.

This collection covers:

- Critical studies and in-depth histories examining iconic works, major stars, and era-defining productions within Hollywood cinema
- Titles exploring how Hollywood constructs and contests ideas of race, gender, language, politics, and national identity
- Research-driven analyses of Hollywood's industrial structures, creative labour, and evolving visual and narrative techniques
- Reference titles supporting historical and contextual research
