The International Kitchen Garden will improve accessibility to the Zenger Farm site, and expand our outdoor education programs through the installation of ADA pathways and new garden space for use in culturally specific cooking education. We won't be planting the garden during the work day in September, but will be getting the site ready to grow so much food! Later in the fall, working with our Community Chefs, the garden will be planted with culturally specific fruits, vegetables, and herbs.

The future International Kitchen garden.

We'll be building raised beds for our Farm School Garden too. Farm school students have 3 seasonal outdoor education experiences (class field trips) at the farm, increasing student access to nature and learning a ton of science. With the installation of these new raised beds, this is the first year Farm School students will plant crops in the fall, harvest in spring, and share with their schools!

The future Farm School Garden.

Day-of projects will include:

- filling ADA pathways with gravel
- compacting gravel
- building raised beds
- filling raised beds with soil
- sheet mulching in the Farm School garden (cardboard and wood chips)
- meeting new people who like to spend time at the farm too!
