End of life

Care and compassion when families need it most

End of life

Comfort Keepers® provides more than just in-home care. Our specially trained caregivers, whom we refer to as Comfort Keepers®, provide compassion, moral support, and help around the home during especially emotional situations. Comfort Keepers provides loved ones with a level of care that helps preserve their dignity and provides a quality of life that can only be achieved at home. We are also there to provide support for family and friends coping with the emotional challenges and additional time commitment inevitably associated with this situation.

Reliable support with a caring touch

There are many dimensions of support a family requires when caring for a loved one living the last days at home and coping with many emotions. Whether it be emotional support or practical household duties that can't be put aside, Comfort Keepers provides the help families need, either full-time or as needed. Our services complement the care provided by hospice or medical care professionals, and often include the following:

- Emotional Support—companionship, meaningful activities, conversation, or moral support for clients and family members
- Personal Care—bathing, feeding, dressing, toileting
- Household Needs—cooking, light housekeeping, laundry, grocery shopping, errands

Supporting families every step of the way

For over twenty-five years, Comfort Keepers® has built its reputation on providing responsive quality care and sensitive support to families. Our specially chosen Comfort Keepers develop close relationships with clients to help meet all of their care needs. In-home care, especially in hospice or other care situations, requires flexibility in the services provided. We strive to help family members maximize their time with a loved one and ease the daily burden of extended care so they can attend to matters in their own lives. Comfort Keepers tailors your support program to respond to the requirements of each family or situation. We continuously communicate with family members, hospice, or other care providers, adapting care and services to the client's changing needs.

Our caring continues during and after difficult times

Should families need support after loved ones pass, we can continue to help them deal with the grief and many of the tasks they will face. From consolidation and organization of personal items to moving belongings or just being there for the family to talk to, we are there to help lighten the burdens a family may feel. Because Comfort Keepers is flexible, we adapt our services to meet individual needs.
