Phuket, Thailand

This provincial capital of 75,000, on the biggest Thai island is both a delightful destination in itself as well as a jumping-off point for some of Southeast Asia's most spectacular scenery. Phuket's Old Town is a new revelation to most visitors, a smorgasbord of history and culture that ranges from cafes, museums and temples to religious shrines and a former Red Light district. The island is also known for its spectacular beaches, including Surin, Kamala, Patong and Karon, and for Phang Nga Bay's emerald green water which is lined with rugged limestone rock formations.

Stay Healthy on Vacation

Guests are strongly advised while in port to take precautions when eating and drinking in local establishments. In particular, guests are advised to refrain from fresh juices and food sold from local sidewalk vendors and drink only bottled beverages. Although norovirus mostly causes just a few days of sickness, it is responsible for millions of infections every year and is notorious for its ability to evade control. In the United States, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention say norovirus causes 21 million illnesses a year, with 70,000 cases requiring hospitalization. To stay healthy, simply wash your hands thoroughly with soap and warm water after rest room breaks and again before eating anything.
