AUTUMN 2024

When the mercury starts to drop, I must admit, I love it. The cooler months signal a wonderful shift in the way we dress, entertain and look after ourselves. We put away those throw-on summer staples and acclimate to layering up; we swap the cast-of-thousands barbecues outside for a cosier, more intimate setting indoors; and we nourish our skin after the eat-beach-sleep-repeat cycle of summer. Let's relish in the joy of autumn/winter: a time to reset ourselves and our homes.

I like for both myself and my space to feel considered and well put together, so I guess you could say I'm an investment shopper. I spend a long time evaluating each purchase and am constantly reworking the master wish list in my head. Items that are welcomed into the fold must tick the boxes of quality, functionality and style. More often than not, I lean towards items that are classic, but with a twist – whether that be a unique silhouette or perhaps an interesting colourway.

So, with my 'investment shopper' hat on, this season I'm looking to our Trend Report (p19) and coveting a tailored suit, a chic pair of sunglasses (that aren't black!), a structured handbag and the perfect ballet flats. For my home, I'm dreaming of some designer glassware – something fabulous with clean lines but great colour – to toast at dinner parties now and in years to come. As for my beauty routine, as I get older, I understand the importance of investing in my skin (p68), so I'll replenish my La Prairie, update my Chanel make-up – and, while we're here, perhaps treat myself to one of the season's key pieces: a new Tom Ford fragrance (p94).

I knew this shopping business would be dangerous. But all of these items tick those non-negotiable boxes of quality, functionality and style. They're classic yet contemporary; pieces that I will enjoy wearing and using in years to come (tick, tick, tick). Perhaps it's also worth checking my husband's master wish list (for ideas, turn to JONES Man, a new menswear destination, on p115).

This issue is absolutely bursting with style inspiration. I can't wait for you to discover the best the new season has to offer – to buy now and love forever.

MATERIAL GIRL

Australian designer Katie Kolodinski launched her label with a handful of '90s-style silk slips. Almost a decade on, they remain key to her collections at Silk Laundry, a brand described as being "untouched by the influence of trends". Now available at David Jones, its transeasonal Uniform 2024 collection has the makings of the perfect capsule wardrobe, with silk separates that work for the office and beyond.

WHITE HOT

Posse's 'Emma' vest in ivory has been hard to come by since Sofia Richie Grainge was spotted wearing it during her wedding celebrations in the south of France. The daughter of Lionel and sister of Nicole, Richie Grainge teamed the vest with a matching skirt by the Australian label, plus a Chanel bag and silk hair ribbon. The good news? The cult buy has just landed instore at David Jones.

RAISE A GLASS

While china is the traditional gift for 20th anniversaries, Viktoria & Woods is marking the occasion with what it does best: elevated essentials, fine merino wool and a bespoke logo. The new releases are dedicated to the V&W woman. “We want to keep her modern and evolving,” says founder and creative director Margie Woods. Expect new pieces as well as iterations of Woods’ signature styles with “a beautiful fabrication and quality, and tones that will be appreciated for a lifetime”.

ON YOUR TOES

Nothing skyrockets an accessory to icon status like the approval of a fashion muse. And while Parisian footwear label Repetto and its ‘Cendrillon’ shoes were given a head start – they were created at the request of Brigitte Bardot in 1956, after all – the original ballet flats continue to shine in the spotlight of modern tastemakers such as Hailey Bieber. And now you can get the brand’s signature ultra-soft leather and studio-to-street versatility at David Jones.

COUNTRY CLASSICS

Country Road’s timeless silhouettes, muted colour palette and heritage logo have defined laid-back Australian style for decades. So for the much-loved brand’s 50th anniversary, it’s celebrating with a collection of elevated leisurewear. Featuring time-honoured pieces crafted in quality Australian cotton, it’s a reminder that Country Road’s classics never go out of style.

CALIFORNIA STARS

LA label Staud has won hearts in its home town, with Kendall Jenner and Dakota Johnson among its celebrity fans. And now, it’s never been easier for Australians to get their hands on the joyous, vintage-inspired goods, as the brand makes its debut at David Jones. Expect a mix of classic cuts with novelty beadwork and plenty of It-girl accessories.

NEWS

GENTLE MONSTER sunglasses, $460.

AT FIRST SIGHT

Korean eyewear brand Gentle Monster continues its global domination, with the cult sunglasses now available at David Jones. Bold silhouettes, tinted lenses and cool collabs (Maison Margiela, D'heygere) are the brand's calling card – no wonder they've been spotted shielding the eyes of Beyoncé, Gigi Hadid and Chanel Iman.

CURVES AHEAD

The iconic 'Diana' dress, cast in all-new silhouettes and high-shine metallics, sets the tone for this season's dramatic Norma Kamali collection, available at David Jones. Ever since the asymmetric, shirred style first appeared in the '70s, it has been embraced by – and embraced the curves of – women the world over, among them Carrie Bradshaw in And Just Like That... At the age of 78, New York-based Kamali shows no signs of slowing down, having once again produced a collection that is full of timeless, sophisticated pieces that prove luxury can still be accessible.

JEAN—IUS!

Good jeans are life-changing. Great jeans that make the world a better place? Even better. Melbourne-based label Nobody Denim has insisted on taking a more ethical approach to fashion since its founding in 1999. Now it has its sights set on doing even greater good, having joined the Outland Denim group. The enterprise operates a fair-wage production facility in Cambodia that gives vulnerable workers access to a career path, education and personal-enrichment programs. Sounds like a good fit.

STAR POWER

AFTER A HUGELY SUCCESSFUL
MODELLING CAREER,
CHARLEE
IS EMBRACING HER SECOND ACT: ON THE BIG SCREEN.

PHOTOGRAPHY JORDAN DRYSDALE
STYLING KATHERINE GREEN

Charlee Fraser and I are speaking at that time of year when people reflect on the 12 months gone by, but the model-turned-actor has always had more reason to than most. With her birthday falling on one of the very last days of the year (Christmas, in fact), she has long adopted the practice of taking time to reflect on all that she's done and achieved – and 2023 was nothing short of remarkable.

"I think that's something we potentially don't do enough of. We're constantly living in the future, comparing ourselves to other people's journeys and their achievements," says Fraser, back on this side of the world after attending the premiere of her debut film, Anyone But You, in New York. "Since I've started to just solely sit and think about what I've accomplished in a year, or the things that have fulfilled me or maybe not fulfilled me, or what I've learnt, I've actually really enjoyed it. I'm able to acknowledge and appreciate and be grateful for myself and everyone else who I've been able to encounter or go on a journey with or get to know or meet. It really makes you feel like you've lived a fulfilling year."

It's difficult to fathom some of the years Fraser has had to ponder at the age of just 29. In 2016, largely considered by the fashion industry as her breakout year, she walked 40 international autumn/winter shows, including Prada, Balenciaga, Chanel, Dior and Givenchy. "I worked really, really hard and I learnt a lot about myself, my boundaries and what I'm capable of as a person, as a human being," she shares of the whirlwind season. "When I reflect on that time, it's like, 'Holy shit. I did that.'"

That season – and the notable campaigns, shows and covers that Fraser has featured in since – take on added significance when considering that she is the first Indigenous Australian model to forge a successful international career. The Awabakal woman is quick to acknowledge the many brilliant Indigenous artists to come through before her, while expressing gratitude for her accomplishments that allow her to represent her community. "I take that on as well with a lot of honour and a lot of pride, and I carry that really, really closely with me on my journey," she says. "It's something that I'm always thinking about with everything I choose to do. Culture is always on my mind and at the forefront of a lot of my decision making."

Fraser recalls her return to Australia in 2020 after four years living in New York, when she quickly assumed the role of ambassador for First Nations Fashion and Design (FNFD), mentoring an all-Indigenous cast for the launch event, a runway showcase in Far North Queensland. "I'm constantly reminding myself that even without an objective towards culture, everything I do represents that," she says.

Two years after that first mentor role with FNFD – and after walking exclusively for Australian Fashion Week's first all-Indigenous show in 2021 – Fraser was appointed to the board of directors. “I take a lot of pride in that. I just hope whatever I’m doing, whatever I choose to do, continues to inspire everyone, and especially my culture, and just keeps paving the way.”

She adds: “I think the thing for me with First Nations creativity that I would like to share with everyone is that it’s there, it exists, it’s powerful and it tells a story. And that relates to all First Nations creativity across the entire spectrum, from art to dance to fashion – everything we create is powerful and tells a story. It’s how we share a lot of our knowledge and our history and our experience. It’s how we connect to the earth, the land.”

As far as memorable years go, 2023 will no doubt be referred to as the one that launched Fraser’s acting career. Securing a titled character role in a major Hollywood production as a new talent is no mean feat, but that was just the beginning for Fraser. “I feel very blessed to have had the experience of modelling before acting because I wasn’t camera shy,” she says when asked about the move between the two artforms.

“I feel well developed in taking direction – I emulate a type of characterisation with modelling.”

In Anyone But You – a romantic comedy starring Sydney Sweeney and Glen Powell as Bea and Ben, who pretend to be together for the duration of a destination wedding – Fraser plays Margaret, Ben’s beautiful, confident and fun-loving ex. It was a character she loved getting to know.

“The thing that I found about her that I deeply wanted to explore was that she had this sense of shamelessness, and I found that really empowering and really powerful and something that I don’t feel may be a common experience for a lot of people or even myself,” Fraser says.

A listen to the Spotify playlist that she used to ground her portrayal reveals self-love anthems such as Miley Cyrus’ ‘Flowers’ alongside all-out, good-vibrations songs such as Beyoncé’s ‘Cuff It’ and Menna’s ‘Sex In Public’ (Fraser would listen to the playlist each time she was about to step onto set). “To be truly, authentically yourself and in many moments, to have a shamelessness about being yourself – I thought that was a really, really cool thing to have found with her and experience with her and then explore with her,” she says.

Fraser shares that when director Will Gluck cast her, he said he was looking for people who were very much their characters, giving her cause for self-reflection. “I really loved my journey with Margaret – going in and finding parts of myself that are Margaret, and truly leaning into what Will said and believing him, and believing in myself that what he said is true and taking that on,” she says. “Like, he’s holding up a mirror and saying this is you and I had to believe that and accept that and be like, ‘Okay, I am that. So what do I need to do to truly believe that about myself?’”

Days before our interview, Fraser took to Instagram to post the movie trailer for Furiosa: A Mad Max Saga – the upcoming instalment of one of the country’s most successful movie franchises. The post contained no comment of her involvement, but most tellingly, her voice narrates the introductory seconds of the clip. The film follows the journey of a young Furiosa (played by Anya Taylor-Joy), and while details surrounding Fraser’s character cannot yet be disclosed, it’s safe to say from the dystopian nature of the series that it will be a stark departure from the relatable Margaret.

So did Fraser most enjoy drawing from her own likeness? Or inhabiting a character presumably nothing like herself? “I actually really loved doing both. What I did find is that you kind of need to do this as an actor – well, I feel like I need to do this as an actor...” she corrects herself. “You need to find how you connect with every character, whether they are created and imagined or whether they are set in reality. That’s your job as an actor, to find how you connect with them. I loved the experience of both, because I found that you find aspects of yourself in both.”

As she looks ahead to the coming months and all the possibilities yet explored, Fraser is gearing up for another big year. First, all the other avenues that feed her creativity, which she intends to devote more time to in 2024: her continued involvement with FNFD as well as the Clearly Music, Art &

Wellness Festival, a wellness and community-centred event that Fraser co-founded, and which held its inaugural event this past November. “None of those things I necessarily manifested for myself,” she says. “But I was just open and excited to get into the new year and take on whatever opportunities came through the door.”

Then there is, of course, the prospect of roles yet to come. Unable to land on just one dream role, she ponders aloud the experience of playing a fantasy character, being the voice of an animated character or a Bond-type action woman. “Maybe there’s another Charlie’s Angels in there somewhere?” she says, laughing. “I’m starting now, I’m going to put it out there into the universe.” Wherever the year takes her next, we’ll certainly be watching.

OFF-DUTY BALLERINA

She never misses a beat. She never has a hair out of place. In the pursuit of perfection, she is always on point. Her skin is radiant, accented by a flush of rosy powder and a dab of pearly illuminator; lips painted in a dusty, glossy shade of pink. Once her rehearsal hair is released from its slicked bun, it's swept back with a grosgrain bow.

As the sun sets, you'll find her circling galleries with a glass of wine in hand, the bright lights reflecting off her shiny hair. EARTH MOTHER

Her mantra?

Less is always more.

She doesn't spend more than five minutes in front of the mirror; instead, she embraces the natural charm of her freckles. She reaches for multi-tasking make-up hybrids, favouring skincare-infused tints, dew-inducing blushes and hydrating lip balms. And all she needs in her hair is a few drops of a nourishing hair oil or serum.

MODERN MINIMALIST

She takes to the pavement in an oversized white shirt and undone waves, with her make-up inspired by her drink of choice, an oat latte. GOOD HAIR DAYS, THREE WAYS

GET YOUR DREAM HAIR WITH A FLICK OF THE WRIST.

From the original trusty hair straightener to the high-tech blow-dry brush sweeping your social feed, ghd's styling tools are the perfect way to up your hair game this season. As the brand lands at David Jones, here are three hair trends to try.

WORDS

BOMBSHELL BUTTERFLY

Big, bouncy and brushed-out curls are back. But thankfully this time around, you don't need to fuss with velcro rollers to get the look. Instead, wrap small sections of dry hair around the smoothing bristles of ghd's hot brush and use a diagonal, downwards motion to curl hair away from the face. Finish by holding the tool horizontally and wrapping your bangs up into the brush for the butterfly trend's signature fluttery volume and face-framing pieces.

SLEEK AND BLUNT

The ultimate change is the ultimate chop, so start by cutting in a chin-length bob. Whether you prefer to style it straight or create soft, textured bends, try the new Chronos straightener, which uses HD motion-responsive technology and ultra-gloss floating plates for even heat distribution and smooth hair in one pass.

FLOWING LENGTHS

Take your cue from the 'quiet luxury' trend by prioritising thick, healthy and glossy strands. The trick is to treat your hair like silk with the gentle two-in-one ghd Duet Style. By simultaneously drying and styling wet hair at a low temperature, this hybrid tool gives the body of a blow-dry and shine of a hair straightener without the heat damage.

THE HOME OF AUSTRALIAN BEAUTY

We might not have the 10-step routines of K-Beauty or treasure trove pharmacies of the French, but our homegrown brands are the masters of no-nonsense yet extremely effective skincare. In anticipation of the new beauty floor launching at David Jones Bourke Street in April, we round up the hardworking local brands to add to your repertoire.

ULTRA VIOLETTE

Invest in the future of your skin by finding an SPF you love and wearing it every day. Start by trying this sunscreen innovator's lightweight and fragrance-free all-rounder.

ULTRA VIOLETTE Fave Fluid SPF 50+
Ultralight Skinscreen 75ml, $52.

LIBERTY BELLE RX

Don't let the playful product names fool you – Liberty Belle Rx is respected for its high-performance and results-driven skincare. Just like the brand's triple vitamin C brightening serum suggests, these luxury formulas will take your skin to the next level.

LIBERTY BELLE RX Next Level Tri-C Brightening Serum, $144.

RATIONALE

By understanding the effects of genetics and environmental influences on skin ageing, Rationale has pioneered skin-identical formulas and high-tech treatments for lifelong radiance. Try a weekly application of this vitamin C-dosed mask and unlock brighter, more luminous skin.

RATIONALE #2 The Mask, $232.

WELLECO

Following her personal wellness journey, Elle Macpherson set out to transform others from the inside out. It all started with The Super Elixir greens powder, and now there are tailored supplements for every beauty and health goal.

WELLECO The Super Elixir Original 300g, $88.

ULTRACEUTICALS

This clinically proven skincare powerhouse is known for its active ingredients. Case in point: the triple-enzyme Dynamic Night Activator³ complex, which supports skin's renewal in a rich night cream.

ULTRACEUTICALS Ultra DNA³ Complex
Recovery Night Cream, $150.

PERSON

ACCORDING TO THE STUDY OF AROMACHOLOGY, FINDING YOUR SIGNATURE SCENT GOES DEEPER THAN SIMPLY IDENTIFYING ONE YOU LIKE.

Discovering your signature scent isn't something you can set out to do. It's a stroke of alchemical luck; a mercurial alignment between your fifth sense and your brain's 'aromascape', where subconscious autobiographical connections are made and emotions are stored.

Aromachology – the scientific and data-driven study of olfactory psychology – has long proven that scent has powerful physiological and emotional effects. Some smells trigger a rush of memories, immediately transporting you to a very specific, very long-ago moment. Some trigger an instant shift in your mood, for better or worse.

You can try to base your signature scent on what's trending or what you think the most aspirational version of yourself would want to wear, but a fragrance that doesn't match gets pretty unbearable pretty quickly.

When it comes to choosing your ultimate scent, you actually have very little say in the matter. You're not in charge here.

Understanding which scents you're inherently drawn to, though, can make uncovering your perfect match a little easier. There are plenty of theories about why we are attracted to certain scents over others. One of the more interesting ideas emerged in 1984 when two psychologists at a German university explored how personality traits could influence scent preferences. They found that women with extroverted tendencies preferred fresh notes, which they reported as having a stimulating effect on their minds and bodies while matching their sociable personalities. More introverted women leaned towards amber notes, declaring that the heavier and more complex fragrances gave them a sense of increased individuality and confidence.

In 2023, pheromone perfumes went viral on TikTok, racking up close to 30 million views. There's an element of truth in the trend: a 2001 study found that people subconsciously choose fragrances that enhance or complement their natural scent, while a 2022 study found that we can actually sniff out personality traits on other people's clothing.

The prevailing theory, however, is that our signature scents are determined by external factors such as culture, lifestyle and family, as well as internal factors such as personality, memories and emotions. Chances are that the fragrances you're drawn to come from the same scent family – floral, oriental, woody or fresh – because they resonate with you on a physiological level. Until we're about 10 years old and sight takes over, smell is our most developed sense. Emotion and smell are processed as one memory and the bank of scent preferences we create as children will remain for the rest of our lives.

By understanding which fragrances you're drawn to and the emotional and physiological effects they have on you, you can harness the mood-enhancing powers of different scents for different moments. In this way, your fragrance collection can be used like secret potions to increase your confidence, alertness or ability to self-soothe and relax. Your signature scent becomes your superpower.

SKIN

Don't feel like painting on a full face today? Neither does Pamela Anderson. The former Baywatch star debuted her beautifully bare face at spring/summer 2024 Paris Fashion Week, embracing her natural radiance with a beaming smile and charming confidence. It's a reminder that how we look and how we feel are closely intertwined.

As Eleanor Pendleton, the founder and publisher of Australian beauty authority Gritty Pretty and Friend of David Jones, explains: "We are only as beautiful as we feel. Looking beautiful is one thing, but if we don't feel it inside – physically, emotionally and spiritually – then we can't be our best, healthiest selves."

Whether finding inspiration in Anderson's fresh face, comfort in our skincare or confidence in a swipe of our favourite lipstick, beauty is a powerful act. Also an ambassador for Look Good Feel Better, Pendleton has seen this first hand. "For women undergoing cancer treatment, it can be confronting to stand in front of the mirror," she says. "But these women are warriors, and sometimes skincare, make-up and a wig are their armour."

Since its first Australian workshop in 1990, Look Good Feel Better has supported more than 150,000 people through the physical, psychological and social impacts of cancer treatment. At Pendleton's first introduction to the community service program a few years ago, she says she was instantly moved by the women she met. "You could sense their anxious energy and many had already started losing their hair, lashes and eyebrows. They were understandably not feeling like themselves – their deep connection to their femininity had been challenged," she shares.

But over the course of the workshop, Pendleton describes how these women came out of their shell. "They were connecting with other women fighting their own battles as they applied skincare, learnt how to do their make-up and tried on scarves and wigs," she says. As they emerged from the workshop, "They were like butterflies."

Just like we use beauty to transform ourselves, the beauty industry transforms our routines. Case in point: skincare-make-up hybrids. This new guard of skincare-dosed make-up combines the skincare benefits of actives such as hyaluronic acid, vitamin C and ceramides with the back-to-basics approach to make-up of the past few years. And it's shaping up to be one of the most significant beauty trends of the decade.

The newfound focus on complementing – not concealing – what were once considered imperfections is a breath of fresh air after years of heavy bases and contouring. Now's the time to try a sheer, hydrating skin tint and let cheeky freckles shine through. Or to pare back your beauty routine and embrace the fingers-first application of these foolproof make-up formulas.

While trends bounce between bare faces and artfully applied make-up, one factor will remain solid: our relationship with beauty will always be intimate, emotional and empowering. "As women, beauty is intrinsic to our femininity, our confidence and our sense of self," says Pendleton. "It isn't to be considered vain or trivial – it's so much deeper than that." And most importantly of all, it's on our own terms.

"LOOKING BEAUTIFUL IS ONE THING, BUT IF WE DON'T FEEL IT INSIDE, THEN WE CAN'T BE OUR BEST, HEALTHIEST SELVES"
