

Youthopia Centre

Co-funded by the European Union

The primary objective of this project is to develop a deeper understanding of forum theatre as a tool for enhancing self-awareness, fostering critical reflection on society, and building mutual understanding between cultures. This objective will be achieved by providing participants with opportunities to explore their abilities through non-formal education methods, including theatre-based activities and simulations.

As part of the project, participants will collaboratively prepare and present a small forum theatre performance for the local community, creating a space for dialogue, reflection, and active audience engagement. In addition to forum theatre, the group will also experiment with other methods and techniques inspired by Theatre of the Oppressed, encouraging creativity, empathy, and collective problem-solving.

Throughout the project, young participants will gain valuable skills and competences that are not usually addressed within traditional school curricula, yet are essential for their personal and social development.

Number of participants: 5 per country Age: 18-30
