LEARNING THE ROPES

by Julia Carrasco (State Historian)

For all the new members of TSA--we have all been there; trying to learn all of the events, meeting other teammates, or even understanding what STEM even is. Although it may seem a bit daunting to get your first foot in the door when starting your events, keeping yourself on a schedule and interested in technology is pivotal for success. Use TSA as a learning opportunity to discover what you value the most in STEM and attempt to pursue that passion to the fullest extent possible!

GET YOURSELF INVOLVED

by William Reisner (State Secretary)

Beyond the ordinary competitive events each TSA member competes in, there are so many other ways to deepen your involvement with this organization. As the 2023-2024 TSA season begins, consider applying to one or more of our state committees, or even to be one of their vice-chairs. Run for chapter office, or brainstorm new ways to increase your chapter's membership. And, if you think you're ready for it, consider a possible state office campaign for this year's state conference in April. However you choose to apply yourself, we're excited to see what you do!

SENIOR SEASON

by Charlize Amper (State President)

This is for all my fellow seniors out there who are competing in their final year in TSA. Whether you have been a member since middle school or just joined this year, end your TSA career with a bang. Compete in a new event, go that extra mile with a project, apply for that scholarship, or become a chapter officer. Aim to make so many fun memories this year and leave that legacy behind before you move on to bigger and better things!

KEEP THE POSITIVITY GOING

by Haley Mosorjak (State Reporter)

When your TSA season starts you will feel excited to get started on things. I promise by mid-year right before regionals you are going to feel stressed, tired, and just not ready to do anything. To all the TSA members; keep your head held high and keep going! Do not give up, you got this!
