ABOUT THE VOLUME

The growing prominence of commercial transactions and cross-border trade has increased the need for efficient and effective dispute resolution mechanisms. Arbitration and mediation have emerged as vital tools for resolving commercial disputes due to their flexibility, confidentiality, and time-efficient nature. With significant legislative reforms and judicial developments, India is steadily strengthening its ADR framework to align with global standards. This edited volume aims to explore contemporary issues, emerging trends, and practical challenges in arbitration and mediation in commercial matters. The volume intends to foster meaningful academic and practical discourse on the future of commercial dispute resolution in India and beyond.
