PRESS RELEASE

Doctolib acquires MonDocteur

The two European ehealth champions join forces to accelerate the transformation of practices and hospitals

- Doctolib acquires MonDocteur, one of the European leaders on the online medical booking market. Created in 2013, MonDocteur employs 150 staff and is one of the most successful startups in France. The company was so far owned by its 3 co-founders and Lagardère Active.
- Thanks to the acquisition of MonDocteur, Doctolib consolidates its position as the largest ehealth company in Europe. With 55,000 doctors and 20 million patient visits per month on its website and mobile app, the new group is now the most popular platform for online medical booking in the world.
- Stanislas Niox-Chateau, Doctolib co-founder and CEO, writes in a post published today on the company blog: "We are bringing our teams and skills together to increase our strength and accelerate the transformation of practices and hospitals in Europe". Read the full blog post here.

Doctolib and MonDocteur, an excellent fit

Doctolib and MonDocteur have been contributing to the transformation of the French and German healthcare systems since 2013. Over the past five years, they have developed an essential service and daily tool for patients and doctors.

Doctolib and MonDocteur offer doctors and hospitals a software solution with a full range of services to improve the efficiency of their organization, provide their patients with a new high-end experience, grow their activity and develop their cooperation with other doctors. They provide patients with a complete service to find a nearby doctor and hospital, book appointments online 24/7 and manage medical bookings.

Doctolib and MonDocteur both share:

- a common vision to create the practices and the hospitals of the future and to improve the patient carepath, healthcare access and patient health management;
- a common method consisting of working closely with doctors and hospitals everywhere in France and Germany, providing them with the best service possible.

Thanks to this acquisition, Doctolib and MonDocteur aim at:

- bringing their teams together and accelerate their growth;
- providing doctors, hospitals and patients with a more comprehensive software solution and new services;
- consolidating their leading position in the European ehealth market.

The new group will include 100% of MonDocteur and Doctolib employees : 600 people today.

Doctolib: the largest ehealth service in Europe

With 20 million patient visits every month on its website and mobile app, the new group is now the most popular platform for online medical booking in the world.

Thanks to the acquisition of MonDocteur, Doctolib consolidates its position as the leading ehealth company in Europe. The new group now works with 55,000 doctors and 1,200 healthcare facilities.

Doctolib has a growth plan structured on four main axes:

1. Accelerating its French expansion;
2. Accelerating its German expansion;
3. Creating new services for doctors and patients;
4. Taking a full leadership position in Europe.

The group will boost its recruitment to grow to 1,000 people within the next two years. It will triple the size of its technology team, aiming for 250 engineers by 2020 in its two technology centers in Paris and Berlin.

Stanislas Niox-Chateau, Doctolib co-founder and CEO, said: “Our missions have been the same since day one: making our healthcare system more human, efficient and connected and building a company of several thousand people sharing the same humanist values. Joining our forces with MonDocteur will enable us to invest more in our products and services and, above all in our teams. This is the very beginning of the adventure.”

Creating the practices and hospitals of the future and improving the patient experience

The new group will now play a much more active role in the transformation of the healthcare system in France and Germany.

The acquisition of MonDocteur is an opportunity to bring together teams with a renowned expertise in digital health and a track record in transforming usage.

The new group will accelerate its developments in two ways:

- creating the medical practices and hospitals of the future - more human, efficient and connected;
- improving the patient care-path and access to healthcare, while reducing waiting times.

In this perspective, Doctolib will release innovations in the coming months, in partnership with the healthcare professionals and facilities using its services.
