PRESS RELEASE

La Camelerie at the 2026 Paris International Agricultural Show

On the occasion of the 2026 Paris International Agricultural Show, to be held at Paris Expo Porte de Versailles, La Camelerie will once again be present with its dromedaries and team, giving a voice to an innovative agricultural sector that is still underrepresented but fully aligned with the contemporary challenges facing French agriculture.

Based in Feignies, Hauts-de-France, La Camelerie has been developing a structured camel farming sector in France for nearly a decade, built around dromedary breeding and the valorisation of their products, particularly camel milk. This pioneering project operates in strict compliance with French and European sanitary, regulatory and environmental frameworks, and is founded on a demanding approach to animal welfare, traceability and territorial integration.

The 2026 edition of the Show, held under the theme “Generations of Solutions”, strongly resonates with La Camelerie’s approach. The dromedary embodies a concrete agricultural solution to today’s climatic, food and economic challenges: a sober, robust and resilient animal, capable of producing with limited resources and fitting into sustainable livestock systems. Through this species, La Camelerie explores complementary pathways to traditional livestock farming, contributing to agricultural diversification and territorial resilience.

La Camelerie’s participation in the Paris International Agricultural Show goes beyond the presentation of animals. It aims to offer a comprehensive and educational perspective on the camel sector: its agricultural potential, food-related opportunities, sanitary constraints and the conditions required for its development in France. Camel milk lies at the heart of this approach, illustrating the ambition to structure a high-value product, internationally recognised, whose development in France requires rigour, transparency and institutional support.

A long-standing exhibitor at the Show, La Camelerie reaches a pivotal milestone in 2026. This edition reflects the desire to go further in presentation, knowledge sharing and dialogue with professionals, institutions and the general public, at a time when the adaptation of agricultural models and food sovereignty are central to public debate.

By highlighting the camel sector, La Camelerie seeks to demonstrate that French agriculture can also be shaped by emerging, territorially rooted projects capable of providing pragmatic and responsible responses to the challenges of tomorrow.

Julien Job

13, rue Roger Salengro 59750 FEIGNIES -- Tél : 0(033)6.83.51.62.46
www.lacamelerie.fr julien@lacamelerie.fr -- siret 44922700800025