

Rudolph gift wrap

Who's that peeking out at us? Rudolph! The friendly face with the famous red nose will particularly thrill young kids. This is a fun idea for a craft activity to brighten up the pre-Christmas period, too.

How it's done:

1. First wrap up your present in the brown wrapping paper. Copy the antler templates with a color photocopier and cut them out (or just make them out of brown paper).

2. To make the eyes, punch out a couple of circles from black paper using a hole punch. Stick them on using the glue stick. You could also cut out eyes by hand, or paint them.

3. Below the eyes, stick on the pom-pom as the nose. Use the craft knife to make a little slit in the gift wrap along the front edge where the antlers should go.

4. Fold over the ends of the antlers by about ½in (1cm), dab a bit of glue onto both sides of the folded-over ends, stick them into the slit in the paper, and press them into place.

⌚ 5 minutes per present

You will need:

- * brown wrapping paper
- * templates (see pp132–133)
- * scissors
- * black paper
- * hole punch
- * glue stick
- * 1 red pom-pom per present, ½–¾in (1–2cm) in diameter
- * craft knife

