

Benjamin Grazda

Benjamin Grazda is the advocacy manager at Reporters Without Borders USA, where he supports efforts to defend press freedom and freedom of expression in the US and globally. Previously, he worked at Access Now, advocating for internet freedom in repressive environments and against unregulated technology in conflict. He has also supported whistleblowers in exposing corporate misconduct, and worked for humanitarian organizations in Kenya, Nigeria, Iraq, and Syria. Earlier in his career, Ben served in the U.S. Senate. He holds a master's degree in Conflict Studies from the London School of Economics and Political Science and a bachelor's from American University.