Serge Schmemann

Serge Schmemann is an editorial writer with The New York Times, focusing on international issues. He was for many years a foreign correspondent with assignments in South Africa, the Soviet Union/Russia, Germany, Israel and the United Nations. He was for ten years the editorial page editor of the International Herald Tribune in Paris, and before that deputy foreign editor of The Times.

Mr. Schmemann was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1991 for coverage of the reunification of Germany, and an Emmy in 2003 for his work on a television documentary about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. He holds a A.B. from Harvard College and an M.A. in Russian studies with a Certificate from the Russian Institute at Columbia University. He was awarded an honorary doctorate by Middlebury College.

Mr. Schmemann is the author of a book about Russia, Echoes of a Native Land: Two Centuries of a Russian Village, and a book intended for high-school students, When the Wall Came Down: The Berlin Wall and the Fall of Communism. He resides with his wife in Washington, D.C.