Ambyint Culture Story

In pursuit of their goal to create a cutting-edge and inviting space that resonates with clients and investors, while fostering a sense of belonging with their employees, Ambyint turned to Kimball International to help bring their vision to life.

In line with their position as a leading pioneer in AI-powered optimization for the oil and gas industry, Ambyint's new U.S. headquarters in Houston needed to appeal to industry partners, clients, and investors while also differentiating them as a fun, innovative organization. Partnering with WHL Spaces, a Kimball International dealer partner, and AV Interiors, a Houston-based design firm, Ambyint set out on a journey to create a transformational space that conveyed their values and mission. Recognizing the significance of environmental considerations, particularly in their industry, the organization places great importance on sustainable practices. In addition to valuing strong relationships and high-quality products, their commitment to sustainability was a primary factor in choosing Kimball International as their preferred furniture manufacturer.

“We were looking for a furniture solution that accomplished our goals. The entire space needed to encourage collaboration, make a statement about our innovative yet stable market position, and simply be a place where people wanted to work.”

Chris Robart, president of Ambyint.

Focused on relentless innovation and creative exploration, Ambyint closely identified with the Trailblazer culture, one of Kimball International's five identified culture types. To meet its workspace design goals, the organization carefully considered the space types and design elements chosen, prioritizing spaces that would enhance the connection, community, comfort, and choice of its workforce. To achieve this, they strategically incorporated various space types tailored to meet the diverse needs of their employees and spark creativity and collaboration.

Trailblazer Culture Design Considerations

Settings that balance hybrid schedules and support individual focus.

Settings that foster planned and impromptu connections with co-workers.

Work Your Way spaces, comprised of private offices, open workstations, and touchdown areas, were designed to accommodate a spectrum of workstyles, empowering employees to choose environments that best suit their immediate needs and personal preferences. With the blending of departments in the new space, Kore benching and Joya task chairs were selected to eliminate barriers, help people stay inspired and productive, and better connect them to their work and each other. A polished yet industrial touchdown space was also created using a Fixt table and stools to encourage group interaction and problem solving.

In line with their culture of continuous inquiry and dynamic collaboration and to help attract new clients and investors, Ambynt integrated a variety of tech-savvy Meet-Up spaces to enable physical and virtual interaction. In the formal meeting room, Theo conference chairs were chosen to provide comfort and mobility during important discussions. Narrate shelters were used to create two multipurpose meeting spaces in the open plan, featuring Theo chairs and Joelle ottomans to provide comfort and inspire creativity.

Recognizing the importance of defining their brand and culture, Ambynt incorporated welcoming Culture Café spaces to cultivate social connections and idea sharing. A vibrant town hall gathering area, representing a Hub space that fosters a shared sense of purpose and cohesiveness among employees, was achieved through the use of Pairings, Dock, and Nash stools.

To enhance the overall sensory experience and stimulate creativity, Ambynt incorporated elements of biophilia, bold patterns, and pops of bright color to make the space feel modern and fun.

Through the collaborative efforts of WHL Spaces, AV Interiors, and Kimball International, Ambynt has successfully crafted a new headquarters space that not only embodies beauty and functionality but also serves as a catalyst for innovation, where every employee feels like they belong.
