Storied in the Details.

Originally built in 1918 as the Seattle Engineering School, the MarQueen Hotel is steeped in history, evolving from an early automotive training facility to residential apartments before becoming a hotel in 1998. Located in Seattle's oldest neighborhood, the MarQueen draws travelers seeking authentic experiences rooted in character, charm, and a strong sense of place.

Inspired by the building's layered past and Prohibition-era spirit, the guestrooms and public spaces were designed to feel warm, vintage, and residential. Rich burlwood finishes, warm wood tones, and bold textiles anchor the interiors, balancing comfort with intrigue while reflecting the eclectic energy of the era.
