The City of Montgomery is the capital of Alabama and home to 210,000 residents. The Montgomery metropolitan area, known as the River Region includes Autauga, Elmore, Lowndes, and Montgomery counties with a population of 350,000. Montgomery has a diverse economy comprising state government, healthcare, automotive manufacturing, education (the city is home to eight colleges and universities), tourism, Maxwell Air Force Base, the Gunter Annex and military contractors.

Montgomery's magnet public schools consistently rate among the best in the nation. The city is a cultural haven with two professional dance companies, a symphony orchestra, the world's sixth largest Shakespearean theater and the Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts. Fine dining, diverse shopping, nationally recognized sporting activities including Montgomery Biscuits AA baseball and the Raycom Camellia Bowl, and more than 60 city parks contribute to Montgomery's great quality of life. In 2014, USA Today readers voted Montgomery the country's Best Historic City and the National Civic League honored Montgomery as an All-America City.

Birmingham, Alabama, Atlanta, Georgia, many recreational lakes and the most beautiful Gulf beaches in the U.S. are within easy driving distance of this modern, southern city.
