2013 REPORT TO THE REGION

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Our numbers tell the story

I am pleased to share this Report to the Region with the community. While residents know Oswego Health as the area's healthcare leader, they may not realize the significant role the health system also plays in the region as an economic engine and major employer.

During the previous year, the health system had an economic impact of more than $171 million on the region. Oswego Health is also the largest private employer in Oswego County, according to Oswego County Business Magazine's 2013 Business Guide. Just as impressive is the fact that 85 percent of our 1,200 employees reside within the boundaries of the county. These employees are also important economic contributors to the region as they spend their paychecks locally and pay an estimated $3.6 million in property taxes to local municipalities.

While Oswego Health certainly realizes the significance of its financial impact on the community, it's our physicians, board members and staff that make the most important contribution to our community, as they ensure exceptional healthcare is delivered each and every day.

In this Report to the Region, you will read how the care provided by our highly knowledgeable and trained staff has impacted the lives of community members. Some of these stories are quite moving and I hope you enjoy reading them.

I also hope that if you ever need healthcare services that you will choose Oswego Health. We strive to provide not only exceptional physicians and clinical staff, but also the most advanced equipment and facilities, so residents can receive excellent care close to their homes.

Strong Leadership, Quality Care

Oswego Health's physician leadership team has quickly embraced new roles, developing initiatives that are successfully improving the quality of compassionate care delivered to each and every patient.

At the start of this year, Allison A.N. Duggan, MD, F.A.C.S., was named Oswego Hospital's Vice President and Chief Operating Officer, while Renato Mandanas, MD, assumed the title of Oswego Health's Chief Medical Officer.

In the short months since this announcement, as they advance and personalize the level of care in a cost-effective manner, these physician leaders are also meeting the many new demands placed on healthcare. Remaining as key priorities are physician retention and recruitment, along with placing the best technology in the hands of the many dedicated healthcare professionals who work at Oswego Health.

These strategic improvements to local healthcare are assisting Oswego Health achieve its goal of becoming the community's healthcare provider of choice.

Life-saving Care in the Emergency Room

After an intense workout, Ron Nelson, a paramedic for the Oswego Fire Dept., knew he didn't feel right and realized while he may not be experiencing the typical symptoms, he was having a heart attack. "I knew Oswego Hospital would provide me with prompt definitive care," Ron said. "When I arrived at 5:50 p.m., I told them I thought I was having a heart attack. At 6:09, I was in full arrest. The physician and staff delivered the life-saving care I immediately needed."

Oswego Hospital's highly trained emergency medical physicians and registered nurses are prepared to immediately care for patients suffering from heart attacks, such as Ron's, as well as all types of illnesses and injuries.

Early Detection, Peace of Mind

One of the most important tests women over the age of 40 undergo is a digital mammogram, which can detect breast cancer.

When Mary Lou Heintz, of Oswego, underwent her yearly mammogram this year, she found Oswego Health's Technologist Lynn Mieczkowski very caring, professional and thorough. "This can be an uncomfortable test and Lynn put me at ease immediately," Mary Lou said. "She listened to my concerns and went out of her way to alleviate them."

Two hours after her mammogram, Mary Lou received a call from the medical imaging department informing her that the scan was clear. "I appreciated the quick response and within a few days, I also received follow-up letters from both the hospital department and my own physician."

Oswego Health provides digital mammography screening at several convenient locations, including Oswego Health Services Center, the Central Square and Fulton Medical Centers, and the Pulaski Health Center. For an appointment for your digital mammography exam, please call 349-5540.

MEDICAL CENTER

Quick Response at Fulton Urgent Care

Jerry Stanard is counting his blessings these days. It's very likely that a trip to the Fulton Urgent Care Center saved his life.

After experiencing his second severe headache in two days, his wife, Barb, decided he needed to go to the Urgent Care Center at the Fulton Medical Center. When Jerry arrived, he was triaged and when examined it was determined that his symptoms required use of the facility's computed tomography (CT) scanner.

Jerry said it was 20 minutes after the scan that he received the news that most people don't live to hear. He was experiencing a life-threatening brain hemorrhage and was transferred immediately to a higher level of care. Following three weeks of specialized hospital care, Jerry is back home enjoying his family and his gardens.

"The level and promptness of care at the Fulton Urgent Care is allowing me to tell my story," Jerry said. "The staff was phenomenal and second to none."

Central Square Medical Center

Not only are the staff members at the Central Square Medical Center committed to providing exceptional care, they are also committed to their community as well. During the past year, the staff has supported several local events that include:

- Apple Fest (pictured above)
- Happy Days senior luncheon at Brewerton United Methodist
- Memorial Day Parade
- Central Square Little League, where they sponsor a team, the Angels.
- Patriot Run
- Vanderkamp Senior Health Fair

Oswego Health: Who We Are

Our healthcare organization first began delivering care in 1881 as a six-bed hospital on West Fourth Street in Oswego.

Since those humble beginnings, we have evolved into a health system and have continuously added programs and services to meet the ever-changing healthcare needs of the region. While we all know that a “system” is an arrangement of parts, and that their interconnections come together for a purpose, what defines a health system is that its function is concerned with peoples’ health.

The Oswego Health system, as the definition states, has many services and programs that together provide the region with a variety of healthcare services. This diagram illustrates the various parts that make up the Oswego Health system.

Oswego Hospital

Oswego Hospital is a 164-bed, full-service facility that has been caring for the health needs of the region for more than 130 years, offering Emergency, Acute Medical, Surgical, Maternity and Behavioral Health services. Our many departments include Laboratory, Medical Imaging, Physical Therapy and Occupational Health, among others.

Central Square Medical Center

Offers Urgent Care, Medical Imaging, Lab and Physical Therapy services.

Fulton Medical Center

Provides Urgent Care, Lab, Medical Imaging, Physical Therapy and Occupational Health services.

Oswego Health Home Care

Oswego Health Home Care is the only hospital-based certified home health care agency in Oswego County, providing skilled nursing, therapy and personal care services. It is owned by Oswego Health and is managed by St. Joseph’s Hospital Health Center.

Springside at Seneca Hill

Springside is a premier retirement community for active adults, aged 62 and older. Offering a lifestyle of convenience, comfort and security in one- or two-bedroom apartments, one-story duplexes or cottage-style homes.

The Manor at Seneca Hill

The Manor at Seneca Hill is a 120-bed skilled nursing facility that also offers short-term rehabilitation and an adult day health services program.

Oswego Health, Inc.

Not-for-profit holding corporation established in 1997 that constitutes an integrated, comprehensive healthcare system.

Healthy Living Program at Springside

Oswego Health is helping community members learn how to better manage their chronic health conditions, such as arthritis, heart disease, osteoporosis or diabetes by offering an evidence-based program.

The free, six-week Healthy Living program, developed by Stanford University, covers nutrition and exercise, as well as how to get support, deal with pain and fatigue and talk with your physician and family members about your condition.

Participants learn goal setting techniques and establish a step-by-step plan to improve their health. Teaching the class are individuals who have undergone specialized training that is required in order to be a program instructor.

"I found the Healthy Living class very educational, helpful and fun," said Arlene Townsend. "The class materials that includes a book you can keep, are great resources and easy to follow."

Oswego Health has a third class session under way, and expects to offer more workshops later this year. If you are interested in taking part in the Healthy Living Workshop program, please call 349-5513.

Complete Rehabilitation Program

When Joyce Duvall, of Scriba, needed a rehabilitation program after hip surgery, friends told her the facility that offered the best program was The Manor at Seneca Hill. "I had family members and friends tell me The Manor was where I needed to be and I just can't say enough about the staff, the facility and my care," Joyce said. "This is just a wonderful facility."

Each year, more than 200 community members recover from an accident, stroke or surgery utilizing The Manor's complete rehabilitation program. The Manor's staff can provide physical, occupational and speech therapy.

Along with its acclaimed rehabilitation program, The Manor offers exceptional skilled nursing care and an adult day health services program. To learn more about The Manor and its offerings, call 349-5300 or visit oswegohealth.org.

GOLF TOURNAMENT 2014

Pictured at the start of this year's Golf Tournament are Chair Pete Cullinan, Oswego Health President and CEO Ann C. Gilpin and Oswego Country Club Head Professional Jon Fowler.

Thanks to the 100 golfers who participated in Oswego Health's 27th annual tournament held on June 2nd at the Oswego County Club, Oswego Health was able to raise $120,000 toward new imaging technology. This year's tournament benefits the purchase of new Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) equipment to be located inside Oswego Hospital's state-of-the-art medical imaging department.

"This new technology is cutting-edge when it comes to depicting and clarifying diseases of the brain, spine, liver, pancreas, kidney, uterus and other soft-tissue organs," said Kevin Kain, manager of the department. "I thank all our golfers for supporting the purchase of this technologically-advanced equipment that will be of great benefit to residents."

Like any successful golf tournament, work began many months ago. Overseeing the tournament for many years has been Peter Cullinan. "It's great to see the tournament come together that morning," he said. "From starting with an empty course at 6 a.m. to seeing the sponsor signs in place, the golf carts in use and the food and drinks ready, to the golfers having a good time at our 10 a.m. shot gun start."

Assisting Cullinan is a dedicated committee, which includes community members and employees. In the months leading up to the tournament, they complete many behind-the-scenes tasks ensuring a smooth-running event. Oswego Health thanks both Pete and his committee who truly make this event a success each year.
